ON THE TAPE

12 PHOBOS LIMBO PROGS IN SPACE

This is our seventh YC Top tape and we've got three excellent games that have only ever been published before on our sister title Computers Disk User (priced £2.75 from the place you bought this - is that plug gone enough Paul?), although only ever on disk. Now tape users get a chance to play original games of such a high quality.

FEATURES

22 THE PERLS OF PROGRAMMING

Do you want to be a programmer, but you've got no cash, no talent, and no game... Er, I think you've got a problem.

49 PAINTING THE TOWN RED

The FC team take on a bunch of 'collegiate team crap' at Ribbit's twisted paintball extravaganza.

MURDER - The Cover game, and a standingly good one in fact. You get a chance to wander around an Edwardian Mansion questioning people about their love lives, eating habits, favourite activities, and movements (seriously, it's a bit like doing a company profile).

KENNY DALGLIGH SOCCER MATCH - Could this be the best football game ever? ... No not a chance. If you want a good laugh look at the screenshots and you'll be rolling around on the floor for ages to fit like an Italian Footballer.

But First This..

Did you notice that something was missing in your lives for just one month? Was there a big gap? Did you wander around with your job going open in a dull mindless? Well, I can solve your mystery illness with a few select words, "we missed a month". I hope that's answered your queries, no more letters to Arthur C. Clarke, "But", I hear you cry, "Why?"

Go and look at the masthead, and in particular the address. Go on, I'll wait here... Turn... Turn... Te... Tammmers... Right, notice anything different? Yes, we've evolved, no more Heralds Heralds for us roving reporters, no more, hello Milton Keynes, and hello new publisher, "But" you say again, "This will delete" answer why you missed a month?"

Ah, but it does, you see we had so much stuff to move that it took Ashley absolutely ages to pack, clean, and unpack everything. I almost felt sorry for him as I sat at my spanking new desk looking at, mind you the RESPCA club phone a few times about cruelty to animals, but I assured them that Ash enjoyed the work. Next time he'll just have to get a bigger car.

So amongst coffee chats, and bubble wrapping we come to you yet again with a more Milton Keynes sort of mag, and if you don't enjoy it, the same knife-edge less violence is applicable.

THINGS TO COME

A look at tomorrow's new releases - yesterday.

It's 1988, it's cool and it's a strike for SUBS, justice and the non-1000 American way (SMOKE STONES) is a rather new approach to the problem of drug abuse. The president of America has authorized an FBI-LCS-DOJ-AOS plan to wipe the drug barons from the Earth's surface. Armed only with your wits, lots of stoney ammo and the plan, you must attempt to do just that. What's a game so concerned with cold should be released in August but there you are. Available from US Gold at 9.99-on cassette and 14.99-on disk, hopefully as you read this.

Pokey games seem to be clearing up as the new release front currently. Just because Conquest didn't quite make it to the store in its early days doesn't mean they shouldn't be in it. Look out for Subtle Fudge coming your way soon - Godish Games. Apparently the programmer is trying to make the game funny to test so if it's too hard when they release it you know who's doing!

Following on the huge success of their first program RAMMERT, Stefano's classic design team (and fringe all-working-on-1000 team) has. The new releases around the only developer Puma, who has in go back in time and after his classic Robotics are marketing the product, which will be double as strong as his RAMMERT. As usual, 9.99 and 14.99 respectively.

The long-awaited SHREKLEAF will soon be available from the Physical label. This 3-D action shoot 'em up has been around for ages on 16 bit computers and PC owners would the best have been impatient for yours. You'll only have to play for another couple of weeks. There you can struggle to your health's content. The original made ELITE's graphics look staid as you can expect the sequel to knock them into last century.

Shoot 'em up come and shoot 'em up go. They don't actually, because the most popular type of game since the year-dot is still being re-released, repackaged or re-released in the hope of pleasing the fans of the genre (and getting some more stock out of them). The latest re-re-release to appear on the list of the horizontal-shooting, cut-throat-ice-graphics, blow-em-to-bits, look-out, it's-an-end-of-level wonder is POWER UP from Impressions. And jolly good it looks too, if you are to believe everything that the software houses say about their games (which of course you shouldn't but it looks good anyway).

Autogames Software have been terribly busy lately. As well as our EXCELLENCE review the issue of RAMMERT SMOKE STONES DISC, we can now reveal another great game coming your way in the shape of HESTER HESTER. He, despite the potential for a far-sighted simulation, it's got nothing to do with consuming lots of popcorn then throwing it up on various odd rules. No, the game involves balls. Where have I heard that before? Well, this particular ball has nothing better to do than kill lots of monsters. More next issue. Also from the Hamsters comes their first ever arcade classic, EXTREMADIS. You have to do a suburban area from an attack of nasty insects. Both coming soon.

That's what with POWER UP, shooters are getting almost as much attention as before. This announces PIRE & FORGET is THE DEATH CORNWY. Guess what? It's the plot of an all-powered combat machine, which basically gives you a chance to kill, maim and smash as many people as possible in as short a time as possible. Who said it's too good and meaningful? And why should it be any less simple? And the end result? It results an amazing fifteen - yes fifteen - musical scores, 3-D graphics and fast animation. So what's new? Coming soon.

Electronic announce a license with the old arcade king Universal's produce home computer versions of the classic MIDWAY. As this game was my personal all time favourite, I hope for their sake that they do a good one. The two Mr. Del has to run around mazes, eating cherries, smashing points, pushing apples and monsters' heads or if that doesn't work, shooting them with his crystal ball! Good clean fun on the run, I for one can't wait to see it. More time too! More see Electronic.

QUICK THINGS - A ROUND UP OF SLIPPERY RELEASES DUE WITHOUT REASONS OR DETAILS

Microcomputer THE, Milano GRAND II... Autogames DOPE... Newsoids REARRANGE and the EXCELLENCE COLLECTION. Proton ATHEAT SCORER... Micro WAX TO THE FUTURE II and TRAIL, BATTLE... Chameleon LITTLE MILLIONS... US COMBAT STRIKE... Electronic Collector's Item... the top best from the arcade machines that they will be converting, so now your brethren really can look like an idiot!

WELCOME TO THE NEW LOOK YC

As you may have noticed, YC has undergone major surgery, and the team think that it is a darn sight more 'user-friendly'. We are the only GB4 dedicated games mag, and we're jolly well proud of it too. This is a new era for the magazine with bigger whatists than any other, so with a new publisher, the concrete splendor of Milton Keynes, and a few NEW members of the YC team forget the (yawn) other rags and you'll get more than you could possibly have wanted from us!!

CRUISE INTO THE SCENE

Watch out gillies, Tom's here, although there's absolutely no need to stick your fingers down your throats as there is a game coming based on his exploits in his latest film Days of Thunder.

Days features the exploits of our Tom as he strives to win the ultimate Stock Car race at Daytona, and the Comedy GB4 version will be written by Textex Ltd., famous for the excellent Italy 1990. It should be available around October, a short while after the film's release.

THE CROWD GO BANANAS

Krisalis, the company that put Yoo into Manchester Yoonited, is to hit us with another footy game in the shape of John Games (well, probably in a box-sort-of shape really, but you get the grasp of it).

The England man, who has only more season left on his Liverpool contract, will be roaring into your shops around the start of the footy season.

ARTS' SPARKS (AND BODY PARTS)

Rainbow Arts, the company behind the two excellent hits X-Out and Turrisan, is at it again, but grab for the bucket as its latest is a new step in the sickeningly cute wave.

Apprentice is a platform game with a touch of adventuring to be done, all in the mold of the Japanese style arcade games. The hero this time is a small wizard who must progress from level to level solving doofers, and unlocking cojamaflips. It is all done in the nicest possible way and we at YC are waiting in eager anticipation to see if it's any bit as good as Rainbow Islands and Pimbo's Quest (the cornerstones of the genre).

LEISURE SUIT LARRY HITS THE BIG TIME

Erstwhile industry personality, and hairy dude, Larry Sparks has been promoted to European marketing manager of Activision (UK) Ltd. This comes as no surprise although YC wonders if he'll still be doing his tea round in the Reading based offices.

With three boots on his official game shoes he can't get a foot right. The wonderful Barnes soon to hit the computer mood.

ES*

TWO DOWN (BUT WITH INJURY TIME BEING PLAYED)

The major shock of the computer world (for the minute, anyway) was the recent demise of both Tynesoft, and Grandblam. Both companies have had their ups and downs in the way of releases and both have felt the bite of a particularly savage Spring.

This means that neither company will release any impending titles, although Thalton (the German based company, whose sales and marketing were being performed by Grandblam) is to continue to release product in this country through US Gold. And Horrosoft is currently seeking another company to take over the sales and marketing for its Elvira game.

Our immediate concern though is, who's going to run the charity footy match this year, eh?

