GERMAN

Golditz, that yoko-oid boardgame that you used to lose all the cards and counters for when you were younger, and you always wanted another copy of as you grew up because you remembered it to be a right stonker of a game, especially when all your friends come round to play, is soon to hit the USA care of Digital Magic Software.

The company, who hail from the over-so-trendy nightspot of Widsnes, has sent us some wonderful promotional pictures of the staff going ape-banana-crazy with Germanic Nazi uniforms on and leaping around a local church pretending to be soldiers/convicts (a. Tony Adams) during the war. Apparently these were shot in a church because it was the nearest local landmark that resembled Golditz. Unfortunately it looks about as convincing as one of Jeremy Beadle's false beards. If you want the right atmosphere you should try your local NHS hospital, then you'll be going some way as to the agony the soldiers were going through.

One thing stands out though, apart from the fact that the game looks brilliant, is that the console (64 version) is being programmed by Eto Pettullo, the guy who also supplied you lucky lot with Limbo and Limbo II (games on our previous tapes), so you can bet you'll be getting some wicked code (by the way Eto's the one with the long coat on, who's leaping the wall in the piccy).

Look out for our review pretty shortly.

Doan has smashed and grabbed the rights to convert the popular Williams' coin-op Smash TV.

The Gauntlet-style four player coin op which, if you don't already know, is a futuristic, overhead view, combat game full of weapons' violence. It promises to be a real stonker too, being programmed by Probe and it should reach the shops by the middle of the year... um, smashing!

Also planned for Christmas next year is Terminator 2, which is to be based on the new movie of the same name starring Arnold Schwarzenegger and Billy Idol. Being the sequel to one of the best written science fiction thrillers you can bet that it'll be as action packed as a walk through a Beirut park.

Joy To The World

Spectravideo, the firm that used to market Quikshot joysticks, has launched a new joystick manufacturing company called Logic 3. And to celebrate the fact the company is launching Sting-ray II wonder if Gerry Antonson knows all about it, a joystick that looks a bit like a hair-dryer but will let you wipe them aliens as fast as you can say (Spoo-trá-vi-vi... eem... Spooktro... er... joystick.

Logic 3 is so proud of the little beauty that Spectravideo boss, Ashvin Patel, said "We see Logic

3 as the BMW of the joystick world and the Sting-ray is the ultimate zapping machine." Aaah! If Logic 3's the BMW then who's the Rolls Royce? And who would own up to being the Neilam Robin? Only time will tell, but catch the next issue of YC - the Ferrari of the newsgroups - for a joystick round-up where we'll sort the Skodas from the Panches.

Incidentally, the Sting-ray will be priced at £14.95 for a standard quality version, and £15.95 if you want autofocus as well.

JOY TO THE WORLD '82' REMIX

Not to be left out, Active Distribution has signed a marketing agreement with Champ joysticks in the U. S. of A. This means that all those stanky games took that the yanks have been using and enjoying so much, will now be available in Fred Skoggs' corner software emporium.

The first for us comic owners will be the Yoke - a yoke-style joystick, of course, with full throttle control, a fire button on each arm, full 90 degree turn, and thumb screws to clamp-onto title (or to re-act the Spanish Inquisition on your Oriented when he's asleep). This will undoubtedly make F-14 Combat Pilot a darn better game (could it be any better than it is now?), but for the shunky price of £49.00 you'd better have lots of wonga in your pocket.

JACK'S BACK

Elite's jumping platform puzzle game is to make an explosive reappearance, promising to be bigger and meaner than the previous two Bombjack games, with a playing area covering 17 levels and incorporating over 250 adventure screens.

Mighty Bombjack, which is to be released about now (good £2.99/£12.99) is likely to be bouncing up to No. 1 in the charts in a similar fashion to its two predecessors.

BIG HORRIBLE FURRY ONES!

Arachnophobia - the fear of spiders and not Saddam Hussein - is about to grip even the calmest of computer owners in the near future. Disney Software, which is currently working on Duck Tales and Dick Tracy, will also be converting the latest of Spielberg blockbuster to fit our cinema screens.

