28 PLAGUE KRON MUNCHER PANIC

4 FREE GAMES!! Can you believe it? Yag YC shows to feature with yet another collection of mega games from Commodore Disk User. You may recognize a few of them (ah there can be no doubt that they're the best you'll get on the front of ANY magazine. If this isn't value for money, what the hell is it?

FEATUREONIES

21 MOMB - HOW I LOVE YA!

Two of the YC team go down to the South Bank and lace around for a few hours in one of London's hottest tourist attractions. Rick even gets interviewed by Bruce Norman, and the most exciting thing Jeffrey did was to eat a whopping big ice cream, erm... Loosen up man, loosen up!

MONTY PYTHON'S FLYING CIRCUS - It's surreal thing! In this incredible game based on the strangest comedy programme to ever appear on British TV, you get to play first a man with a funky on his head, then a fish with a funky on his head, then a bird with a funky on his head... Now we know what Madonna's 'Misty Fantasy' was all about. Publishity starts these days!!

TIME MACHINE - I love firing around time, and The Roman Empire. The YCian Empire. I love everywhere I love. The only trouble is that I leave big holes in some fields whenever I load up Time Machine! Oh well, I think it got to Boregore People next time!

But First This..

It was quite amusing to read in a certain other rag claiming to do Commy 64 reviews that we're 'dead', kaput, no more, that we have ceased to be. I know that we missed an issue on the shelves but that doesn't mean that you're pushing up the daisies, does it? Does that mean that if I miss Nasty Training one Sunday I should be cremated or buried or something? Well, you know what they say about chickens and halibut and all that. A case of food-in-mouth reflexes.

Well gripes is gripes and on to lighter things. The new look YC gets more and more funny, and has everything that a Commy 64 owner could want, ie, games, games and more games, but you know that already, do you not,
John?

The best news is that we're still 'trading water' and when we have learned to do our ten metres doggy paddle, then you're in for some hot poopy stuff.

But putting my serious cap on for a moment, another point I'd like to put my grubby finger on is the subject of software piracy. Can't do it! It's not fair for someone, anyone, to take money out of the mouths of programmers, development teams, journals, and even the largest of software houses.
Grandlam is gone, and so is Tiresoft, and God only knows how many more will take the dual if this disease carries on for much longer. And anyway for every game that you rip off, the less money there is to be spent on the next release, thus making for a poorer product. We all lose in the end. Be sensible robbery is robbery no matter what tint your shades are.

That's it for now. I'll catch ya at the show (the GCEs) in September probably I'll be the one hanging around PRETENDING to be drunk), until then hang loose.

5 INCREDIBLE GREMLIN FACTS

1) The big, green and 'orrible Gremlins hatch from rather cute, small and sweetly cuddly Mogwais. In order to prevent this you must follow three rules. Never expose them to sunlight (or else they melt into a squiggly mess), never get them wet (or they multiply), and never, ever feed them after midnight.

• 2) They have now appeared in two movies and there is already a third one planned.

• 3) Both films were directed by Joe Dante, who is also known for his direction of The Rabbits, Inner Space, and a rather nasty horror movie called The Howling. He is currently making a comedy film based on the comic strip hero Plastic Man.

• 4) The four new gremlins that appear in the second film are called Lenny, George, Daffy and Mohawk and have very funny individual characteristics.

• 5) And... Erm... Elite has signed the license to do a game based on Operation 2, but I suppose you already knew that.

WISHING ON A STAR

Space is a very, very big place, and there's nearly as many games based on it than it contains stars. Accolade tends to disagree, 'cause here comes Star Control, a game for action game enthusiasts and strategy game fans alike.

Apparently, in the future we've got a big prob. Although there is this enormous star cluster, it cannot accommodate all the alien races that make up the Uu-Guan hierarchy and those that comprise the Alliance of Free Stars. So it time for a numble, and a big battle is on the horizon with yourself deciding the outcome.

If you want you can even get a friend to join in the mayhem, and you can smog them (or vice versa), he, ha, ha! And if you a bit dubious whether the fate of entire races should rest in your hands, you could let the computer handle either the arcade blasty section or the strategic bit, and you can control the other.

Star Control will be available around September time.

SHAKING HANDS WITH THE DEVIL

US Gold has announced the imminent release of a new Capcom arcade conversion. This one deals with the controversial issues surrounding the Middle East, a tetchy subject that is normally best left alone.

But this time the fundamentalists have been ignored, and the plot focuses upon dodgy arms dealers (and gummy legs I should imagine) who would rather than the Middle Eastern wars didn't and so they could sell more and more of their powerful weapons. Now they're spreading terror much the same way that you'd spread rumour, 'cept they don't let it dribble out the side of their sandwiches.

You, as one of three characters - Mickey Simon (in a F-14 Tomcat), Shin Kazama (Tigerhawk), and Greg Gate (A-10 Thunderbolt)

- have to fly around a bit blasting the bad guys and therefore doing your bit for worldwide peace. And there you have it.

U.S. Squadron offers simultaneous two-player shoot-em-up action and will soon be available on cassette and disk.

Also to come our way is a role-playing game (Fair Foe Foe) based on that fabled hero of the cosmos best kept to a late night slot on Satellite television, and featuring all manner of stupid irritating metallic noises, that make very bad sound effects kind of noises.

This'll be programmed using, roughly, the same system as the AD&D range, by SGI. And it is based on the TSR game of the same name, which surprisingly hasn't done very well.

Whether or not we'll see it appear on the comms this year is another thing entirely, but we can keep our fingers crossed can't we? Bitches, bites, bitches!

STOP PRESS!!! ARNIE IS BACK

Ocean has announced that it's grabbed what could possibly be the hottest new science fiction Christmas.

Based on the new Arnie movie, Total Recall, we should expect to see pixelated peatonals in the shops around December sometime.

WHEN THEY MET IT WAS...

On Friday 12th July, Rick, Jeffery Davy, Paul Rigby and a bunch of similarly unruly journo's were invited to Loughborough at US Gold's bequest and to celebrate the release of Murder (last issue's cover game).

They all convened in a three star hotel and before they knew it, many, many pints of alcohol were placed before them, and then it was off for a large conference during which the heckles from a select few were rather more interesting than the speeches. Then there was enough time for a few games of pool in which a YC team made up of Paul and Rick narrowly lost to an Smap team (which almost made up for the drubbing we gave them at Terminator paintballing).

Then they were all herded onto an ancient coach and driven to this rather superb mansion in the middle of nowhere. And after more bevies everybody was treated to a slap up meal, and a comedy sketch performed by a few actors, in which Geoff Brown (US Gold's big boy) was publicly humiliated, and boy did everyone enjoy it!

After returning back to the hotel and boozing down in a nightclub until the early hours, we can exclusively reveal that Rick was the last person to get out of bed on the Saturday, and he and Jeff were the last of the rabble to leave the hotel thoroughly content. So (according to Rick) it's a big hurrah to US Gold, and I'd like for my own presence to be noted for the next journo bash!

I've got those 'got a lurch stuck in me got' kind of blues.

THE DREAM TEAM

The 100 review team are so cool that when they could keep the tables in their underwear. But what do they do in their spare time?

File "Eric Gumbly" Henderson - Editor

Spare time? Spare time, mate! What else spare time He gets he devotes to reading comics and taking jelly at Fellow Robin owners. Most of his spare time comes on the train from London to sunny Milton Keynes.

Ashley "Mr. Crosscut" Colter-Catena - Games Editor

Ashley is a bowling man, and we don't mean that he bowls down the street waving his arms from side to side and shouting on each foot, as if he's got some terminal gout. He's even got his own ball, or so he says!

Beverly "Mrs. Wedgwood" Gardner - Contributor

Our Bev spends an awful lot of time knitting and making fans and things. She has a mild and peculiar tendency to visit the dentist incredibly often, it's almost as if she enjoys it.

THE SCOREBOX

Each game is given different ratings in the form of a wonderful beady character (using the shape of letter from 'I' to 'W' in order to make it even more reassuring).