MOORE OF THE SAME

To continue the tradition of game releases featuring Britain's best loved (and more promiscuous) spy, Domark has The Spy Who Loved Me coming out in September. There is some nostalgia attached to this one as it was the first Bond movie that Rik see in the cinema, and even then, apparently, the projector broke down and he got his money back after only seeing the first half. The game though, should not be as tragic considering the track record of recent Bond games, although those who remember A View to a Kill may tread a little lightly.

CHEATS ALWAYS PROSPER

Hot Shot Entertainment has launched a new way for you to spend uncanny amounts of dough, in the way of one of those 0033 numbers. This one though could be the lifeline of many a stuck gamer.

The MegaTip GameLine promises to deliver the hot secrets of the latest games, although it will cost you 25p per minute at cheap rate and 30p per minute at any other time.

We'd recommend that you use our Scum of the Earth pages to find out the solutions to your probs, it's a lot cheaper, but if you're adamant (Not if your Adam Ant) by trying 0033 2090388. There'll be a report in a later issue about lines like this.

THROUGH THE KEYHOLE...

The first YC reader to guess correctly the games company whose office that these shots were taken in (jokes are jokes) will win loads of goodies (£50 worth, good), send your entries to: Gov. What a Glibby Office Compd, YC, Alphavite Publishing Ltd., 20 Potters Lane, Kim Farm, Milton Keynes MK11 3HF.

CALLING OUT FOR A...

Here's a new compilation that features two great games, one mod/dope, and a steaming pile of poo if ever we saw one. It'll leave it for you to decide which bit beware of AustrianTM musclemen with unbelievably long summaries.

Containing Licence to Kill, Barbarian II, The Running Man, and Star Wars, the Commy 64 version will set you back £14.99 for the cassette version, and £19.99 for the disk.

THE DREAM TEAM

As into the hot without the news? How do they think they are telling you what games are good, and what's not? Well, you may of have outrageous fantasies?

We don't know the answer to the last one, but here's a guide to the reviewers...

His "Pinot" Henderson - Editor

His favourite kind of game-like thing is undoubtedly body management games. He does test the occasional body wear management game too, and he has been seen spending alot of time on Don City and a few of the other shoot-em-ups. He loves rating games, and everybody should know to wait before send in their work when he's doing so.

Ashley "Muffin" Collier-Coleen - Games Editor

There isn't a game on this page that he's would want to bring back at, and every game seems to be his personal fave. He used to own a monitor, but claims that he's a PC better since he used him as the main computer workstation/monitor. How he spends a lot of his time playing the same game, "War".

Security "Miss Mages" Gardner - Contributor

Security is an old school from Starquake and Demarc, so she knows what's going down when it comes to games. Good games seem to be good more than her usual reviews, and she'll spend-one-one occasionally work out why.

THE SCOREBOX

Each game is given different ratings in the form of a wonderful handy statistic (which the change either from 1 to 5) in order to make it even more fantastic.

- 1 Excitement level of 100 - This is what we think the games looks like presentation wise and graphically.
- 2 Excites level of 100 - Does the music grab? Do the sound FX come across as realistic?
- 3 Fun Factor level of 100 - This is what we think the instant appeal of a game is like. Does it grab your attention straight away? Or is it too hard to get into?
- 4 Multi-Life level of 100 - How long will the game retain your interest? Minutes? Hours? Days?

Overall level of 1000 - This is the personal rating given by the reviewer of how good they think the game is.

00-00 - This game is so stupid that the only reason anybody would ever want to see it is for novelty sake.

00-50 - Incredibly dull, and not interesting in the slightest. Watch Millions and War and you'll get the general idea of what this takes about.

00-75 - Not too awful, and probably somebody's cup of tea, although we'd rather stick to our toes.

00-80 - A good game with some going for it. But needs a little more to make these ones out in the shop before you buy them.

00-85 - So hot and top immediately, these games are hot, so hot in fact that you'd be done for taking them into a non-smoking area. Any game getting this score are announced as PC/Fan favourites. The PC best of recommendations.

So you've had the game but you're still sitting, and only game to ever get this result is the best that anybody could ever do in the company HQ. You'll know when a game the good comes around because all the games all the players in the world would wonder around and bump into lamps and things.

US GOLD -

RIK extracts his breast pocket and searches for clues in this latest gritty-game from the Brewery Company.

I've always had my doubts about sleuths like Jessica Fletcher, Hercule Poirot, and even dear old Miss Marple, because everywhere they go there seems to be a murder. If I had my way, I'd look them all up and the world would be a jolly safer place, but then there'd be no mysteries to solve, and we can't have that, can we?

In fact there is nothing quite like a good bit of sleuthing and murder anymore this. It is a game that takes the idea of Cluedo and expands upon it dozens of times, so much so that the game contains nearly 3,000,000 different murders and solutions (lots of endless nights nothink). This is due to the options page at the beginning of the game. In a newspaper-like display you can change the date of the murder, the name of the house, the type of house and the difficulty level, each one has an effect on the murder itself. You can also choose the features of your main sleuth, in photostyl fashion, but the only effect this has is to come up with a name for you.

Yuck!

Sweery Todd was best known for his so-called 'pork' pies. It was later discovered that the secret ingredient had made them so tasty were unsuspecting customers that visited his barber shop for a trim round the back. The police finally discovered his scam when a pork pie was found containing the ring of a missing person.

All the controls in the game are run by joystick, via handy icons scattered around the screen. Even movement is done by moving your pointer (put it away Jenkins) to your destination and pressing the fire button. Pressing the space bar however changes your pointer into a magnifying glass, which allows you to examine objects and people on the screen. If you come across an item that you think is of particular interest you can dust it for fingerprints. If you find one, you can store it in your fingerprint file and even wipe the object clean afterwards, which allows you to wait until somebody else picks it up and be filed under Bertie's personal file, Mrs. Singbuckler's, the victim's, and even under clues.

Depending on what sort of building you have chosen you can wander around it at free will, exploring any room you feel necessary and cross-examining any people. There are, generally, different floors to be visited, and so that you therefore getting their fingerprint.

You can also question the guests and staff in the house by pointing your spy glass at them and selecting the Question icon (makes sense really). This brings up a new screen with more icons on it, and using a small amount of swapping and changing you can get them to tell you all that they know about everybody, everything, and everywhere. Each answer that they give, if you deem it interesting, you can store in your notebook, which once filled up will have every piece of information filed in different categories. For example if Mr. Bertie Benkinsop said that Mrs. Hilda Singbuckler was blackmailing the victim, then that information would

When you feel you know what the murderer with it, this will result in the newspaper showing up again with either congratulations for the super sleuth, or a story announcing your suspect's innocence. If you fall through, you can always choose that same murder again as they are not random.

Murder Is Immaculate in presentation, and the black-and-white graphics for the movement screen create just the right atmosphere. This is not everyone's cup of tea, due to the complexity of each separate murder, and even the simplest one will take a fair while to suss-out correctly, let alone 3 million of them. For those though with more intelligence than a piece of popcorn, and are willing to use it when they play games, this is THE game to play. Murder could well be the top game of 1996.

MANCHESTER UNITED

MANAGERIAL - £9.99 Tape,
£14.99 Disk

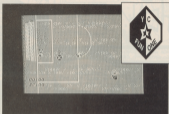

You may be wondering why a Liverpool supporter like IKK is reviewing a game with Man Yoo as it's title. So is he...

I dislike Manchester United as a football team, I remember seeing their 3-1 win over us on New Year's day 1989 and since then I've despised the way they play. There are also many others like me, and this makes the move to have a game solely for the one club, and to be forward any club, baffling as it always is to many game players.

That said, most Liverpool, Man City, Arsenal, etc. fans should not judge a book by its cover as this game is definitely the most playable football game to hit the stands. It is a dual game, and a rather unique one at that, in the fact that it combines the action aspect of most forty games, and the managerial side in an even more complex way than the great Football Manager if I'm talking about the game, and certainly not Alex Ferguson, and when both are combined it's pretty hot stuff.

The management section is the first to load and contains more features than a lot of games that offer this sole aspect. It is all loan driven, and all controlled via the joystick, thus making life a lot easier for the real Man Utd supporters (YC would like to apologise to all Manchester United supporters, if you'd like to reply to IKK's preceding above write to First Apocalypse). There are icons for training, fitness, transfer market, team list, newspaper headlines, and other options that help make this half of the game fully complete. And once everything has been chosen (including making the team abilities for the opposition a little lower than your own) it is off to the other side of the tape and the match itself.

Once this has loaded, and it doesn't take long, you have the chance to either watch your team's performance under the far better control of the computer, or you can participate yourself. The gameplay is

When the match is over, it's back to the management section to perform your tasks all over again. There is the full first division to play home and away and both the FA and Littlewoods Cups, making it a long term project, especially for Cassette Lovers. I was more than impressed at the whole package and I would recommend that any fan of football should give this game a whirl, and like our good friend Willy said "A coin by any other name can still get a good cross in!"