Arachnophobia, the film, follows the plight of Dr. Ross Jennings, his wife and two children when they move out to Casalina, a eerie, picturesque kinda place (the type ya more dreams of). However, the

Jennings' soon find out they are not the only new kids on the block and that there's a rather unexpected big, hairy guest in their barn who, in the following few days, knocks off a few of the leading citizens, goes forth and multiplies, turns the neighbourhood into a web of chaos and supplies people with permanent acid marks. The film mixes Hitchcock suspense with humour and it plays on what happens when people's phobias run amok. Dr. Jennings is the Indiana Jones type dude who has to first overcome his arachnophobia before he faces the badies and saves the neighbourhood.

The computer game sure promises lots of spider slattering and arcade action and should not be left unattended near whispering females!

BIG, BIIIGGGG, COCK UPS (DOER!)

Err... Err... When we got the last issue back we were quite surprised that there was a humungous big cock-up involving two of the pages.

The pages in question are 33 and 36, where not only has the end of the Accolade in Action review been mislaid, but the page that was originally supposed to be printed on page 36 has been split into two wrong halves and distributed over the two pages in question. We hope that this has not impaired your enjoyment of YC (it probably made to sail about the floor in laughter) and we promise that those responsible will be beaten about the head and goaded with a very large stick.

For those who were interested in the Accolade review the overall score for the compilation was 78% and it is recommended for those who are after a fast racing game or a superb American Footy sim.

Oh, by the way, pages 64 and 65 in that issue were swapped around too! Sorry!!

RIK'S AN 'IN' SORT OF CHAPPIE

This year's In-Cin was held at the Intercontinental Hotel in London and is the industry's Shen-Dig and awards ceremony attended by the rich and famous of computer games companies, magazines, shops and distributors - anyone who's anyone. On a cold December night, Rik (who's he?) actually took off his pants and dived on his Pierre Cardin shirt, dikkie bow and dinner jacket. He mingled, drank, tried to eat posh food, drank, was entertained by Julian Clary, drank, oh, and represented YCI!

He came back with a feedbag and a crumpled piece of paper covered in booze with the results of the awards for us. After sipping from down, here are the results:

Budget Game of the Year - Interceptor Range
Video Game of the Year - John Madden

Football, Electronic Arts
Adventure Game of the Year - Captive, Mindscape
Simulation of the Year - F19 Stealth Fighter, Microprose
Academe Game of the Year - Speedball 2, Imaginware
Promotion of the Year - Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles, Imaginware
European Magazine of the Year - Zzap
Technical Most -
Microprinter, Microprose
Development Team of the Year - Core Design
Licensed Property of the Year - Lotus Esprit Turbo Challenge, Gremlin
Overall Game of the Year - Captive, Mindscape
Software House of the Year - Ocean
Industry Achievement -
Commodore

As you can see there were very few awards that went to 16-bit games and this does not bode well for the future.

Once while I was having a rain of fire blasted in my face by the big eyeball monster, but after I unleashed my ultimate weapon he was never quite the same again.

TURRICAN II

So this is the final fight, eh? Oh yeh, until Turrican III that is! But we'll be happy with this'un for a while, or will we? Rik Henderson gets into his Spam can suit and gobs flame pustules at sikkle innocent frogs and things.

Mongul is dead, humph! But you get rid of one foul-smelling nasty alien jobbo and another one takes his place. Unfortunately, although you'd planned to buy a small cottage on the planet of pleasure, settle down with a can of tuna and raise a few singulls, a distress call has been sent from a small planet and you're the first man to save it (the one out of the Wizard of Oz was on holiday at the time).

So it's time once again to get out your ultimate weapon (S&S - cops wrong review) and traverse the caves and mazes that you're so adept at. And Turrican II, though it's very similar to its former game, is so much sexier and ever so more advanced. It seems as though all the great bits of Turrican have been lifted and the bits we never liked have been thrown out of the window and replaced with funkier counterparts. But how do you make the best shoot-em-up ever better?

This is a weird question, really.

because I don't know. There's not really that much different about Turrican II than its prequel. The amount of screens in the layouts are the same, and the playability seems identical, but at least this is what we want.