I Graphics (out of 10) - This is what we think the game appeal a presentation wise and graphics.

S Service (out of 10) - Does the music grab? Or the sound FX come across as realistic?

P The Packer (out of 10) - This is what we think the system appeal of a game is like. Does it grab your attention straight away? Or is it a real hard to get into?

B B&B-Lite (out of 10) - How long will the game retain your interest? Shouldn't it last 10 days?

Overall (out of 100) - This is the general rating given by the reviewer of how good they think the game is.

00-20 This game is so abysmal that the only reason anybody would ever want to see it is for novelty sake.

20-40 Inevitably dull, and/or interesting in the slightest. "What's Yikman and/or" and you'll get the general idea of what's hot/cold about.

40-60 Not too awful, and probably somebody's cup of tea, although we'd rather stick to ginger beer.

60-80 A good game with more going for it than most. It'll be hard to check these ones out in the shop before you buy them.

80-90 Go on and buy immediately, these games are hot. So hot in fact that you'll be done for taking them into a no-smoking area. Any game getting this score is announced as 100 Fun Zone (the 100 seal of recommendation).

100

No game has ever got this rating, and any game to ever get this would be the best that anybody could ever do on the coming 1st. New 1000000 when England this good comes around because all the games players in the world would number without end bump into airports and things.

SHADOW WARRIORS

OCEAN -
$9.99 Tapes,
$14.99 Disk

Rik wraps a black blanket around himself and runs around shouting "Hiya, yip, yip, hiyaki!" Once they released him from the institution he set about this latest in the glorified exploits of ninjas.

Shadow Warriors was an arcade machine? Howism I ain't seen it then? It's not as if I don't go down the arcade or maffin? Actually Shadow Warriors isn't my kind of thing anyway. I was put off of beat-em-ups when Double Dragon came out. Horizontal scrolling landscapes that stop when there's a fight to be had, nah you can keep 'em.

Dragon Ninja almost changed my mind, but didn't offer enough variation in gameplay to hook me, so Shadow Warriors with it's even more minuscule action is hardly gonna get me going, but it will appeal to somebody.

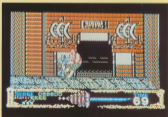

Perhaps these kind of games don't offer too much; you, as a ninja in the nineties, must find and destroy an oriental person who has taken the body of one of today's greatest warriors. Unfortunately he has sent a plethora panning use of the English language (ANY) of "ghayish awawawaw" to halt you in your progress.

So you start in the slums of somewhere similar to New York, and you must progress along streets and through different levels of action. This is done by beating the flag out of anything that moves, and things that don't too. And when you've gone through them, the villains get bigger and tougher and carry logs, which they are more than willing to shove in places that you'd rather they don't. There are also leather clad punks and porno warriors, amongst other harder to beat foes.

Luckily for you, you are the only one left who has been taught the art of ninjitsu, which means you can use not just your hands, but your whole body as a weapon. You can kick, punch, slash/slice, throw, and dance about like Michael Jackson probably.

If in doubt, stog it out! He's big, imposing, get beat breath and he's got a back of a punch. Ah kick 'em in the gonads, it's too over in no time!

He flies through the air with the greatest of ease, but he won't when we've cut off his knees!

And also scattered around the landscape in order to aid you are objects like telephone boxes, gasbins, walls and pieces of pipe. You see it's not worth just flailing your hands about madly, fighting every body in every direction, instead you should get your back to a wall (or obstacle) and wait for them to come to you.

If you kill a villain and they crash into an object, it will explode and you can pick up a bonus icon. Some icons give you energy or extra lives and others give you extra points.

Smack him in the face with that sword. But I guess that's not the way.

Alright, who's got the blade by the feet?

skorebox

8 6

7 6

overall 76

there is also one that gives you a sword to use, therefore allowing you to dispatch your enemies with greater speed.

Each section of each level has a time limit of 99 seconds and if you exceed this then you'll lose a life. The end of each level has a scattering of mega treasures and generally without an obstacle to keep your back to, thus provoking for some soft fighting skills.

Each level upon completion of the previous takes a fair while to load, but this allows you to take a breather, and is not annoying in the slightest. What is annoying is that Shadow Warriors is a brilliant conversion of a poor arcade machine. If you're really into martial arts beat-em-ups with very little in varied gameplay then you would do no better than this. It's a more enjoyable game than Double Dragon or it's sequel, but maybe a tad less.

Bare Feet

Dressing up in your bath robe and eating Chinese food does not qualify you as a ninja. You'd probably be better off pretending that you're a turtle.

New York is very famous for it's phenomenal crime rate and it's rather scrummy bagels.

Starting again? Eugene and a cast of thousands of security people who aren't important enough to mention here . . .

Greetings Slime. Well, what can I say other than YOU ARE SO SLIMY!

We've been overwhelmed here at Slime City with tons of nasty cheats, hints, pokes and maps. As you can imagine, this suits us just fine 'cos we don't want to have to do any work, you want free software and the software companies want free publicity. Happiness all round! This month's sponsors are RAINBOW ARTS who will happily provide copies of TURBICAN and DOMARK who have some nifty ESCAPE FROM THE PLANET OF THE HOBBIT MONSTERS t-shirts to give away. Thank to both of you for being so low and cheap!

As far as other rewards are concerned, we have another piece of good news. We at the Slime City have come up with a somewhat superb idea (even if I do say it myself). We have decided to sort you scumbags into ranks - the more (and we receive from you like better, 'cos you'll be promoted. When we've finally sorted out prices other than software you'll be able to qualify for a price according to your rank. Wear your disgusting position with pride and say RAIN BOD SUCKS! to anyone who is lower than you on the list. As to these ranks, here they are:-

PRIVATE PRAT - maybe you'll get a badge (when we get them, that is)
CORPORAL GILUD - look out for your t-shirts, corporals
SERGEANT SLIME - if we can can a software house then you'll get a game CAPTAIN COLOSSITY - pretty high ranking, certainly a game or two plus anything else we can get for you

GENERAL GUNKE - the slime's highest rank.

Reach these dizzy heights and you're looking at a day out maiming, but just you try to get there! It ain't going to be easy. Something for gungy people like you to dream about.

First on the computer map this month are Caroline and Christopher Griffin of Fleet. Well done guys, your maps of the first 2 levels of Indiana Jones are printed here for all to enjoy! For that accurate work of art you have both become the very first SCUM OF THE EARTH Sergeants! A copy of TURRICAN from that so-generous-and-wonderful software house RAINBOW ARTS is on its way to you, AND you both get an company DOMARK. Get back to work and who knows, you may even get a promotion!

Next in the vast deep sludge that follows these pages is James 'Jaggy' Jagers, of Gato. A load of nitro here that came from the post of Corporal-Capt. Also one James! Have an ESCAPE FROM THE PLANET OF THE ROBOT MONSTERS t-shirt, compliments of the wonderful London-based DOMARK. Wear it with pride and send in loads more!

THUNDERBOLT

Enter EDOMATAENC on the high score table.

FINITING SOCCER

To beat the keeper every time, shoot from the penalty spot.

STRIDER

Start game then press RESTART, RESTORE, RETURN and DELETE together. The border turns grey. Press fire to restart then press F7 and move your joystick upright. You are transported to level 3, and if you complete this you will be on the final level.

Great mounds of pain here from Lorna and Saul Davies from Cammerton.

There seems to be an awful lot of teamwork going on these days! Can't take the pressure off your own people? Never mind, for your cloud map of Fantasy World Dizzy and the solutions to Dizzy's island adventure and Fantasy world, you have saved yourselves the post of Sergeants, and so look out for your brightly coloured and very stylish ESCAPE FROM THE PLANET OF THE HORROR MONSTERS t-shirts from DOMARK. As there's two of you you can also have a copy of TURBIDGAM from RAINBOW ARTS, another brilliant software house. Cheers guys, and I hope the weather in Wales is just as good as here in Strine City.