ON THE TAPE

And so the seventh tape did come to pass, and the readers did rejoice, for there were not two mega stinking good games (like other "free" cassettes) on other C64 mags) but three, and all of them never seen on cassettes before. (Nippel Hoorah!..)

Running Order:

Side A: Phobos, Limbo, Side B: Frogs in Space.

PHOBOS

Here you are, a harmless wing of a guy that controls a walking/flying machine. So what's wrong with that? Well, unfortunately you're locked away in jail "X".

Now for some people this might just be free, but not for you. No alien, your only intention now is to break out and regain your freedom. In order to achieve this task you will have to negotiate four levels of aliens, which get more and more vicious the further you go.

The screen is split into two different views, the top one being from overhead and the bottom being seen from the side. In order to destroy an alien you must align both top and bottom views of your craft to the approaching little sucker.

On level one you must destroy 20 aliens, 30 on level two, 40 on level three, and (et...) 50 on level four! When you've managed this awesome task, you have succeeded in breaking out. Whenever you start a fresh level, remember where you were transported into it (both top and bottom). This is where your trail will be.

There are no "lives" in the normal sense, but every time you hit an alien or a bomb, your score will reset to zero and you will start again (on the same level). To stop playing, simply press the "RESTORE" key and the title page will appear. When you restart you will start from the level that you quit from, but with a score of zero.

Controls:

Joystick control changes slightly depending on whether you are flying or walking. If you are walking, joystick left moves your top screen man up

(ie. to the right). Joystick up moves your bottom screen man up to flying position.

If your bottom screen man is already flying then joystick up and down change slightly. Joystick up moves your bottom screen man higher and faster, and joystick down makes your bottom screen man low height and slow down or land. (I, like All, you are a games-playing mega-god that you will find no-proos with the above controls. Those of us firmly rooted to mother Earth will nod to perservere a tack.

LIMBO

This is NOT a dance simulator but a steamingly good arcade/shooting number, so plug your joystick into port two (that is the second port) for footy hooiganery and wibble it around a bit. If you don't get you anywhere so you'll probably have to think a little too.

The idea of the game (are you sitting comfortably) is to clear all of the cells of each screen by moving your steel over them. You can also take your chances by activating question mark blocks, some of which are good, but some are pretty much proes.

The game is dead simple to play as all you have to do is clear each zone of cells whilst avoiding the guards and "dangerous" blocks. On some screens there is a lift that will carry you to other parts of the zone. To board it simply press fire when you are touching it and release fire when you want to get off. The first lift appears on Zone 1 and is represented by a spinning disk.

Other Blocks

Other than the cell blocks there are the

FROGS IN SPACE

GREAT GAMES

FROGS IN SPACE

Alright, we admit it! This is not the most original game in the galaxy, but then again neither is Knock Down Ginger or 'kneeling grandma-out-of-bed', so they call it soap-Martin, but we've all played it some time, and to be honest it was quite funny too.

Now Frogger has donned a space suit and he's back to his old ways in the vast, busy space lanes. And this time there's no girl waiting at the other end.

To get the little amphibious star traveller back to his teacher (and you must firstly avoid all the interstellar traffic, and then catch a lift in order to guide him into each of the cooey cobby holes at the top of the screen).

Apart from clogging all the space traffic, and timing jumps to high life to perfection, there are other hazards! These include combinations of four variations of spacecraft formations, a Pan-man in the central reservation (sluggo fed on a diet of sea frogs), and the usual increase in traffic speed and the amount of time to reach home.

Your score will increase by 10 points when you top forward, it will also increase for every unit of time remaining when a frog reaches home. There is also a chance to gain extra frogs by collecting the letters to spell the word BOMBS on certain levels.

There are 32 levels to complete. You may start on any of the first 10, level 0 being the first, level 31 the last.

There is also a hidden access code to enable you to play on ANY level, and the first correct one to reach us will win a few top games.

Following:

Teleporters - The first of these appears on screen 3 and is represented by a block with a smaller flashing block in the centre.

Question Marks - To activate one of these move to its centre and press the fire button. A number of these can happen including: Slide, Speed Up, Droid, Slow Down Droid, and Warp to the Next Level. Question Marks can also change into other blocks.

Smiling Face Blocks - Touching one of these will give you an extra life.

Skulls - Touch one of these and you lose some life-force.

Level 7 sees the introduction of disappearing blocks.

The game will end when your life-force has run out. When you are losing life-force the two squares in the bottom border will flash.

Oh dear, oh

POK lifts himself

off the floor, dries his eyes, and tries to contain his game ever?

Yes! I saw this on the 16-bit computers a while back and I didn't think that it would ever come out on the Verney $4. Not because it used their capabilities to the full, but because it was so dire. Unfortunately Impressions had to do it and could have ruined it's reputation forever. Kenny Dalglish Soccer Match is, to be completely frank, a complete pile of wisnary poop.

And these words do not come game has loaded, because a specy-like pic of a grinning Kenny (previously before he'd seen the game) greets you and offers you the options of play. Or option I should say, because the speed and difficulty levels seem to have little effect on the playability, and I have no doubt that anybody on this planet would be stupid enough to play this game at 45 minutes each half. There isn't even any fancy extras that allow you to play a full league in order to lightly from my finger tips, I'm a Liverpool supporter and have been for around twenty years. When I was at school days, them were the days (ah!) Kenny was my undoubted hero, and I even had a number seven stitched to the back of my rather fatty 'goal shirt, in a sort of worship. But his name has been added to the worst soccer game ever, and it makes me sad to think that other Dalglish fans might engage in this game, thinking it to be as good as the man himself.

Alas this is not so, and your tears will be raised even as soon as the emulate the champions. No sir, the next it offers is a four player tournament, although I have no idea why three of your friends would want to partake in your personal agony.

But once everything is chosen it is here that Kenny's takes the piss out. Men appear in a rain-deserted tuff of grass, looking as if they'd fallen into a car washquail and been roost out as mistlequain lamps. Also instead of an arrow at the head of the player in control, like most footy games, Impressions has plumped for an upside down cross. I think somebody should mention to them that this signifies satanism, and is the mark of the devil, I even thought of playing the tape backwards to see if there was some form of hidden message.

And then the match begins and the players (your players anyway) plod around trying to control the ball,

The leading ref blows his asthmatic whistle because the ball's gone off (in the cinema) stuffed out a cigarette on fire. If you have misjudged it and the ball goes off for a goal kick, then a job of a bold ref with a skin disorder will appear with a sound much like a heavy breather blowing through a reed. And that's about it.

One other thing about the gameplay though. As I was the reds (and therefore the mighty Liverpool) I let my Bruce have a crack at the action, and why not, the opposition weren't going to stop him. This was when I discovered that you can only have one goalkeeper on screen at one time, so when he finally arrived at the goal (guard) the keeper keeper had mysteriously vanished leaving an empty net.

And oh how I laughed when my side had won 12-2 and Kenny's quick message came up on screen. I don't know if it's just me but when he said "A magnificent game" I had to quickly rush to the toilet.

and falling most of the time, although it really doesn't matter as the opposition seem unable to decide which way to run, let alone challenge for the ball. The easiest way to score a goal, and just about the only way as it is almost impossible to kick the ball in the direction you want, is to log it forward with the ball ahead and run it into the goal. This will result in a picture of Kenny celebrating, and a howl that sounds as if someone has Hammerhead is a game set in a punch, fire or pistolist (as Hammerhead), kick and fire-fax (as well with a little practice (and mental

The game consists of two series of screens, each series is sixteen them consist of robots, security of screen that can only be reached by fire-fax, and others that can only be opened by punching. And so the strategy of switching between characters to solve problems has to be carefully thought on, essential to completing the game.

As the monsters get controlled they leave room behind them. These add extra energy, extra firepower or extra pistolists. But if not collected

Whilst the graphics and game design have had almost two years spent on them the game is so very playable. Often the danger of producing a technically brilliant game is that it becomes unplayable, but not Hammerfist.

The style smacks of the classic Impossible Mission but that doesn't mean that the game is unoriginal. Far from it, Hammerfist is a terrific achievement. It is a triumph of game design over another version of a

AUDIOGENIC -

"Wait it was Pete you daft git Cl No, Cl I told you it was C..."

Pub trivia games are often a bit of a laugh. Of course it's all good related, because the half-out loots who play them are just trying to win a bit more beer money. EMO does nothing to try to alter the image of pub trivia machines, but frankly it encourages it. Who cares? It's a great game. Even Emyln's cheerful mug couldn't disguise the fact that the game is about winning money.