There will be one or two of you who've never heard of Turrican and the following section is just for you (everybody else can go and put on their Stone Henge LP or something and hang loose for a while).

Turrican II is much the same as most platform games apart from the fact that the levels are gigantic, and you have tonnes of weaponry to give you a better chance against the plethora of chunky badies.

It's a case of fight your way through the caverns/labyrinth and find the end-of-level nasty, where you'll either get your tits well and truly kicked (like me) or you'll live to smug again, and again, and again. And while you're travelling you collect diamonds that give your score a major boost.

There's also a level of pure shoot-em-up action where our man in a can leaps into a superb-zakki fighter craft, and you find yourself plunged into a horizontal scroller of the quality that only the company behind X-Out and Demaris could give. It's got mega loads of meemies to blast and the type of pick-up-extras gameplay that we have come to expect. But the main game itself offers so much anyway that this section is just a bonus.

As you explore, you'll come across icons that can be collected, and they can give you anything from a little bit more energy to an extra life, with a few scattered death-coughing mega-blasters in between. You'll also find yourself with an enormous range of backgrounds. A lot of the time on the earlier levels being spent under water.

The major improvements on the original are the small graphical extras and the size of the end-of-level monsters (they truly are monsters too). One of which is over three screens big, proving that the comic can do it too, who needs a 16-bit machine.

The gameplay (as I've previously mentioned) is just the same as Turrican's, and follows the 'if it's successful then it out again and again' stable. But thankfully that was what made Turrican great, and fortunately Turrican II, if there's such

Of all the meemies seemed to get meemies, and before I knew it I was grabbed by the... big one-type thing (you thought I was going to say goodness, didn't you?)

a phrase, greater. The graphics are spiffy, the sonics are spiffy and the game as a whole is so gigantic that it'll take average games players absolutely zonks to get anywhere. There are very few games that are better than this Germanic effort, and certainly none of them offer such joystick mashing action.

VIZ

Rik Henderson reviews the rudest, most obscene game in the history of the commie, and he tries to do it without using any naughty words. It's erm... It's er... Oh knackers!!! Let's get on with it (Fnaar! Fnaar!)...

This is the big one (K-yak! K-yak!), it's just the job for inserting into your floppy (Usur! Usur!), it'll keep you wagging your joystick for hours (Gawwawaw! Gawwawaw!). So let's take it in hand (Shtink!pff!) and give it a good probing (Wood Wood Fnaaar! Fnaaar! Aaaa! Aaaa! Etc.).

It's no secret that Viz comic is one of the biggest phenomena in the last decade. Starting as a small farthing sale for beer money, within ten years it is rumored to be selling over 1 million copies every two months. And this is without the ancillary sales of merchandise (T-shirts, books, etc.), add it all together and we are talking big wangs. But why?

It all boils down to the average mentality of the British adult population. They like rudery and double entendres, and they'll welcome any publication that can give it to them. What makes Viz as a cut above the rest though is the fact that its humour, as blatantly visible as it comes, is clearly written and splendidly drawn, and the characters are fluid for their faults.

It's natural therefore to grab such a license by the short and purdle for prostitution, although minors (young people, not Arthur Scargill) will have to wear a false beard if they want to have a copy all for themselves.

But who could give us such tasty farefocery? None other than Virgin (Fnaar!) and Probe (K-yak!), who have linked up before to give us excellent comic conventions (remember the entire Gan Carn series!). Although this time they've taken on a much harder task (Anybody sniggers again and I'm off).

The first thing that was decided was that the game shouldn't be toned down to comply with a younger market (and quite right too). In fact when Virgin was asked if they wanted such a version, its response was "F-----! G-----!". And boy has a tasty comestible been produced.

You play any one of the three most popular characters, Biffa Bacon, Johnny Fatpants, and Buster Gonard, and you can choose who to assist with the help of a very colourful (F) opening screen. Each character has certain erm... characteristics that can help you during play. Biffa can either punch or go into a larger frenzy, Buster can bounce on his overgrown testicles, or vary them in a wholebarrow, and Johnny can pump air through his anal passage (causing him to propel himself forward) (he can either do a small puff or a giant Boston cheer).