Fantasy World Dizzy

Give apple to Troll. Take stone loaf and use jug of water to put out fire. Go through fireplace and go up above the dungeon, then put loaf in cat's path and he will just sit when loaf is eaten. Go to Desert and take rope from him. Jump on snap-happy gator's mouth and tie it with rope. Get bone from attic and put it in Amargo's den. Don't put it right at the back or Amargo won't eat it. Make your way to broken bridge and drop three boulders into the water to raise the level.

Now Treasure Island Dizzy.

Get chest and put at bottom of cliff. Stand on it to jump up cliff. Get snorkel, video camera and glass sword from tree house village and put on beach. Pick up snorkel and go into water. Get salt water spade and go back to beach. Rearrange items so that you have spade, sword and snorkel in order. Go back into water and drop spade on bouncing rock. This makes air bubbles rise for you to stand on. Use well to carry more objects and use to turn on the three machines in the lift hut. Get crowbar off Grandad and the Piggy cow. Use crowbar to open the well and go down. Give cow to shopkeeper and take basin, collect lay in church and turn on last machine.

Plant bean in manure, get door knocker and use it on door marked 'knock and enter'. Go in. Collect bucket and take to puddle at bottom of volcano. Fill bucket. Put water in manure and beanstalk grows. Go up beanstalk and scrape the clouds to cloud castle, get egg. Go to lift hut and down to dragon's lair. Put egg on nest and walk past. Use pickaxe to break blocking boulders and collect egg. Take rug to cloud castle and use to cover spikes. Collect coin under table and use lever to lower Dizzy. Go up and talk to Dizzy and that's it. Collect the last coins. Also advisable is to look everywhere for coins.

Now Treasure Island Dizzy.

Get chest and put at bottom of cliff. Stand on it to jump up cliff. Get snorkel, video camera and glass sword from tree house village and put on beach. Pick up snorkel and go into water. Get salt water spade and go back to beach. Rearrange items so that you have spade, sword and snorkel in order. Go back into water and drop spade on bouncing rock. This makes air bubbles rise for you to stand on. Use these to get out of the water. Drop sword by grave and go back to get video camera. Give this to shopkeeper. Get boat from him and put this on end of pier. Use glass sword to open grave, make sure you have snorkel.

Go down hole and left at bottom to collect dynamite. Get back over raft to grave and up bubbles. Drop dynamite and get key from pier. Go down game and right and jump over barres (reach the fire). Drop key on little bit of barrel sticking out of floor. Go down hole and get microphone. Give this to shopkeeper and take outboard motor. Drop motor off end of pier. Go off, get axe and bible. Go through water, put axe on bridge and fall through. Make your way back to grave up platforms.

Arrange items so that you don't drop bible if you pick up something. Go back down and get cursed treasure. Take it to shopkeeper (don't drop the bible until you get there). Drop the fuel he gives you off of gear then get dynamite. Go back to the beach and get infra red detonator from trees. Keep going until you get to the last screen of the mine. Put detonator on first rock and dynamite on rocks blocking the gold. Press RETURN when on the detonator and get the gold. Give gold to the shopkeeper and take the key he gives you. Drop it off pier, quickly jump onto boat and keep walking on it. Get off at harbour and read the end message!

Mega games have been Alessandro Mancini from Gauthierburg, SWEDEN. Our first overseas Sergeant! Look out for TURFSCAN from FARNBOW (what a lovely software house are you!) ARTS. Hope you enjoy it Alex!

Right then, that's your lot. Get them cheats coming in please. The first solution to Hammerfest from Activision gets a free copy of RAINBOW ARTS' TURRICAN 'cos we've got one left! Get to work, write in and who knows? You might be bashing your mates with rubber swords in the months to come. Many thanks again to DOMARK and RAINBOW ARTS whose sterling generosity made these pages possible this month. Any other software house that's interested should contact EUGENE via the Games Editor. Bye for now, and keep the slime broiling.

MONTY PYTHON'S

WIGGINS —
$9.99 Tape,
$14.99 Disk

Fish, fish, spurn, cheese, Fish.

Where has that little fishy gone? Bing biddle biddle bang. Bang biddle biddle bing. Accountancy. The Best Squish...

Stand on one leg and go yip, yip, yip, yip plang! How you have got a rough idea of what Monty Python's Flying Circus was about. It was, is, and will be silly willy, my name is Fred. In the twenties it was a cult comedy series completely in a different world from Dada, Vivaldi's Last My Bismarck, and all of those connected to it (other than the recently departed, and sadly missed, Graham Chapman) have made merric backs doing ever greater things.

Dressed in a woolly vest and hairy placid firmly on head, you are Mr. G.P. Gummy and have fish visible from your basin. It has separated into four parts and you must complete levels in order to get it back. Uncertainly enough (uncertainly for a game based on Python anyway) there are four levels and in each level you must collect bits of spurn and shoot various cheeses in order to get those missing parts of your comical torso.

This is not easy though as blyp, blyp, widdle bang, there are many things that can go wrong. For instance you could lose the spurn that you thought you had uncovered, by it slipping down a pipe or something. And there are a plethora of Pythonesque battles that you face from every crack in the Dada-like scenery.

In the first level you transform into a fish, and you must travel along pipes that contain many cheesy cereals. You must shoot the cheese in order to reveal bits of spurn or other bits of food. Sometimes though, the bits of spurn are plain for the eye to see and a cunning use of shooting and placement of your body are needed in order to succeed in solving the puzzle. This is more often than not, so your own brain is needed to allow you to pick up Gummy's.

The other levels have the same gameplay, but Gummy changes into different creatures including a bird and would you believe it, a biped humanoid (a man, to you or me). Scattered around in obscure places

(you have to experiment in order to find them) are bonus levels that offer much food.

Every time you touch a merric you lose energy and you start with three bits. Any food, including spurn, replenishes that energy, but when your energy runs out your head flies off and flaps around like a fish out of water.

If you manage to complete a level, and succumb the end of level quarter, the amount of cheese that you caused to explode and the amount of spurn that you collected will be totalled up, and taken away from your score (the score starts at $9,999,999 and plummets downwards). If you have collected and shot enough you will get a piece of your brain back.

The graphics are so yonks apart good that you'd be forgiven for mistaking this version for the Amiga one. The feel of the game is just sparklingly tight, with more Python

FLYING CIRCUS

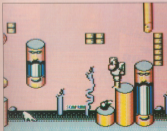

What Now? It's up to Something, Top, let's painting at that funny fellow.

Fax

10 things you never wanted to know about Monty Python's Flying Circus

- 1) Halibuts are not just small, wet things with scales, they are also a plot device.
- 2) The parrot sketch is not a pencil drawing of a parrot.
- 3) My father was not a lumberjack, nor did he dress in women's clothing.
- 4) Adrian Pumphrey (Kid of Your Amiga) is likely to be a member of the ministry of silly walks.
- 5) Accountancy is not boring.
- 6) Monty was the name of a British tank colonel. A python is a big snake. Flying means "to float in the air". And a circus is a performance by many in a big tent. Therefore Monty Python's Flying Circus means Colonel Snake's floating tent.
- 7) A silly thing to do on a rainy day is to stand in the rain.
- 8) Spam is a wonderful meaty comestible.
- 9) So is rat pie.
- 10) There are only nine facts!

score contained than the programs themselves (Thinking about it this doesn't seem so silly). If you ain't into surrealism, or then again even if you're a fish, then this game is the halibut for you (Exc, of course). It also "breaks the ice at parties".

ON THE TAPE

ER... Due to a few minor errors, the Time Machine playable demo promised on last month's Next Month page had to be put back by one month. To compensate we've got two whole games for you instead, taking the total number of games up to FOUR! The Time Machine demo will instead appear on next month's tape honest!

Running Orders

Side A: Plague, Kron
Side B: Muncher, Panic

TAPE PROBS

If you are having big probs with your cassette (ie. it won't load, jitter) then send it to: Tape Probs, 10 Tape 5, Applegate Publishing Ltd., 28 Pottery Lane, Kim Farm, Milton Keynes MK11 2HF. Don't forget to send your name and address, and an explanation of the problem.