There are many nice features about the game. It is a right to left scrolling game. The board is made up of squares. These squares may be blank, carry a fruit or cash or a position mark. Landing on a position mark gives a trivia question of the relevant subject, according to what colour the square that you landed on was. The questions have three answers displayed, and the right one will need to be chosen. Should you get the question wrong Yes another is asked and so on.

Other squares are pyramids that trap your pointer, invisible squares, pushers that propel you in a random direction (these are extremely nasty), rappers and bonus round entrance points. All of these affect your progress one way or another and positive will help you get to the best from them. As you progress to the right of the screen, the screen tries to catch up from the left, and traps you if you hand around for too long. So there are often tough decisions to make about risking going for something or not. If you progress right to the other side of the display you can leave the level by the same method, ie. stepping onto the exit band.

There are piles of coins for the coins you picked up and the pointer runs underneath them. You then have to answer a question for each coin, starting with the smallest

The Perils of Programming

Programming your game? As someone once said "The best way to earn a small fortune writing computer games, start with a large fortune". Kati Hansen needs her head and dispels many beliefs

So you want to be a programmer? You want to be rich, you want to be famous and you want to sell mountains of games. In a couple of years you could be cruising round the country in your GTL, your latest software trophy bouncing around on the back seat. Alternatively you could be slogging your guts out in the spare room, slaving over a hot monitor for 24 hours a day and still be absolutely sunk. Programming can be a perilous profession, especially when you're new to it. The route to success is an obstacle race, unless you know where you're going, you could end up flat on your face.

Under starter's orders

There are two ways to get into the business of programming games. Most straightforward and less risky, though that doesn't mean there won't be any problems, is to join an existing software house, or programming team. You'll get a regular salary and a structured workload but you won't be working as an independent agent and you won't be working for yourself. The alternative is to set yourself up as an independent freelancer and that's how a large proportion of programmers in the business actually work.

Hurdle Number 1: Getting the show on the road

You've written another Kenex II, and you're determined to be even bigger than the hit-and-bust. And who's the fairy godmother who'll make your dreams come true? A software house, right? Wrong. Even if you have produced a masterpiece, it's a one in a million chance that the software house will be convinced you're a genius straight away. No company is going to walk through your door and make you a star overnight. Leslie Bennett, editor of the monthly newsletter for the Society of Software Authors, an organisation set up to give advice and information to freelancers, is still surprised at how naive young programmers can be.

"They walk on to a stand at the PC Show with a two-page game design and expect to come away with a big, fat cheque, the industry's not like that any more."

Computer software is big business and it's a business run by professionals. If you want them to take any notice of you, you've got to approach them in a professional way. OK, so you may be working from your bedroom but that doesn't mean you should present your design like a piece of scuffed homework. First off, pick an appropriate software house. It's no good sending an RPG, say, to a company like Ocean that specialises in arcade conversions; they won't be interested. Take stock of what a company's produced before and imagine your game fitting into their product list. Just make sure you haven't produced a clone of something they released last month, they're unlikely to be litigated. Just writing a letter usually isn't good enough. Take the ball by the horns and make an appointment by phone. If they agree to see you, now's the chance to sell yourself. Make sure you provide as much detail as possible at the presentation. A two-page game design isn't going to capture anybody's imagination. The SGA advises that you should include as much information as possible plus screenshots and demos wherever you can. Even if the screens aren't animated, or the game isn't in a fully playable state, they give a much better idea of what the final product might look like than any drawing or diagram could.

Hurdle Number 2: The Contract

They've taken the ball, they want the game...Don't sign the contract straight away. It's a binding, legal document and you could end up being taken to court over its contents so it's common sense to work out exactly what it says. Consult a lawyer or someone with the appropriate legal knowledge to decipher the stilted language and make sense of the small print. If you don't you can't be sure it says exactly what you think it does. Too often, programmers run into trouble because they sign up in a hurry before fully considering the financial validity of a deal or because they don't realize what they've committed to. If there's a royalty statement are you entitled to overseas royalties as well, do you have first refusal on conversions, will you keep the copyright, what conditions are there on payment and so on?

Hurdle Number 3: The Deadline

Dave Baxter, assistant ex-software Development Manager at US Gold: "There may be two weeks left until the end of the schedule, the Amstrad and Spectrum versions haven't been started and the guy still seems to think he'll be finished on time."

Programmers are notorious for being late and some of the industry's worst horror stories are about programmers practically killing themselves to get a job finished on time. And usually the delays aren't due to circumstances beyond everyone's control or unrealistically outdated deadlines, bad time management and perfection are major factors when it comes to burning the candle at both ends.

It's a problem faced by anyone who makes their living working for themselves; you've got to discipline yourself. That means working out a schedule for completing particular aspects of a game and making every effort possible to stick to it. It's easy to lose track of time or let yourself into leaving those long windowed bits of routine coding to another day.

Mark Walker, author of the excellent games Humber's Moon and Chisel, identifies another programming pitfall: perfectionists "If you've got a game that's 87% finished, the remaining 1% can take you as long again to complete. You spend ages getting everything just right and then within the game finally goes on sale, hardly anybody notices the difference."

This programmer took it too far and took what happened to him!

Obviously you want your game to look as good as possible but you've got to balance the aesthetics against the efficient use of time. In any business time is money, and the more time it takes the less money you're earning per hour.

A product that's way behind schedule can cause a programmer serious problems. Depending on the contract, the software house may be perfectly entitled to delay a pay instalment. Invariably professional contracts, both oral and written contracts may be suspended. That's before you take into consideration the late nights, the Pro Plus and the physical consequences of stress.

Hurdle Number 4: The Dosh

There are lots of ways to earn your million but becoming a programmer usually isn't one of them. All programmers work hard to earn their living but only a few hit the big time and strike it rich. The big names that everybody's heard of are the exception, not the rule. One of the biggest gripes in the average freelancer's life is money. You may think that whatever's specified in the contract - lump sum or royalty, advance payment or regular monthly cheques - is a guarantee of payment, but it's not. Most freelance programmers are paid late and some never get paid at all. Money certainly doesn't come in as regularly as it would if you were doing a 'proper' job in a supermarket or bank.

Even a contractual promise of regular monthly payments isn't foolproof. Tom (the names have been changed to protect the innocent) found that every one of his monthly cheques came at least one month late. One of the companies Richard worked for had a policy of not paying up for a maximum of 90 days; another only paid the top ten on its freelance list. It's not unknown for cheques to bounce or for companies to pay less than the contract states. Your last resort could mean going to court.

If you're unlucky (and not everyone is) this can lead to a spiral of financial problems. Harry realised he was in trouble when the bills started flooding in more regularly than his pay cheques. By the end of the project, he was totally stonk and ready to accept any job he could take. In desperation, he signed the first contract that came along - under equally disadvantageous financial terms.

The Finishing Line

You've made it. Your game's out on the shelves, the reviews are fantastic (of course) and you're sitting back counting the cash. If you've been paid in a lump sum, how will the game sells won't affect you at all, if you're dependent on royalties you could be in for one final shock. However good the reviews they don't guarantee how well a game will sell. Even if you've nailed it with the greatest genius since Einstein it won't do you any financial good unless there's money behind all that renown.

And after all that, let's take a look at your bank balance. How much you've got depends on market forces, the quality of your product and how profitable a deal you made. You could come out rich (but not that rich) and you could come out broke. Most likely, you'll end up somewhere inbetween.

Some software houses treat their programmers like featherbed slaves!

POST APOCALYPSE

If you want your letters slugged down, and your name to look like mud, you know where to write to.

Alternatively you could give Zzap a miss, and write here instead: POST APOCALYPSE, THE MAN WITH A NOSE BLEED, YC, ALPHAVITE PUBLICATIONS, 20 POTTERS LANE, KILN FARM, MILTON KEYNES MK11 3HF. But beware, anything that you say may be taken down and slugged to pieces.

IT'S A STICK UP

I think YC is the best kit magazine in today's shops, but there is one problem. You only put one poster in the magazine every month unlike other mags, where they have loads.

Please, please, please put more posters in, if not for my sake, for my wall's. Carl Sharnham, Leech PA: God, are you greedy or what? (or at least your wall is). You get as many posters as we can give ya, and no more. Now go to bed without any supper.

GROAN PART 52

If you think that everyone who wants to use their computer is more than a child's toy is a member of a dying breed it is lucky that you do not need more readers.

With every computer mag producing the same reviews of the same games there is nothing to choose between them except the serious stuff.

Show us your 'best material', or do you have to part all the good stuff from ODU? If we are not interested why put a utility on your cover tape?