The aim of the main part of the game is to race across a horizontally scrolling landscape, avoiding the other Viz characters and other hazards, and lead your fellow chums to the finishing line. There are five of these stinking levels and they get increasingly harder as you progress.

If you happen to stumble upon an obstacle, you'll end up in your posterior, do this three times and your little sprite will bugger off. In between these levels are sub-games, two for each character, and this is where the real fun for what Viz is all about is expressed.

If you're Johnny Fatpants your subgame (you can choose which one you wish to do) are a fart up the pole competition, to see how high you can get by dropping one, or you must time up balloons with your return in time for the little girls party.

As little Biffa Bacon you can either see how many pits

The Viz Characters

you can drink in the time limit, or people will throw bricks at you and you have to head, punch or kick them back.

Buster Gonard's first subgame is similar to Johnny's, but you must bounce your way to the top of the goals using your unfeasibly large sneakers, or alternatively, the pancake machine at the Fletcher bakery has broken down and you can use your talents (?) to help batter the dough.

Most of these games are joystick waggles (what else?), and depending on how well you do you'll be awarded tokens. Each token allows you to use one of your extended powers, and in any one subgame you can earn up to 6 of them. If you fail it doesn't matter though 'cause you'll not lose a life.

Although the gameplay sounds a tad simple, it's the hilarity in the graphics and the variety of tall joint characters that impress the most. For instance, if you come across Shaky you'll be sent haywire and your controls will alter while he is playing his kind of music.

A bonus for us Commie owners is that Viz was designed and originally programmed on our machines, so we've got the original game, and there's no reason why it isn't the best version. For a start the graphics are superb, and they're very true to their crude cartoon counterparts, and there are a lot of them to choose from. The whole of Viz seems to be represented apart from Billy The Fish, because the programmer doesn't like him, although I feel that he could warrant a game all to himself.

The whole package is enhanced by the running commentary by Roger Mella, although this could very well be the reason why it won't be sold to those that would appreciate the humour most. To say that his language is anything less than nasty would be an

Johnny Partington - Party by name and party by nature. If you're looking for a champion in the trouser number style, for real brassie amateurs you need look no further than the boy whose favourite movie is undoubtedly gone with the wind. Favourite saying - "Yinks!"

Buster Gonard - The lad with the unfeasibly large testicles. His plums were hit by a magical ray, and they increased in size to gigantic proportions. Now he uses them to get into and out of unford scrapes. Favourite saying - "Plum Power!"

Diffs Bacon - The lad of the Bacon family, a group of 'ard b*s with more muscles than brains. His favourite hobby is going to the pub and drinking many pints of lager, and then many more. Favourite saying - "Did you spill my pint?"

understatement.

If you've been on being naughty and you promise that you'll not let your mum see you play this, it'd be a cracker of an idea to get this game, it'll have you laughing all the way to adulthood (when you can get the comic for yourself). Viz is just the job for playing with yourself (K-yuk K-yuk).

With three characters to choose from, games are varied every time and the humour is just based at the correct base level to keep me amused. Viz is a true milestone in Commie games.

TURRICAN II DEMO

Supplier: Rainbow Arts
Type: Playable demo - Arcade Action
Controls: Joystick in port two
 The Mighty Morgal is dead, you offed him in spectacular style at the end of the first game, but another threat to intergalactic peace has arisen. Now you've been asked to do the job again, and in much the same way as before.

To make this easier during the demo, and to allow you to see more of the scenery, you've got 99 lives to play with (considerably more than the real thing), but the gameplay is identical.

When you've reached the end of the level you'll be greeted with a message (so there's even something to play for).

Quad is Breakout with a difference. In fact, it should be called Break-in. Instead of just one fiddly little bat at the base of the screen, you have four bats, one for each side. This time, you've got those bricks surrounded!

You control the bats at top and bottom with joystick left/right, and the left and right bats with up/down. Unlike all other games of this sort, you do not lose a life if the ball gets past your bat. In fact, the ball never leaves the screen - the point is to stop it bouncing off the side. The penalty for letting the ball past is that you lose a brick from the screen.