PLAGUE

Plague is based on the immensely popular old classic, Defender (alright, it looks more than a passing resemblance) and should be treated as an excellent version and not an original game.

game is controlled entirely with a joystick in part 2. The ship accelerates in the direction of the joystick and moves from one side of the screen to the other to allow for maximum forward view. Lives are lost by rapidly pressing the fire buttons.

addition, the ship is equipped with three smart bombs which destroy all aliens on screen. The bombs are fired by holding the fire button down for a longer period. In this way you need never remove your hand from the joystick.

The ship has considerable momentum and it takes practice to control it effectively. The object of the game is to destroy all aliens in each sector while protecting the men who are stranded on the landscape. The alien types are as follows.

A) Flotation mines: These follow a set pattern across the landscape and provide a moving obstruction to the player.

B) Planters: These hunt down the men on the landscape. When directly overhead a target man they descend to capture him. The man is then carried to the top of the screen where he is absorbed and the player mutates. If the planter is destroyed before reaching him slowly to earth.

C) Mutants: These fly at high speeds with the sole aim of destroying your ship. Although they are the fastest of the aliens, they also have the most momentum and are not capable of rapid changes in direction.

D) Pods: On later levels these pods hover motionless in space. Destruction of a pod causes the release of four swimmers. Using a smart bomb will also cause the release of swimmers.

E) Swimmers: These fly at constant horizontal velocity but can change vertical velocity rapidly. They operate in two modes. 1) Attack mode, where they home in to your ship. 2) Defensive mode, where they try to avoid being destroyed during a chase.

Contact with any of the above aliens results in the loss of one of your three lives. An extra life and smart bomb is gained every 1000 points.

The radar screen shows the position of all aliens and men in relation to your ship, which is always central on the radar. The radar only updates twice a second and accuracy should be taken of this when flying at speed.

KRON

A battle rages in the city of Bora in the land of Sark. The peaceful Borians are no match for the Zorian giants who, led by Balzan the Sorcerer, demolish Bora and capture Princess Zora. Defeat has totally demoralised the Borians who, being so few in number now, had scattered and dwell in secret caves somewhere on Sark.

Only you, Kron, with the aid of your wandering father, can escape across the sea of storms to a small island where you grow tall and strong and vow revenge to your people. Your promise is to kill Balzan and rescue Princess Zora by... That day has now come!

Adventure games allow the player to use skill and imagination within the constraints of the program. The real beauty of this is that the choice is up to you! When you see the word 'instructions' enter your command.

The following list shows you some of the more often used commands. (There are more, so trial and error is a good play!)

TAKE/GET - To acquire an object.
DROP/LEAVE - To discard an object.
NORTH/SOUTH/EAST/WEST? (N/S/E/W) - For directions.

LOOK-TO - View your present location.
TEXTWORDS - Allows you to follow the adventure with text only.

PICT - Enables you to view pictures and text.
HELPis - May or may not prove to be helpful.
LISTING - Describes all your current possessions.
SAVE - Allows you to save your current position within the adventure.

LOAD - Loads a previously saved adventure.
QUIT - The easy way out when a solution is not forthcoming.

One feature of Kron is the ability to make fairly complex commands. For example "Take the apple and throw it at..." Good luck with your quest!

Kron was designed using the Graphic Adventure Creator (GAC) by Interceptor, all rights reserved.

PANIC

Stand by to take part in an exciting non shoot-'em-up (is there such a thing?), game of skill and judgement. The idea is to cover a symbol, known as a Posicon, by another symbol, which is called a Negicon, to form a single unit, known as a Block.

Across the top of the screen is a row of twenty Posicons. Along the bottom of the screen, above the score line, is a row of twenty Negicons. The Posicons and Negicons match each other and together they form a Block.

The computer will select a green Posicon and place it at random onto the viewscreen. You must then use your carrier vehicle to select an appropriate Negicon, take it to the Posicon and drop it on top, thereby changing it into a Block.

To pick up a Negicon simply place your carrier over your selected Negicon so that it fits the carrying area, and hold down the fire button for a moment. The Negicon will change colour to indicate that it is now under carrier control - release the fire button. To release a Negicon from your carrier, again, hold down the fire button for a moment. If you select a wrong Negicon you may release it on any vacant part of the viewscreen.

You score points for changing Posicons into Blocks. Some Posicons have a much greater value than others so it is wise to be choosy. Some of them have other functions. For example one of them gives an extra life.

Every now and again, a Quaker will traverse the screen at a rapid rate. This is harmless but it does gulp up any Posicons in its path. This can be useful because it creates more space for the computer to put Posicons down (some of which could be very valuable).

Energy missiles also traverse the screen in swarms - one touch and you lose a life. You can destroy them with energy bolts, gaining points at

The scientists at Washington are a clever bunch. After genetically engineering an animal to get rid of the current drug problems, you have taken form as a fat yellow beast nicknamed Muncher. Your mission Jim, is to eat all these horrible drugs lying around the Washington depots and eliminate the crisis for years to come.

However in these depots remains the ghosts of earlier drug takers, who certainly don't like you hanging around. But do not worry... The scientists devised a plan of sending fake dealers into these depots to scatter plasma capsules all over the buildin... "Hang on a sec, this sounds suspiciously like Pacman, but with a ludicrous and very thinly disguised plot!" You at me, Well, er, Errs... "Yes it is suspiciously like Pacman, but Pacman was good wasn't it?"

Playing Muncher

To play Muncher, you move your man around the maze gobbling all those nasty drugs, and avoiding those nasty nasties. However, when you eat a plasma pill, you can get the same time, but beware as some of them travel just below light speed - you may only just avoid see them.

To fire an energy bolt simply press your fire button and immediately release it. Be careful if you are carrying a Negicon as there is a danger that you may lose it.

The game finishes when either you lose all your lives (you lose) or you cover all the Posicons with Negicons (you win). The game is fully joystick controlled with the exception of the following keys:

your own back on the terrible ghosts by gobbling them up too. Unfortunately though, the plasma energy in the pills is only sufficient to last up to 8 seconds.

Muncher is played with the joystick in port 2 using the normal movements, but the fire button is NOT used. If you can't handle the pace you can pause the game with any key assigned the Cartridge Stop and F7 which changes the speed of the game, and Run/Stop which quits the game. To continue, press any key.

In total there are 15 depots to complete, with a Bonus building at the end. At the start you have 4 men at your disposal. Can YOU munch your way to the last level without being caught four times? (By the way, this game has been protected against disabling collision, etc. with cartridges, so don't try to cheat!)

By the way the author of this game, David Dryson, was only 14 when he programmed it. Shows what you can do if you've got the ambition!

- F1 - Pause game.
 - F3 - Unpause game.
 - F5 - Turn off all sound effects.
 - F7 - Turn on all sound effects.
- Enjoy the game, and whatever you do don't panic!

Ski or Die

He must be on something illegal look at those peepers.

ELECTRONIC ARTS - $3.99
Tape, £14.99
Disk

It's a cut throat world on the slopes, and Ash, even has problems getting his skin on!

Were Radical. Grrr. I'm starting to talk like Rick. Never mind, because I'm just talking about the timing of this release. I thought that winter wasn't until at least January, but here in the midst of a heatwave comes Ski or Die. Hrrrr. Never mind the lack of seasonal appeal. Will Ski or Die make you long for Santa to come skidding gaily across the rooftops on his jet suit?

Unlikely. The game is more likely to make you want to go on holiday to the Caribbean. It's basically another game of multiple events with judges and an overall score. While I always have an open mind about games I've never really been a fan of multiplayer, firstly because of multibred cassette and secondly because they're so fun unless you play with your friends. All of the events are, oddly enough, based on skiing or other snowy pastimes.

You start the game inside

He's going flat out for his first (that's up to him)

Barnes's ski shop. Here you can sign up for the competition, and choose either serious alpine activity or mellow mountain schussing. The latter means that the scores that you achieve will not be saved for embarrassing posterity. After leaving the shop you can select the events that you want to compete in. There are five in all and you can play each individually or complete in all of them. The five events are snowball blast, downhill blitz, snowboard half-pipe, snowboard trash and acre series.