R. Clarke-Rosland, Sheffield

RA: When we put a utility on the tape we were not reverting back to the days of 20-page listings and articles for the gnat's ear. We were, in fact, treating our readers with a small modicum of intelligence, and as this industry needs more skilled programmers in the GAMES field, RA thought that it'd be a wise idea to help in every way, and if that means using a utility (by far the best utility to have been published in ODU) written exclusively by Mervyn Male and Puffy Pigeon creator Tony Crossbar, then so be it. The Lord has spoken and may we all bear it in his cunning wit!

ALL RED TAPE

I have been buying your magazine for 2 years now, and despite my initial shock at the recent changes, I enjoy very much the new look YC, especially the free tape.

For the past three months, I have had no problems with loading the cassettes, but this month's (April 83) tape will not load on side A, despite cleaning my tape recorder and changing its alignment.

Normally I would, of course, just ask the retailer to change the tape/magazine for one with a tape that works. However, the only shop which sells your magazine in my area is in the nearest city, which I can only manage to visit once a month to buy your magazine. It is because of this that from next month I am asking my local newspaper to stock it for me.

I am also asking you to give me a replacement tape as the tape is LETTA OF THE MUNF!!

PUSTULES

I think you are the best thing since fried Spam and for all I care Mrs Whitehouse can grow into a plump obese blob and Rik can come along and pop her. However, then peltide and drown everybody in gunge and puss. A man with an incredibly stupid signature. Joey

RA: I do like a bit of gunge and puss in the morning, but honestly, not even Rik would stoop as low as to 'pop' Mrs. Whitehouse, for fear of breaking his back.

my favourite part of your magazine and this will allow me to buy your mag in confidence of getting a good value buy every month. I thank you in anticipation for my replacement and for the continuing increasing standard of your magazine.

Kevin Brownfield, Devon

PA: Now there's a guy who knows where his cats are. You should have your replacement tape by now Ken, but for anybody that has difficulty loading the cassette on the front of any issue could ya send

Greetings game lovers, and welcome to this month's SCUM OF THE EARTH, the pages which really are YOUR pages.
That's because it is essentially written by you,
our oh-so-creaky
readership.

Since not many of you have answered the challenge that I put to you last month (I've actually had to WORK this issue, and you'll find hints for the Ponsonby lines in Impressario by Yours Truly. We have though received many letters from people asking for help on certain games. Some, but we can't answer each one individually - there's far too much slime to be shuffled around here as it is. So, we're opening a new Winger's corner, and those of you who need help can have your names and addresses printed so that people can write to you direct. You may even meet a new pen friend or two.
Write to OGGYR' EUGENE'S WINGER'S CORNER at the usual address and if you're under eighteen please get your parents' permission first.

Second piece of good news this month is for those of you with slimy inflated egos. Yup, you high scorers will at last get a chance to air your achievements (and underwear) in public. Get your highest scores in to me and I'll print them.
When sending in your scores, you should also include a photo of yourself.
The sillier the better, 'cos they'll be printed in the SCUM OF THE EARTH pages. What a chance to show off to your friends.
Stick 'em in an envelope and post them to OGGYR'

you going, here's a little

Here's some below goodies from FRANK'S WILLIAM of Leyton in London.

THE UNTOUCHABLES
Type in TECHNIQUE on the credits page. Start the game and press F5 for extra time and F7 for extra energy. By pausing the game you can press the left arrow key to advance levels.

TURBO OUTRUN
On Turbo Outrun (25 Gold), says Francis, you can advance levels by holding down the coin (D) and pressing the speech mark (I).

GHOULS AND GHOSTS
Finally a goodie on Ghouls and Ghosts (25 Gold again), to cheat type on the high score page WEGM PLFC and wait until the time runs out. Start the game and press B to stay levels and A for arena. Well done Fran, and have an exclusive SCUM OF THE EARTH T-shirt on us to proudly wear at your local arcade.

That's it guys. And remember, there's loads of goodies up for grabs!!

IMPOSSAMOLE

Right then you useless fat. Here's my contribution (except, of course) to the proceedings. Impossamole is a little game and no mistake. The return of Monty is the the skeleton and the miner and go right. Jump onto the moving platform from the sliding platform, avoid the bat and go up the ladder. Kill the skeleton, grab the egg, minicite. Go back up and bomb the mine, run right, get to the top of the ladder then wait for the smoke to disappear. Run down and get the coin. Drop past the bats then run under them to the conveyor. Run under the crushers.

Jump over the second pillar to avoid the drop, grab the gun then jump up to the gem, now drop and shoot the skeleton and miner. Jump the frog then shoot the other skeletons. Go right. Avoid the bat and the fat on logs that go right again. The shop keeper is the little grey thing that emerges from the ground near the top of the screen. Buy whatever you want. Exit, then drop. Avoid the bat then jump to the double conveyor belt. Jump off of the end to the high platforms. Go to the top of the first rope, drift right then hold up. Repeat to get to the moving platform. Jump from it to the ledge and beat up the miner. Grab the worms the frog to exit bottom right. Drop to the right and left to collect the weapons, etc. Drop right to hit the platforms then into the cliff. Go up to the top and (brink) then jump off of the top of the screen. Look out for the bat. Go up the platforms to the top. Get the bat on the right, go up the rope, and disturb the green skeleton. Kill the miner then get the soup. Kill the skeleton and go right under the crusher. Jump the fat hat and go under the second crusher. Make sure you get the gun or you're in trouble.

Make your way across the screen and up the ladder then get off the treasure and loop off of the screen. Shoot the hanging bats and go right, go up the ledges and avoid the mines. Jump up, across and down in the next screen. Drop, avoid the smoke and get the treasure, go round the screen then drop. Avoid the bat, stand your ground and kick until the skeletons die. Go right up the stairs. Get the gems then head down. Work your way right, over the moving platforms and get the gun. Drop into the quantum's lair.

It is a big worm-thing with nasty teeth. If you missed the gun you'll best of his adventures to SMS. And I've completed the first level. Here's how to do it.

All the start, run to the bomb or else! The bat will cut you off. Bomb the bat and the two skeletons. Go right, under the incredible bat and drop a little onto the waste pipe. Jump over the gap. Walk a little right (avoiding the bat) and let the minicite drop. Drop off of the platform and drill to the can of worms. Bomb the miner and grab the coin.

Work your way to the two bats guarding the laser gun - you can grab it without being hit if you time it right. Shoot the next miner and go under the crusher. Don't go down the ladder as this makes the rest of the level much harder.

Drop down the shaft, get the can of worms and shoot the skeleton, wait for the frog to go back then go up the ladder.

Get the items then drop down again. Go right to the platform, beat up and go down.

Land near the pipe. To kill the rat, jump up and down on the spot and kick then go under the pipe and follow the truck right (kill the purple bat on the way) and jump over the truck. Grab the treasure, avoid the bat and go down to the coin. Avoid the bat, kick the rat and go right. Get the other rat then go right.

Go up the big pipe then drift right to the platform. Avoid the bat and get the gem, then kick the hanging bat. Climb the pipe, sneak across on the horizontal one by going half through it, then drop to the right onto the platform. Kick the rat, go right onto the sludge and kill the skeleton. Go to the bomb then come back and go through the pipe to the shaft. As you drop, hold down right to get the can of worms. Get the bombs at the bottom. Avoid the bat and go to the top of the rope then come down to miss the then drop.

Hold left for the treasure. Jump, kick the rat then jump onto the conveyor. Get onto the ledge-double belt and get the miner. Jump to the higher conveyor. Avoid

Do I buy one of those "Make Money Quick" books for $5.99 including postage and packaging? Do I rob Tesco's and sell 'hot' bread on the corner of Camden Lock? Nope, I'll have a little flutter on the horse courses, and we'll see my staka money grow into a mountain on grass sporadicall!

Unfortunately I've spent me last £14.99 on this horse racing game from Mindscape so that's have to do, and I'll have to wait for my next pay cheque for next year's gas to accumulate that amount of money again to arrive. Money, Money, Money

The new five pence coins are absolutely disgusting. When I was first given one I thought that I'd been diddled with a foreign coin.

But no matter how weird and small and disgusting they are, they can't possibly be as downright nasty as the new five pound notes. Surely the Queen doesn't look THAT old, and who designed the colour scheme, Andy Warhol?

I was nicely surprised though (by the presentation at first) because the amount of options and the ways to play it are very rewarding for the passive gambler. For a start, it allows up to four players to participate, and the computer will make up the other bettors (up to the total of twenty) and you can have three difficulty levels to play at, and the win conditions can be set by you (ie. the first person, or computer player, to reach the target, wins the game). There are Win, Place, Show, Exacts, Quinella, and Triple betting options. You can buy tips from other bettors, and you can even plough through all the form not in what order the tiles are placed, whether vertical, horizontal or diagonally, but the crowd soon's most pleased by the more exotic approaches".

As the tiles roll towards you, your paddle can move to cover their path.

DOMARK -
ES-99 Taps,
£14.99 Disk

No, KLAX isn't some kind of weird Tropical disease. It's more a way of life.

Ive got the Klax. Before you retreat to a quarantine zone, let me tell you that Klax is the latest arcade conversion that Domark have brought to the small screen of your 94. And to say that it's stonkingly good would be doing it an injustice. In fact it is very stonking indeed.

On the face of it it doesn't sound all that special. A load of tiles are winding their busy way down an intergalactic conveyor belt. Your task is to stop them from falling into the void by catching them on your paddle and flipping them into a pit. You might think that that sounds easy. Well, it would be of course, if you could just throw them in any old how. But in order to avoid overflowing the pit, you'll need to be devices.

Extract from intergalactic Klax Training Manual volume 3: "The very nature of the drifting space tiles is in cloud. They are made of some strange compound that has no reaction with other colours, but when exposed to at least two more of its own colour, it will glow brightly, and mysteriously disappear...It matters

If you call me a blockhead again I'll cry, honest I will Prepped!

There are five barrels, one for each place in the pit. The paddle can carry up to five tiles before being overloaded, and each of the pit's five barrels can take up to five tiles each. At the start of each screen the task for that level is set. This might be to score a certain amount of points, survive for a set number of tiles, or just to create a number of Klaxes. A Klax is three tiles of the same colour in a row. Get four in a row and it counts double. Five in a row counts as a triple.

Walk Like an Egyptian

Domark is a software company, not something that a baker washes off of his rolling pin.

Tiles were first invented by the Ancient Egyptians, but theirs weren't delivered to them on large conveyor belts. Their football team was reputedly the best in the world in 1990 BC. Unfortunately, the World Cup didn't appear until nearly four thousand years later.

As well as a straight line, there are other more exotic Klaxons. You can make a Big X, which uses tiles of the same colour in a huge cross; you can set up multiple Klaxons which award bonus points. But should a tile fall over the edge, it gives a little scream and one of the lights on the dropmeter lights up. Light all three and it's game over. The game also ends if you fill all of the space in the pit. Lesser mortals will welcome the credits option that lets you continue on if you die, just like the arcade.

Very nice graphically, although

It's a bit like Tetris, only it's not really!

quite simple as you'd expect, and the sound is very crisp and adds to feel of the game. If you like action puzzling games then try it out, you won't be disappointed.

Mini Putt is an odd game. It recreates the dangers and excitement of the crazy golf course. Don your plus fours and peaked cap and go forth with keen eye and sharp guttler. All of the classic holes are there, from the windmill to the loop the loop. The game plays like a golf game, lining up each shot and gauging the power you need to use. Obviously, wind is less of a factor in crazy golf and there is absolutely no need to shout "FORE!", unless you want to scare the hell out of your friend as he lines up to take his shot. Good fun.

Finally, Apollo 18 is a space mission. You have to fly to the moon and retrieve a probe which landed there in 1967, and repair in space those satellites that are badly in need of their 10,000,000 mile service. Of course you'll have to catch them first. Each mission has about eight components, from take off to re-entry and eventual splashdown. Along the way you'll probably have to try your hand at microwalking too. I've always found space simulations to be a bit on the bland side, and my opinion hasn't really been changed by Apollo 18.

Certainly not a bad bug. There's better games around, but for the price of one it's good value. Worth looking at.

Revolver #1
Fleetway
£1.65

2000AD offshoots are coming at us thick and fast, and there's none more thick or fast than Revolver. Aimed at the 'mature reader' (like most of today's 'real' comics) it supplies what it promises. It is reminiscent of the other comics of the ilk (Deadline, A1, and perhaps even Sledge) but with one major difference, it is full colour from cover to cover, something that perhaps suggests that it is aimed at a younger readership than originally expressed.

The strips themselves are all suitably different from each other, with the intention that they contrast each other favourably. To me though, it looks as if one or two of them were last minute inclusions that stuck out like a sore thumb.

The high point is undoubtedly Dark, an up-to-date new age version of Dan Dare in a sort of Dark Knight Returns plane, although the bio-like tale Purple Days, based around the exploits of Jim Harbrix, is pretty good in comparison.

Revolver is almost the comic of today, but has a way to catch up with the ever-imposing Deadline.

Aliens Vs. Predator #1
Dark Horse
$2.50

The two separate titles, Aliens and Predator, are selling incredibly well, and have been major successes since their launch. Some would therefore indicate that a team up between them would be one hot move.

And it is for this fact that this comic comes as no surprise to anyone. What does come as a surprise is that humans are also involved in a plot that even Twentieth Century Fox would be proud of.

There are three humans, one, and they are incredibly snaky, because not only have the Predators decided to pay them a visit, but the Aliens want a slice of the action too. And in this tale of complete carnage where everybody is an enemy the only thing you are guaranteed will be action.

Artwork is reasonable, and the writing is very good, and it comes at a time when both Predator 2 and Alien 3 have both been announced. I wonder what is next though, 'Verse meets the Aliens and the Predators, but falls foul of the Thing, who's cousin is the Blob?'

The Real Thing
Real Enterprises
28 Gladsmuir Road

£14 a season
or 60p a game

Football PBMs are a mainstay of the hobby, and they are increasing in playability and complexity every year. The most realistic of games so far would have to be The Real Thing, and it is surprisingly also one of the cheapest.

A PBM, for those who are unsure, is a Play By Mail game, a way of playing a game by post. In The Real Thing, you are the manager of a football team and you must guide your team to glory against other such managers. At the time of writing, there are two divisions of 12 teams each, and more are to come. Real Enterprises also states that more leagues will follow (one each one to 100).

Turn around the time in which you will receive each result sheet) is around 3-4 weeks, so patience is a virtue, but unlike football management games on the telly, the thrill of beating a real person is a thrill unto itself.

A third division is currently being prepared, so if you write to Real Enterprises mentioning 'PC', you'll receive a free rulebook.

Back to the Future Part 2 CIC

Now available for rental is the sequel to one of the best loan-film of some time, and it arrives on the eve of the third and final part in the trilogy.

Back to the Future Part 2 is far more complex in plot than its predecessor, but retains all the pace, action and overall corn! Again it stars Michael J. Fox and Christopher Lloyd, and carries on directly where the last one left off.

Dr Emmet Brown (Lloyd) arrives back in 1985 to warn Marty (Fox) and his bride-to-be that their future children are in trouble and that they must travel with him to help them.

Naturally they both do, and they find that the future is fraught with (and about) far-same dangers as in their own time. They manage to succeed in what they want to do, but Marty has other plans too, in the shape of a sports almanac detailing all the results of sport events for many years into their own future—a quick futter and he could be rich. This is where things start to go wrong.

The film then fits from time period to time period.

Including 1985, the setting of the original movie. The camera trickery is superb, and at one point there are three Marty McFlys on the screen at one time. The pace is electric and at times it is hard to keep up, but it's worthwhile to do so, and anyway being on video you can always return the scenes you don't quite understand.

what have you got?

Remember Afterburner, with its excellent type and little else? Well the second in the arcades was the big, bad jobbie, that ran on wind and jerked around violently, and cost a hefty pound coin in London's Colindale Street Now Activision, boss its coltan rockets, has decided that the carry on should sample the delights (?) of the original, and the only things that seems to have transferred successfully is the need to have a bucket present after playing, so that you can say hello again to the contents of your stomach.

This is not because the action is frantic, nor is it because you can get a friend to spin you around and shake your chair while you are playing. The reality of it is that the colours on the screen, and the graphics are so blocky and jerky, that the whole thing is like watching one of those kaleidoscope things flash past your eyes every nano-second.

Being attacked by large uninvited (looks ain't what it's cracked up to be, The Death Bianzilia is a few short miles in the distance, and all they give me is a ship made of Lego!!)

To make matters worse there is a plot that would give George Lucas a coronary, and his lawyers a new task, as there is a galaxy that has been taken over by a dark and evil force, called the Forth Empire (da, da, da, dummm), and they threaten the future of distant civilisations (ahem). There are two planets in the centre of the galaxy that have been taken over by the Forth Empire (da, da, da, dummm) and you, as a member of the elite Galaxy Force (possessing a light saber, no doubt) must destroy their bases by flying over the planets whilst blowing the smog out of everyone and everything (who said liberation was easy, or painless).

Galaxy is a brand of very famous chocolate and if you eat six Galaxy Easter eggs you'll find that you end up sitting on the toilet with your head over a separate bowl, making peculiar noises, all of the holiday! Venus on the other hand is a terrible record by Don Pablo's Animals, Bananarama, and a band that we can't quite remember.