Snowball blitz is a little like

Fax

I'm Dreaming . . .

Snow is actually a cold form of water. When water is subjected to temperatures of zero degrees celsius or lower it freezes. Ice is the result on a body of water but droplets may become snow. When snow melts the water miraculously reappears and you have to take up waterskiing.

Operation Wolf. Sneet-nosed kids are closing in to nick the snacks that Barnes has left you in charge of. You have to stop them with snowballs. The closer the tail the less he scores you. You can face north, south, east and west so you have to keep an eye on the radar. Other things appear, like abominable snowmen and eskimos, which can be batted for extra points.

Downhill blitz is a violent version of Ski Sunday. You have to make your way down to the bottom of a very nasty slope as fast as you can. The more snorts you perform from the cliffs the better though. Basically a race against the clock but gears etc... I think I'll have a chocolate milkshake.

will be awarded.

Snowboard half-pipe is an icy adaptation of the popstar skateboarding event. You have to go as fast as possible back and forth across a half-pipe, pulling jumps and stunts. Things to avoid include falling off and chairlift accidents! The faster and more complex the tricks the better the score awarded.

The snowboard trash reminded me of Foster's. It's a race down the hill against either a friend or a guy called Lester. You have to be the first to finish but making the other guy's tube go flat gives you a distinct advantage. There are traps to watch out for too as these may make you come unstuck.

The last event is acre series. You have to do a ski jump and perform loads of tricks. Staying up in the air for as long as possible is certainly a help too. There are some really wild tricks like the Moustache Flip and Daffy. All of the events are fairly playable and good graphically, but playing alone is unlikely to be entertaining for too long. See it before you part with the money.

TIME MACHINE

VIVID IMAGE -
$9.99 Tape,
$14.99 Disk

Time is relative. Does that mean that occasionally it will ease around and give you a big sloppy kiss and demand a score and a cup of tea? Ash, discovers . . .

Dear me, how I am in the prehistoric ages. Not a lot of righties - unless Pharaohly clubs turn you on that is. The whole planet seems to be a very hot place. Still, I thought that I was going to die when the terrorists tried to blow me and the time machine sky high. Instead of being killed the corporation blasted me 10,000,000 years back in time and now I'm in a lot of bother. Getting back to the present day will be hard enough but I've got to fix the time machine as

Neolithic Man never had it so good (and Ash, was bought lunch)

Hammerhead. Time Machine is a very worthy follow up to that title, and adds a new depth to the traditional idea of arcade adventuring. Professor Potts, the mad scientist, is set to become the world's first time advantage, because it means that he believes that his inventions will work - and so consequently they do, because belief is a powerful force! Unfortunately his previous time machine has been damaged, as the crystal that powers it has been lost in time. With your help Potts has to locate the crystal and repair the time machine, thus eroding the fatal blast from the bomb forever.

The problem is that the presence of the crystal has altered time, thus effectively destroying the future! Just think, if it would cease to exist and there would be no mag that caters for 64 owners exclusively. Anyhow, Potts is a subscriber and he doesn't want to miss a single issue, so he sets about altering the course of history to save the world.

Initially there is only one time zone. This means that Potts has to alter history significantly enough to create another age and so progress on down time. Each age is made up of a wrap around scene which is five screens wide. Each screen has its own features and items, all of which have some use or relevance. This use or relevance may not become apparent for millions of years though so don't hold your breath! At the top of the screen is a radar type warning system which spots the five different time zones. This looks like a stack of miniature screens. As you create a time zone its corresponding set of screens appears on the radar. The screens show as either green, orange or red. Green screens are safe, orange shows that there is some danger and red means that a temporal calamity is about to occur well, as it's been damaged by the bomb. Oh well, can't stand talking for the next 10,000,000 years, so much to do, so little time . . .

Time machine is the latest venture from Vivid Image. The Wofford-based design and programming team who were responsible for the brilliant traveller. However, he is beset by terrorists just before the machine's first operation, and is blown through time to ten million years B.C.

This would be a problem for most casual gamers. However, Professor Potts is by no stretch of the imagination a normal person. He is just a little bit eccentric. This is an

and that the Prof should get to that screen pretty damn quickly!

The puzzles are very basic and straightforward, for example the planet is too hot at the start of the game, and Potts has to find a way to cool it down. But this doesn't imply that the puzzle is easy to solve, just easy in theory. Being successful in this means that a new time zone will come into play with its own set of problems. The game requires switching between the various time zones that you have created to solve problems. Each screen looks similar to its sister locations in the other time zones but brilliant graphic work means that each looks as if years of erosion and evolution have occurred and so gives each zone a feeling of uniqueness. One example of the changes in the swamp - this is initially deep in prehistory, but by the ice age is much shallower and water to cross.

In order to complete the game you'll have to guide the Prof back and forth through the time zones, as

Fax

Market Forces

Activision are marketing the game, which is good because they've been around since almost as far back as prehistory. And there are no plans to produce a film of the game entitled "Back to the Future 4: Prof Potts axx it to em".

It looks as if we've got a jolly bunch of Arsenal supporters here!

different problems often need the resources of two or even more zones to solve. What may be inaccessible in one time zone will more than likely be available in the next. The game has been wonderfully designed with loads of great touches, like the Pterodactyl eggs that release a fairly flying taxi when shot with the Prof's home-made laser hands (also useful if the natives get unfriendly, as they drain energy from one of your four lives). Another of Potts' inventions are the teleport boxes.

These can be dropped on any screen in any zone and can be immediately returned to at a keypad. You only have four of these at your disposal though.

Graphically superb, technically brilliant - and thankfully the game only takes one load, which means no nightmareish multiloading system for each time you want to travel between zones. I cannot recommend this game highly enough. Most definitely the thinking man's arcade game with lots of nice twists and details. If you have any liking at all for exploring and puzzle solving with a hint of the whimsy to boot then get it yesterday.

I wonder why they don't want me to go in there? Full Fax please probably!

Many a Psygnosis game features great gameplay subtly woven into a long poetic plot with heavy strategic overtones and atmospheric artwork. Blood Money is a horizontal scrolling, hard 'n' heavy blast em to little pieces type of game that makes no apologies for itself. You are a space pilot out to earn Blood Money by shooting lots of nasties with your guns. By collecting the odd one your firepower becomes more and more awesome and your blood lust becomes all consuming.

It's not every day that a software house is so focused about their product. Many of them try to hide the mindlessness of their shoot em ups by wrapping them in loads of gaudy and story. Psygnosis obviously believe that honesty is the best policy and have gone to the other extreme. The story (rather thin, as you might imagine) is that you are interested in going on a space safari. There are four huge planets to visit. Each one costs a number of your credits. The higher levels cost more to reach so you'll have to earn enough from the lower levels in order to progress.

The game can be played by one or two players simultaneously. The game is of course teamwork but the chances are that you'll end up fighting over the power ups and cash. The power ups include rockets that shoot up or down the screen, neutron bombs for improved explosive power, a near missile and long range missile targeter. Also available are speed ups and extra lives. These can all be bought from the various in level shops that accept the currency you've been earning.

As you fight your way through the levels you'll notice the wide variety of alien death-dealing craft. From magic mushrooms to weird crabs and other mutants, the common

There is a great soundtrack behind the action which will get you in the mood for death dealing. Graphically the game is very bright and busy, with nice characters, but just a little too chunky for my liking. Superb if played by two players, good fun on your own and a good buy for shooting fiends.

POST APOCALYPSE

Hi Posty here again. We've received a lot of very strange and weird letters recently, and if anyone else asks who I really am, I'll come around their house and shove my 'imaginary' photon blaster up their... (The ravings of Posty have to be interrupted here in order to save many people embarrassment. We hope it hasn't affected your enjoyment of the magazine - Ed) ...For everybody else's sake here's the address to send your letters: Post Apocalypse, YC, Alphavite Publishing Ltd., 20 Kiln Farm, Potters Lane, Milton Keynes MK11 3HF.