This is done through your Tanks, go everywhere, and using everything lock-on target system! (only 5.58cents at your local retailer) as it looks onto any enemy, or innocent victims of oppression, allowing you to just keep your finger on the fire button, and wobble the joystick about a bit. If you wobble it fast enough, you'll most probably see the planets and wipe out the threat of the Pork Empire (kk, da, da, daaaaa!), as that's about the extent of the gameplay, although you can speed your craft up or slow it down with some left stabs of the space bar, but I'll never bothered and it didn't seem to make much difference.

If you've ever played Asterburner you'll get my drift, it's very similar, and the gameplay is nigh on identical. The graphics though are actually worse (if that's possible) and the only saving grace that the game may have is its sound. Galaxy Force is the poorest release from Activision for a long while and may provoke it to reconsider such ludicrous arcade conversions.

Every four years the World Cup comes and goes, and so do the related foety games. RIS looks at one of the more accurate ones.

Of all the foety games that hit us this summer (July 1990 must boast the best presentation), you get a lively big box, a chance to win a trip to Italy (jeez... well, copied by now), 50¢ off a World Cup Joystick, a splendid (if rather small) poster, a very glossy world cup team (printed like-of-facts) that tells you everything you ever wanted to know about the world cup past and present, and oh yes there's the game as well.

After all this (and you might be a little wary of what the game is like, I mean, we ALL remember World Cup Carnival, don't we?) But gosh, shrew, before the game is a bit good if you know what I mean!

There are two loads involved on the cassette version, the first is the cool, neat, and snazzy selection screen where you get to choose the game options and team you wish to play. Each team has different ability ratings for skill, speed, aggression, and strength, all out of five.

Therefore, on your first attempt at winning the World Cup you might want to try Brazil or West Germany, but when you feel like an expert at it, Cameroon or Costa Rica would be a stiffer challenge. The team selection is cool presentation wise too, as all the home and away strips, plus the flags of the nations, are all displayed.

Once this is done the second load takes place and then you are faced with more options in the way of team and formation selection. You have a squad of twenty players (unlike the 22 in the real World Cup) to choose the best eleven to fit your chosen formation out of players who all have individual skill, speed, aggression and strength ratings (the game does not require subs). Once this is done they all trot onto the pitch with a roar from the fans, but no staff band sounding the national anthems as if they are playing through a kazoo (like in real life). All the players look as if they have been on steroids for far too long, but at least there are eleven of them, unlike some other games, and they wear the colours that you'd normally find there is.

The player nearest the ball flashes from the colour worn to white and back again almost as if he has lodged his metal studs in a plug socket, but this is a far better method of player recognition than the floating arrow that follows players in other games. And it is in this gameplay section that Italy 1990 performs best. If comparisons were to be made between this and THAT football game (kick off, of course) then this would be my choice as the better of the two, that is until THAT game's sequel is released pretty soon.

You can do most things that most games allow you to. You can head, kick, head, slide, dribble, stroke, and even run with the ball if you want. This is because unlike THAT game your boots all seem to be clipped in Golden Syrup as you twist and turn and the ball sticks miraculously to your foot. There is a penalty for fouls and even yellow and red cards, distributed by a referee in the stands as he is nowhere to be seen on the pitch, and every time there is a ref's decision the scoreboard promptly tells you so. Fouls though come low and far between, and this makes any games against Uruguay look very unrealistic indeed. But it is so damn playable that these little inaccuracies are forgiven. Another nice touch is the extra time and penalties option if that 'tough game ends in a draw.

There is little this game doesn't have, although the offside rule is missing yet again, which all adds up for an enjoyable little number, if a tad limited. I must admit I got through to the semi-finals with Brazil in my very first play of the game (I didn't even play a practice match), so the simple gameplay might be a touch too simple but this is not a problem as games of this ilk never have too much of a shelf life, it's nearly as good as the real thing although the Italians in this version do not practice their amateur dramatics on the pitch.

PAINING THE TOWN RED

The YC team take on an Empire team at Terminator indoor paintball. Jeff Davy reports from a small hole.

“I think it's time for Hot Leader Suggestories, started Rambohead in May's YC before blowing away a load of footballers. Let's face it, he's a violent psychopath, so he might find Terminator right up his street. And if his street is in Kilburn, North-West London, he'll be even better off. For it is there that urban warriors can engage in a pastime that would test any Duress employee - indoor paintballing.

Terminator is based in a burnt out cinema. The advert says that the venue has been "renovated for specific games use" but it looked more like the new owners arrived and they painted the whole place black, added some lights and a sound system (some music, for the playing of) and turned the place over to paintgun-toting painters. And as long as you're over 18, you can hand over your £15 and join the ranks of amateur killers.

For your cash you can get fitted out in a boiler suit (in several sizes, short & baggy, medium & baggy and large & baggy - no problem for the Manchester style conscious), plastic goggles (as worn by school science pupils) and a face mask.

As soon as you sign away your right to claim in the event of death/injury/future inability to have children (the paintballs tell hard), you get a gun, three tubes of ammo

So on do it. Just one quick squeeze and he'll be washing paint out of his ears forever!

What are they doing? That better be a McDonald's' dress or they're in big trouble.

(small balls of red paint, which look more like bubble gum than high-speed projectiles) and two Carbon Dioxide cartridges (which provide the propulsion for the ammo). You are also responsible for damage to the weapons.

All kitted up, you're ready to play. A squad of people dressed up is ready to do battle with anyone, or anything. A normal urge at this point is to check the gun, they (BOB - SPLAT - Aaaaah) pack some punch. The paint balls fly as close to the legal maximum speed of 280 feet per second as to make little difference.

What has not been revealed until now is that not only did a YC team head down to Kilburn, but so did an Empire team (publishers of - 80000, HISS - 'ver competitors). What's more, they'd played before. Oh so. Sensible money (about £5.50, or an advert in Popular Computing Weekly) was on a "straggling" for YC.

Unhindered into the waiting area

Bows and guns, part

(with "Predator" showing on a screen in the corner and several arcade machines, & a sofa littered around) we were told that our objective was the capture of the opposing team's flag. We had to find where it had been hidden, run with it (in full view) back to our HQ and look after it until the end of the game. Etc... Right.

The two teams were led off to their respective hidey-holes. Our flag was stashed in a small room of the top of the cinema, at the end of a long corridor, and the team divided into defenders and offenders (that sounds right, most of the YC Editorial staff ought to be locked up). The game began and the latter lot disappeared.

Being in defence during a paintball game is like defence in school football. You get no action for most of the game, although you can hear it, or even see it, in the distance. I could hear the sound of guns firing and hitting either walls or people and the occasional shout of "Marshal - don't shoot" (the neutral

7. Marcus. He was so confident he even brought his own gun. They don't allow Gatlings though.

Marshal is there to oversee the game) followed by game firing and strained shouts of "I said don't shoot, MARSHAL!"

God this, I thought after many tense minutes. As the eerie soundtrack got more persistent and Enap stayed as distant as ever, I was on the move, starting into a doorway before sliding down the rows of wooden steps where the seats used to be. As the game-time neared its end I was onto the stage - where was the opposition?

I scurried nervously over the smoke-throated open area, before descending into the cinema's depths. Around me were the sounds of popping guns and shouting fighters. I had a choice of direction, either over a seven foot wall, through what looked like a brick fireplace or through the water room. The hole in the brick looked mighty small so I opted for the water room. I could see the door on the other side... The murky liquid covered my inguinal trainer and I felt it soaking my sock and foot. Cold as well. Fuck.

I opted for the wall. As I tried to pounce onto it I heard the cracking sound of a gun going off. A paintball smacked into the wall. Someone was aiming at me. I ducked and looked around. Another crack and something bounced off my head. Unexploded. A lucky escape.

8. Gerrard, and if he doesn't look like Rick Astley then YC isn't the best DJ mag!

9. How, looking much like Freddie Star, and looking for some reason.

Had it blown open I would have been "dead" for ten minutes and off to the waiting area to enjoy a vid before returning to the fray.

The game then ended. I trudged to the "lounge", watching others emerging from their hiding places. No-one could tell who had won, although Enap hadn't even made an effort to capture the YC flag. Such confusion signified that we just had to declare it a glorious YC victory.

The second game was a lot more typical - Hunt Sabotee Rules. Divided into pairs, it was a knockout tournament. "Salman" himself (a.k.a. Ace, Terminator's cousin) was dead (although when successfully hunted - and fairly disapplying the foursome that got him (no-one mentioned rules against foursomes.) Not lost, I say.

The only real disappointment was finishing after the pubs had closed. The YC team were victorious to the end as they left Kilburn - it still aches.

Terminator is at 'The Old Broadway Cinema' 4 Kilburn High Road, London, NW6 - (071 328 7837). Open 7 days a week, day and evening. Price: £15 full fee. Over 16s ONLY!

Did you hear the one about the Goblins with... them as rich as possible. Generally speaking, the more advanced into a game you get, the higher your character's "level" becomes. This means that the characters become more adept at handing out large amounts of damage to lots of nasty monsters, swooping up loads of treasure and just rampaging around the land spreading their influence.

Might and Magic II is typical in that respect. However, it is completely atypical (there's a word for the day) in as much as it is completely superb in every respect, and is possibly the best role playing game on the 64. I know that I've said that before, but this game is different.

The action takes place in the Mythical land of Cael. One is more or less the average Mythical land, with lots of mythical towns and villages, mythical roads and fields, and mythical people and monsters. There are literally hundreds of monsters to meet and interact with. Usually this interaction involves a lot of gratuitous violence but you can battle monsters or merely run away.

Might and Magic II is more or less a standard in the tradition of computer roleplaying games. That is, it is a sprawling adventure set in a mysterious land. This land is plagued by many evils (or goods if you're that way inclined) that desperately need slaying/stealing/neutralising, and as a band of hapless adventuring types you've got the job.

Most roleplaying games have the attraction of building up the power of a group of people, while making skorebox

Go on then, I'll have a go!

They mean much more that way. The characters are "rolled up" in the good Personality.

Once you've assembled your force, you have to take them off into the land. You start at an inn, where you apparently meet up and decided to adventure together. The rules for putting a party together are very slack, so you can mix alignments (good, neutral and evil) if you feel so inclined. However, genuine roleplayers will want to keep their party "pure", either having all good or all evil with the odd neutral. Another nice touch that experienced roleplayers will appreciate is that all specialists, whether good or evil, can use the same spells.

The screen display is nice and clear, though it looks a tad cluttered at times. There are windows for virtually everything, including a view of the location that you are in, a list of hit points for the characters and any vital information. Conversation (which is somewhat limited, admittedly) takes place in another window. The party will often meet people who offer quests to the party, and you can decide to take them on or not.

Graphically the game is great. The monsters are well-drawn and imaginative; they give a good fight, and you'll have to be careful about what you challenge at first. Assuming that you kill a monster, you'll probably find some treasure. This doesn't come easy either, as it is kept in some sort of lair which may well be trapped. The traps will need to be disarmed if you want a share of the spoils, but fail in the attempt and it's an early grave for you.

As you progress, the game carefully adjusts itself to cater for your higher level of power. Thus the monsters get more dangerous and cunning, the puzzles get harder to solve and the treasures get more and more rewarding. If you've ever played a roleplaying game then you'll be hooked by this one. It's really down to earth stuff, very pleasurable and addictive. Go out and get it.

It's not half bad, for a company's macho affair, and it comprises of four "training" sections. Each will allow you to display your pigeon sized muscles and Adrian Pamphrey like reflexes (erm... erm... erm... I've got... erm... good... erm... reflexes).

The first is based on a assault course and is probably the hardest of 'em all. Second is the best, as it is a rifle range that is seen through the sight of your weapon (no zoom from me). The third is a jeep driving section much in the mould of Doggy Dog. And the fourth and final section is hand-to-hand combat with your drill instructor. If the sequel(s) were also available, the game would be a little more worthwhile, but it's a good value buy at £2.99 for almost four complete games!

19 BOOT CAMP

ANDY CAPP

Alternative - £2.99

Yet another release, yet another big name license, and yet another crappy game hits the streets.

Andy Capp, as I'm sure you already know, is based on the very popular long-running comic strip in the Daily Mirror, and is about as funny, and inventive as its counterpart.

You are the liver pulling, white-cheating, police-skipping but who must raise cash in order to give Flo her housekeeping. I have never encountered a game that is quite as slow and boring as though it has pretty girls and plenty of lager.

It's a sort of arcade adventure, and the characters are fairly well animated as they plod around the streets of wherever, the backgrounds though are absolutely abysmal and the gameplay is so lameous it's better than a Mogador in putting you to sleep. Microsoft were the culprit's first time round, now the company famed for Pro Mountain Bike Simulator has succeeded to find a worthy successor to the sleepy pile of poo driver. Not so much Andy Capp, more Andy... You can pass the rest.

COUNT DUCKULA

Alternative - £2.99

Alternative was the first budget company to release original, big licenses at a budget price, and it has had much success at doing so (with Robinson Rat and Thomas the Tank Engine being just two), and now Count Duckula (the cartoon spin-off from Dangerous) gets the same computer treatment.

Programmed by Enigma Variations (now a company in its own right, with several cartoon licenses of its own coming up), Count Duckula manages to capture the Cosgrove Hall production wonderfully.

Instead of thinking up a new idea and hoping that it would work at a budget price you can be forgiven for reworking an old theme as long as it is done well. And CD is.

The game owes much to the adventure/platform games of the past, and as the first vampire you must find a magical saxophone in order to transport you back to your beloved home in the darkness.

Sammi - £2.99

You're probably becoming rather fed up of football games at this very moment so TOUGH! We've got another one!

This is yet another release, and my faint memory allows me to visualise a time when I ran home clutching this game after paying the necessary wonga. It promised dampest Thamykonia. This is not as easy as it sounds though, as it is hidden in this enormous pyramid that is inhabited with bats and mummies (but not as many caddises).

The graphics are nothing short of superb and are very similar to their animated counterparts (i.e. they move smoothly, and convincingly). The music is bearable for about two minutes and then the volume control becomes a necessity. A winner though (at a budget price anyway) is normally made up of terrific gameplay and average everything else. DuckDuckGo has far more going for it.

THE DOUBLE

the matches were displayed, and when it came to the top matches, well, you had to sit through around half an hour of slow moving graphics just to get to the outcome of your match (or if you've been knocked out already, somebody else's).

This is a real shame cause the basic management structure is superb, with scouts not reporting the skill levels that a player has, but a personal report on how good they think that player is. It's a sort of Trackout Manager on wheels.

RH

everything that no other footy management game could deliver at that time, and the promises were not unfounded, but there was one tiny tiny prob. THE GAME WAS SO SLOW!

It took about half a minute for each result to go through the vidiprinter, and there were results for each game in the three divisions. Even the gates for all

SOOTY & SWEEP

Alternative - £2.99

And now it's a big welcome to the Sooty & Sweep computer show - starring Sooty and his ever-amazing magic wand, that raspy Sweep armed with a sooty water pistol, and good old Zoo, who's always around when trouble looms.

Yip kids, your love terrible Tuffy Twosome will be in big trouble too. Matthew is out and that raspy Sweep has not only left his dirty old bones all over the house but he has also left the door to the garden wide open and let all the creepy crawlies creep and crawl all around the house.

So it's "Izy Wizzy let's get Bizzy!" so you attempt to save the day by collecting up the bones, which have been left in the most awkward places, whilst avoiding the bugs. And that's about it really. Slapdash fun can be had in a two-player game snatching bones off each other or throwing goosy custard pies (something I've always wanted to do to Pk!).

Basically the only magic trick I'd want to do would be to wave my magic wand and make the game disappear off screen! Even in grown-up mode the gameplay is annoying and incredibly boring. Give me Harry and the TV Show any day!

THOMAS THE TANK ENGINE

Alternative - £2.99

After a hard week's work, full steam ahead, poor Thomas rolled into the station. "I said you could rely on me, I've been such a useful engine," beamed Thomas to the Fat Controller. "I took the children to the seaside, the medicine to the hospital, the tractor to the broken bridge and delivered the mail, the coal and the oil to the refinery - all before the sun went down each day, just as you told me."

"Well done Thomas!" Chuckled the Fat Controller, and he strolled down to the village pub to sup his daily 15 pints of soda pop, down a full bag of Tanelorn doughnuts from the village bakery and poke over Larry the Lamport!

Alternative is certainly on the right track in this endearing title game for 'kiddies' of all ages as you complete all the tasks whilst avoiding other trains, fallen objects and dodgy corners. With bright and chunky graphics and a bouncy tune, it's all a kid could hope for in a game which not only provides tracks of excitement, and obscuring good fun, but also an educational excuse to play a game. A right riveting ride!

F-16 Combat Pilot wins hands down!
- 3 star game - New Computer Express

I'm primed for action as my F-16 leaves the runway. This time my mission is to destroy a battalion of tanks. Suddenly, threat warning - interceptors closing! I quickly select dogfight mode and am in Schweinden. We both fire at the same time - stuff and a bigh-g turn out manouevres his missile. A fuel explosion kills me but not so lucky.

F-16 COMBAT PILOT

Flying fast and low I turn my F-16 towards my target. Time to match on the ground color and aim the laser-guided Mavericks. I fire six missiles in rapid succession. Lantini automatically locking onto each tank. With fuel burning around me I start for cover and load for home. Approaching base, I contact the tower and request a tailhook for my night landing.

Over your F-16 Combat Pilot you simply require 650 Kb RAM and 640 Kb or 400 Kb of free hard-disk space (minimum 200 Kb).