HOME AND AWAY

I've just grabbed yer latest copy of YC to hit the Aussie newsgazette (the June issue) and it's mega-cool! I stuck the tape into my datassette and loaded the demo. Excellent!! I can't wait to buy the game! Only next time make it a playable demo.

Right, bung the other side in! I loves the logic game! Only when I go to enter my name it goes back to the title screen when I press fire for my first letter, then I can't start another game. Am I doing anything wrong?

Looking through the magazine I can say that it is good, except that it should have lots more colour (especially the review screenshots). I buy two other mags, Zap and C+VO, and they always have colour reviews, so how about gettin' the can of paint out and colour the reviews (and other stuff)? Also why don't you do arcade reviews?

When you do posters, how about sticking ads on the other side instead of reviews, etc. as I don't pull the poster out because of this, I think it ruins the mag?

LETTA OF THE MUNF!!

MORBID OR WHAT?

Sorry to hear that you're dead old chums. I suppose one C64 mag had to go, it's a bit of a shame though that it wasn't the other one. Oh well, I hope that Rik, Ash and the rest of the crew get back on their feet and that we see them on another mag pretty soon.

Harold Burlow, Blackpool

PA: Hal! There you go, just when you thought that we'd snuffed it, here we are with an even better magazine. The only prob is that we've gotta flog the headstone, any reasonable offers considered.

Also would you be able to distribute sister mag Commodore Disk User in Australia? I would be grateful and I think I am missing out on some great stuff.

Right, that's my lot for yer column. Now I'm off to read me Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles comics again.

Cowabunga!!
Adam Wade, South Australia

PA: Next ish you should see our first PLAYABLE demo in the way of Time Machine, and if you don't you can be assured that Rik will be strung up by his... Ahem!

As for the Logic prob who'dya think I am, Paul Eves or something? I'll get an answer for this and I'll send it to ya. And colour? Why don't ya get your own crayons and colour it in yourself? It's far more fun!

Neon Zone (the arcade column) will be back soon! The back of the posters are now other posters, so you get to choose which side to have on the wall, and as for ya last prob, what d'ya think the subscription forms are for?

DISAGREEMENT

I've just seen the latest YC under your new direction and although I think that it's rad, cool and really brill, I disagree with the review of Galaxy Force (by Godzilla?).

He says that the graphics are too blocky and jerky, but so was the arcade machine, and I feel that this is a very good copy. The gameplay is far more involved than Godzilla says and here are the scores that I would have given it:

Graphics 8
Sound 7
Fix Factor 8
Half-Life 8
Overall 79

Still not quite a YC Fun One, but a pretty decent game just the same.

Robert Young, Swansea

PA: Get outta here! I asked Rick what it was like, he showed me and I was ill for a week.

Joke of the munf!!!

How do you shoot a purple elephant?
With a purple elephant gun!

How do you shoot a pink elephant?
Squeeze its nose until it goes purple and then shoot it with a purple elephant gun!

Submitted by Beverly Gardner (Surely somebody can do better than this!)

STONE LOC (LETTER OF COMMENT)

So you've moved then! The mag looks different anyway, I think I like it but we'll leave it for a few issues before I'm totally satisfied. A few questions:

- 1) Where has Neon Zone disappeared to?
- 2) Why is there a poster of Back to the Future II?
- 3) Why is Kenny Delgish Soccer Match so bad?
- 4) What is your real identity, come on tell us all!

- 5) What the hell is Flamehead all about?
- 6) Who writes the Purple Puzzle Page?

I think that's about it. I'll catch ya later dude, probably!
Adam Shell, Mackney

PA: What sort of a name is Shell? Ah well, here's a few answers for ya:

- 1) See previous page.
- 2) Why not, it looks good!
- 3) Why do birds suddenly appear?
- 4) Death is quick for some, but not if you go on, unbeliever!
- 5) Ask Flamehead I suppose.
- 6) The Great Purple Fishlord of Cear, obviously.

COMICS

TEENAGE MUTANT NINJA TURTLES - THE MOVIE

Archie
Adventure
Series
$4.95

Cowabunga! Now that the turtles have been transformed from comic book heroes to big screen legends, the big screen legends have been transformed into comic book heroes. This is the official adaptation of the movie of the heroes in a half shell, and as a teaser to the cinematic version it's hot.

This is really because the adaptation is written by co-turtle creators Kevin Eastman and Peter Laird, and is superbly illustrated by them too. There's plenty of action and a plot that even Bartly would be proud of, if this is anything to go by, the film is gonna be a real stonkingly good one, and you should all cream into the flicks as soon as it's out, but first buy the comic book and eat pizza and stuff.

Mike Henderson

GREEN-GREY SPONGE-SUIT SUSHI TURTLES

Mirage Studios
$3.33

After you've read the official adaptation of the turtle movie you can read the official parody, but don't expect anything on the same par as Matt spoofs as this is more in the line of 'Corny-Cor'.

The plot of the original has been very tentaciously used as a basis for the plot of this 'n and it could be seen as much a parody of Matman and related types as the turtles themselves. All the characters are there in some form or another, although their names have been radically altered to suit small comical abilities, although you must be warned that the ninjabic weaponry are based on American items that were either sold over here during the seventies, or have never reached these shores.

Leonardo has become Velocitash, Michelangelo is Vicero, Donatello is Thysash, and Raphael becomes Premier Splinder, incidentally, is renamed Match-5th and looks very similar to a lumpy Mickey Mouse. And the humour throughout is very American.

coloured.
This is not too hot, and it would be best to take the missing out of the film yourself than to read this expensive parody.

Mike Henderson

ROBOCOP 2 - THE MOVIE

Marvel
$4.95

Coc, what a chunky book. And this Judge Dredd-like character finally gets a Judge Dredd script writer, and boy do the similarities notice.

Alan Grant takes the writing chores on this official adaptation, and it needed someone with immense experience to make a comic out of an incredibly violent, gory movie (see review elsewhere in this column). Alan has changed the plot quite radically in order to comply with the Comic Book Code, and possibly made it a darn sight more enjoyable. It even flows in a different order (i.e. the meeting with Alex Murphy's wife is near the end of the comic, and at the beginning of the film) and makes a little more sense.

RoboCop is put up against a new designer drug called 'Nuke', a new RoboCop (surprisingly called RoboCop 2), and just about 1000 new directives such as "Don't monopolize the bathroom". There is almost as much action as in the movie and the comic is a good laugh.

DICK TRACY VS THE UNDERWORLD

Fleerway
£1.50

Another hit film based on a comic character (and not the best by no means) was Dick Tracy and in true rebranding form there is a revitalisation in Dick Tracy comics. Fleerway has got the right idea though, and has released two new Dick Tracy stories that deal with the events that lead up to the movie, the origin of Breathless Mahoney, the background of Al Capone, and the death of his father's father.

And instead of copying the style of Chester Gould (the creator of Dick) Kyle Baker has made his Dick Tracy look not unlike Warren Deatty. His artwork is flat, and very atmospheric (other examples of Kyle's work can be seen in the DC graphic novels Justice Inc.). The stories are by John Moore and they are very accurate, and great fun.

If you want a taste of Dick Tracy that is up-to-date and is accurate to the Dick portrayed by Deatty buy this book and the other two (including the film adaptation) they're absolute mugs.

Rik Henderson

Perhaps it could've been better drawn, but as it is it looks like a stock Marvel comic.

Rik Henderson

GIVE ME LIBERTY #1

Dark Horse Comics
$4.95

Frank Miller (Dark Knight Returns, Elekta Assassin) and Dave Gibbons (Watchmen, Roger Tappan) are both united from immense success over separate comic ventures, and

although it would be hard to judge on just one issue it looks as though Dave has performed his best ever and Frank his worst.

There is no doubt that Give Me Liberty is superbly written, but the plot very definitely smacks of the early Third World War stories in Crisis. This may alter in future episodes but at the current time we have to sit and bear it in order to appear fashionable.

Dave Gibbons's artwork is very good indeed far better than his work on Watchmen, and Robin Smith's colouring is similar to a typical Jim Balise comic.

Although Liberty deals with politics, it manages to do it in a way that educates more than it bores. If you want something that is a better version of what has gone before, this is your kind of thing. If not, wait until the second issue, and see if it changes radically enough.

Rik Henderson

'18'

People said that Robocop (the original picture) was overly violent, I disagreed. Robo2 has concerned the latest in a war's experts, and I would say that it's far more gory.

This is not normally a reason for me to dislike a film, but when night-on every minute is full of blood-spilling action there the pace and the feel of the film both become secondary. Also all of the humour contained within the original seems to have been watered down.

and is scarcely represented in the sequel.

All is not doom and gloom however, the effects are incredibly good indeed, and the fight sequences are very well choreographed. There are lots of 'top/bot' events and the dialogue seems to have been thought about a little more. Perhaps the major problem with the movie is the direction.

Paul

Walters (the director of the first)

preferred to stick to Total

Foetal, and instead Irvin

Kershner (who has also directed The Empire Strikes Back

and Honor Thy Father and Mother, two films that rely a lot on their action sequences) takes the helm, and unsuccessfully in my eyes.

This will be a filler on video and has already made big bucks in the US, so it really doesn't matter what I say, but under 10 so aren't really missing much.

BARGAIN BUCKET

POSEIDON PLANET ELEVEN

Hi Tec Software
£2.99

With the unacceptably poor plot backgrounds for most budget games you'd think that the greenhouse effect was down to a select few software houses that have decided to break down the same layer in order to create a storyboard (the software house effect more like). Whether this is true or not, in time focussed tradition the planet Earth has died due to the greenhouse effect, according to the cover of Poseidon Planet Eleven, and the human race has upgraded and shifted to the said planet.

Unfortunately this is not a nice place to live, but there is an even more horrible place, just below the planet's surface. And also unfortunately for you, you have to go there, because the planet is overheating and there are eight crystals down below that will cool it down if taken to the core.

In this arcade adventure you plet around searching for the crystals whilst all sorts of bugs and beasts try to gnaw away at your pants. It is vitally important to map this on but only if you can stay awake for long enough.

The animation of the main character is very poor indeed and the graphics in general leave a lot to be desired. Not even budget quality I'm afraid.

The last thing Yogi wants is to be behind bars in a zoo especially if there's a "Don't Feed the Animals Policy", so you must help him to escape out of Jellystone Park before it closes, progressing through six jam-packed and mega fun levels, avoiding obstacles such as Indians, snakes, ghosts, spiders and falling coconuts, amazingly. You have to be quick though as Ranger Smith and the tracker dog will be sure to capture you and take you to the dreaded zoo. Along the way are special bonus items to collect such as picnic baskets, hamburgers and toffee apples. For the smarter games player who wants special bonuses there are 8 pieces of Yogi's car, bags of money or cowboy hats to collect.

The game is not easy but that's what gives it that just one more go quality. It's fun to play though and definitely "better than the average budget game"!!

SPACE RIDER JET PACK CO

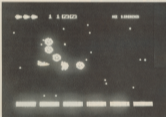

Hi Tec Software

Ever wondered what it would be like to float around space equipped with the latest in space suit technology out on a different planet? Space Rider Jet Pack Co. promises you this unique opportunity, but personally I believe 10 hours of the Space Rider equipped with the latest in CD Walkers would take you further into oblivion.

As chief test pilot for the "Space Rider" Jet pack Company you are sent to the 23rd planet (couldn't figure out the 23rd reference) to test the latest S-F, M&B Jet Pack (sounding more like electronic toothpaste dispenser than a space suit). While there you also have to collect important and valuable minerals for use in the SF research lab. Sounds a "sitch" eh? You've guessed though there are hazards, well a few. Gravity is a bit weird on Planet 23 and can send you floating off in odd directions. You must also watch out for and blast the alien forms who guard the cave structures with their bubbly lives claiming the planet is their property (as far as I'm concerned, they can keep it) then there's little things

Remember Hi-Type? Of course ya do. You'd have to be a few peanuts short of a packet not to. But do you remember Nemesis, the game that it was essentially based on? Well, you're likely to do that as well, but it not do not despair, we'll not tell.

Nemesis was right on the first big coin-op blast-em-to-balls that offered varied weaponry for your ship if you collected icons. It was a horizontal scroller and it was a pig to beat (unlike Hi-Type, which was relatively easy in comparison). Konami originally converted it, and due to the poor advertising campaign and the distinct lack of magazine support it got-poo'd out of the charts without so-much-as-it-by-your-bait.

This was a shame and thanks to The Hi Squad we get another chance to sample its great graphics and gameplay. It's perhaps a little simple compared to the monsters being sent onto the market today, but it's worth two copies of many of them.

Another of Hi Tec's excursions into cartoon licenses sees one of the more obscure Hanna Barbara teams appear in an arcade adventure kind of thing. Although the only one of the pair that you really ever see is Ruff (the small orange pussycat who must leap and bound around a planet rescuing small blue aliens, or vice his friend Reddy will locate the worst part of a laser grid).

There are many obstacles in his way though, mainly involving other aliens and parts of the planetscape. And also scattered around are bonus points in the way of objects that you can collect. The controls are much the same as those used in any games of this type, but the graphics are the cream in this jolly big pudding. They porting a very cartoony feel and are immensely colourful. This is not really a game for a young child, due to its level of difficulty, more a games player with the same mentality, I liked it.

Well, yes but Prince Clumsy is actually better than the official version, and offers slightly more in the fact that it is an arcade adventure. You have to bound around a medieval background and find keys in order to open a portcullis at the end of each level and you must find the fair princess on the last screen.

The most impressive thing about this is not the gameplay, although it's just about as addictive as most, but the graphics are easily the quality of many hit-price games. Makes sense, doesn't it? Four of Codemasters' best sports simulators are revisited on this excellent budget compilation, and the most impressive thing is that any of these games would still impress if they were on their own. Grand Prix Simulator is a little like Super Sprint, and for my money this was far better than its very own sequel, and was one of the highlights of the Codemasters range.

Pro Ski Simulator won countless awards and rightly so. The controls take a while to get the hang of but once you do you realise this is fairly like a Super Sprint in 3D and on snow. The graphics are pretty neat too.

Pro Snooker Simulator is possibly the weakest of the bunch, and you can only play it with two players.

That said, it's better than Steve Davis' Snooker and has a very nifty option in the fact that you see your cue, and you must hit the ball much like real life.

But the granddaddy, and undoubtedly the best, game on this pack is BMS Simulator, the one which Codemasters grin. Programmed by Richard Darling himself, everything is right about it for a budget price.

A brilliant 'bargain' pack, and you'll not get better value for money apart from buying a copy of YC for £1.99 and getting 344 games on every cassette.

MOMI - HOW I LOVE YA!

The South Bank, home of the radist of skateboarders, and a place to chill. In the 90 degree heat that we've had this summer Erik Henderson and his entourage photographer Jeffery "Born to Lig" Davy, trucked down to the Museum of The Moving Image and checked out the dopest tourist attraction around.

When the weather is hot, hot, HOT and you're wearing your most fashionable jeans that you possess (all the rest are in the washing machines), along with your biggest of shorts (the last thing you want is to hang around a packed Waterloo Station waiting for a rather late companion. But when he arrived with shades on and skating wildly up the escalator with a large, metal photography case flapping around, cradling the other passengers, then laughter just about caused any tension set before hand. After this any museum would seem like a picnic in comparison.

But No. The Museum of The Moving Image is not bean sandwich and a litre of ginger beer, nope you should be prepared before hand to spend long hours of informative fun. We strolled through the door expecting it to be quiet and looking forward to a couple of hours of uninfanted browsing, but there were screaming hordes of Neighbourhood fans sticking bubble-gum in each others hair and flicking boogers at each other and things. That's right it was schmoozing-squash-whom's-the-teacher time? There were about three groups of these bubble so we had the right atmosphere.

And for a moment we thought that this 'Felix Basti' from Fritz Lang's Metropolis was the real thing!

Once we managed to burst our way into the museum we realised that it was arranged in a chronological manner (it was set through different time periods, John!) so we had a look at the really dull film animation parts, and quickly sped to the 'What The Fluter Saw' naughtily peepable machines. These cost ten pence a go, so after we'd blown the entire '10' on the road budget and had one go we plodded around to find other exhibits that you could poke, switch or prod. Unfortunately it was very difficult to wade through the first pack in order to do so.

Luckily there is an abundance of such gadgets, so for an cool cabbie it was brilliant time in South Bank city and after we'd slipped past all the intricate geography sections, and the Birth of Hollywood film. Hollywood was waiting outside smoking a huge cigar, we came up to the German expressionist period, and scenes of a film that was suggested for the more mature of visitors (we pretended to be grown ups, so we could stick around). Nothing much happened, just a girl standing there with her mouth agog, and a bloke with his mouth agog and that was about it for us, so we trucked over to the MOMI Control Room and I watched ten minutes of excellent foxy on one of the sports channels of satellite TV.

Then it was on to the coming of sound, which was portrayed using the ancient Al Jolson singing blaring, kind of 'touching don't like think. Then it was a quick dash through the animation studio, and loads of bits sprayed around showing on Zastropo strips in order to see their work really MOVE. And then, around the corner, came the exhibit that really emphasizes the feel of MCM.

The Hollywood set, in front of the splendid reconstructed Odessa cinema front (full size, or' all, is a place full of things to do, and it is here that we found the first 'live' exhibit, in the shape of an actress performing, well, err, an actress who tentatively tried to drum up some interest in the American tourists studying the wild western set. Eventually a bunch of kids, with Zastropo strips clasped firmly in miffs, stroked onto the scene and a camera tent was arranged with the public forced to don cowboy hats, and a great fun time was had by all, even Jeffrey, although I will never know how to get his camera in THAT angle.

And from that moment there is less to read and more to do, and actors and actresses come from every angle in order to force an increase on the realize side. They're a bit like the guards outside Buckingham Palace, no matter how much you verbally prod them, they'll not stray from their roles. It is also a bit more recognizable for us that hasn't been around for half a century. And once you have passed through the MCM cinema, where you can watch a whole film if you so much desire, and once seen the projection room, it's TV time when such stars as Muffin the Mule and Captain Scarlet are on show, along with a few of the TVs throughout the ages.

This is where they have an enormous video jubilee, showing pop culture from the 50s to current films. All you do is select a topic and you'll see a few mad clips from one of the better movies of the genre. I predictable chose horror and we were there for hours watching clips from films like Friday the Thirteenth (it was amusing to see the forfather of numerous horror films, such as Friday the Thirteenth 2, 5 and 12).

It was once we had gone down the stairs that we realised that something awesome was in us. Something so sacred that for a moment I thought we had found the holy grail. But no, for there before us was Kyle's Wedding Dress. Assup, scream! What a moment for all the Neighbours fans that stood around it with blank expressions and mouths open as if worshipping a new form of god, the god of mass hysteria.

Fears were further realised at the Neighbours exhibit where a bunch of girls (who were standing in front of Sooty - sacrilege!) watched the same five minute clip of a November 1988 episode around three times. They've been traumatised, anyway (there and away is miles better).

Also had a good old chuckle at Alf Garnet's bigotry in the toilet, and it was then that the interview with Barry Norman was a must for an aspiring megastar like myself. Such classic words were uttered from myself ("what do you see your television for, education or purely entertainment?") says Barco. "A fish bowl", offers the biggest of EOs that all the spectators seemed to dash with immense admiration to the loo. After such brilliance I didn't really want to force myself reading the news down everybody's throats too, a few minutes of me on the box is enough for now.

And a quick look at the Science Fiction display was about it. Done the stairs was the special changing exhibit (or so it says in my programme), and my guess was that it was in red special changing mode because a hail of builders were shifting bits of wood around. Ah well.

So the day came to a close and only because we skipped huge sections. If we'd have stopped and have done absolutely everything, we'd still be in there now. There is so much to see that this is one of the most entertaining museums I have ever been to. Forget usability and maintaince and looks the size of the yellow pages, convince your teacher to take the class to MOMI. And if you don't go to school for you're banking off or something! get a parent to take you, you'll learn so much about the box in the corner of your room, or the history behind the traditional Ples pit. By the way it is not somewhere to go shopping with your girlfriends, or else you might be mistaken for an exhibit yourself.

Legends tell of a certain breed of great adventurers, the order of the Bloodwych. These great heroes would take on all comers and defeat all foes in the pursuit of their quests. Now they have to be called upon again to rescue the land of Truzen. The problem is this. There was a member of the Bloodwych called Zerdick. He was wise and powerful, yet his greed and ambition were his downfall and he became evil, finally destroying the land's guardian dragons. You have to take four adventurers through the deadly monster-infested maze of Trudolshup and defeat Zerdick.

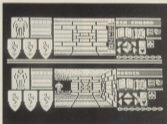

To perform this task you have to guide your adventurers through the tricks and traps of the castle, find the four crystals of storing and use them to destroy the evil tyrant. This is not going to be easy however, as a mind of evil genius (not to mention the programmer) has designed the ultimate in evil mazes. Just to make the place maintain its eerie atmosphere the place has been populated with mutated Tzaboians, demons and creations of the blackest magic. These devicers will test your abilities to their full extent as you strive for everlasting light and goodness.

You start the game with only two party members. You have to find the other sixteen members of the Bloodwych and choose two more to give you the best fighting chance against Zerdick. There are four types of party members. Each is represented by a suite in cards, i.e. hearts, diamonds, clubs and spades. The spades are fighters, strong in combat but weak in the grey matter department. Basically these fighters hit anything that answers them back, or even things that don't actually move or speak.

Clubs represent the mages, who are skilled in the use of magic and spellcasting and also double as clerics for when the party gets injured. They are well versed in all kinds of arts and, and whenever a magical problem comes up they can be reasonably expected to sort it out. The hearts are adventurers, all-round heroes who can become advanced in all skills but rarely become master of one in particular. Finally the diamonds are archers or assassins who are sneaky and skilled in accuracy and quick death, but the person you'd most want working behind the counter of a chemist.

The characters can be viewed on screen. This brings up a list of their stats in graphical form as well as their vital statistics and armour class etc. The mages have a spell book that can be viewed and spells selected. The game is joystick driven using icons, in other words you don't need to type in any of the commands whilst adventuring. Spells are selected straight from the pages of the book and cast at a press of the fire button.

You can dismiss characters from the party, reprimand them for bad actions or encourage them when things go alright. Dismissed members can be resummoned if necessary and the whole party can rest to regain spell and hit points. The movement is also icon driven which I felt was a mistake, as it is too easy to make a wrong turn by misclicking on the rather small icons.

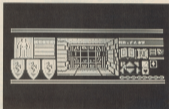

As you explore you are bound to come across a monster or two. Most people are unlikely to be diplomatic in such circumstances and will no doubt die straight in to the fray.

Combat is a combination of clever thinking, preparation and good reflexes. What you don't have to can be very costly. With practice however you can get over the worst of the difficulties. The problems really are with spells because you have to select the power of the spell as well as its name which can take all too long when you're about to become a dragon's lunch.

Various magical items will be encountered along the way which will aid you in your quest. Powerful weapons and armours, scrolls, rings and wands of power are just a few of the things you can expect to find. After a few hours your characters can start looking like Arnold Schwarzenegger on steroids. As you progress and successfully perform actions and make kills, your ratings improve and you become even more powerful. Unfortunately the monsters also increase in might and cunning.

Blackchrych could have been a really nice game, however its fiddliness makes it annoying to play fight in real time you do have to make the commands for the characters to obey. This means selecting spells and instructing them to fight in real time and a mistake and at times so frustratingly difficult to control that you'll probably give up. A nice try but it won't be everyone's idea of their favourite game ever.