You might think that an advantage, since what you need to do is get rid of the bricks. But no, because the brick lost does not count towards your score, and reduces the number left for you to score on. Since you need a certain number of bricks to get on the next screen each time, this can lead you to be trapped at the same level all over again.

The counters at the top of the screen will give you an idea of your current situation. The Need figure shows you how many bricks you want to get to the next frame, and the Got figure shows you how many you have towards your total. If you are in a frame, you must still clear all bricks present to progress.

However, you must be careful that you don't lose enough penalty points to drop the need figure below that you need to complete the frame, otherwise you'll have to do it all over again. Devilish, eh?

If, in the process of clearing the screen, the Got counter drops to zero, or on completing a screen you fail to achieve the Need value, one life will be lost. Lives are shown by the smiling faces. When all three are gone, the game ends. No extra lives will be given.

There are eight screens in all, and besides this, the game offers a number of options. It can be played with one or two players - one player controlling the left/right bat, the other controlling the up/down. The bat size can be made large or small, or the ball speed made fast or slow. All these options are chosen after the game has loaded as follows:

F1 - Number of players. Toggles between one and two.

F3 - Bat size. Toggles between large and small.

F5 - Bat speed. Toggles between fast and slow.

F7 - Starts game.

RUNAWAY

Programmer: Christopher Heister

Type: Complete game - Adventure

Controls: Keyboard

Runaway is based inside your house. Your parents have gone away for the day, leaving the house empty except for you. The object of the game is to escape the house before your parents return - to become a runaway because you've decided that you can't stand your home life anymore.

This is a simple store room. Boxes sit on a desk, along the wall, across a table, and a lot of other things. You'll have to be careful not to forget them.

You are in your cosy bedroom yet it seems strangely unfamiliar. There's a variety of furniture and two doors leading south and west.

Your parents, unfortunately, being aware of your feelings, have left the whole house seemingly locked up (or have they?). Can you discover the hidden keys and make full use of the available objects in order to escape in time?

Runaway requires the text input in classic noun/verb form, although adjectives are catered for. Examples would be GET GREY KEY or OPEN SOUTH DOOR. Movement is via the usual NORTH, SOUTH, EAST and WEST systems, and many abbreviations are supported.

BAZAR

Type: Complete game - Arcade Action

Controls: Joystick in port two

It is said that in the Bazar system, somewhere on the Galactic Rim, there are nine planets, each more inaccessible than the last. On each planet is a city, and in each city is an electronic key of such a nature that it can be used to command the ship that will carry the fortunate traveller to the next city inwards. It is also said that in the ninth city will be found the key to the mastery of all time and space.

None have come into possession of the secret, for many perils encompass the cities and planets. The key to each city is in each case protected by fast moving robot guardians. Should a quivering hero wish to remain non-posthumous they were wise to step swiftly.

Once in possession of the key, the voyager's problems will start. For each of the craft that will be needed to penetrate further into the system is protected by a lake of mineral acid so corrosive that it will reduce a living being to a solution of ions in milliseconds. A network of floating platforms pass over the dreaded lake, and swiftness and dexterity will be needed to master the pattern of their movement. But slip - pity the unfortunate venturer who travels then inverts on the ethereal winds. For between each of the planets is a zone of asteroids of unusual density and possessing most unpredictable orbits. Few ships that venture into the system are ever heard of again, and we can only conjecture that they are now little more than mangled debris in the belts.

Are the wretched seeker's troubles now over? Not so - for each planet possesses a gravity markedly higher than the last. Landing by means of the retro jets becomes a not part easily with their unbidden guests, and are wont to toy with them. It is said though that a determined and wise person may master the mazes and thus obtain the next key.

It is inconceivable, however, that any should master all the rings, and hazardous affair before long.

But finally, the wanderer may at last enter the appropriate city. Alas, such a fate is far from enviable, for the cities will many have sought to fry. Perhaps it is as well for the universe that this is so. Extract from The Book of Ruin, Baron Bodlesey (AlphaGraphics, 2017)

GOLDEN AXE

IF I had a golden axe I'd be straight down the market with it, or maybe the local jewelers. Only an idiot would use a weapon made out of a heavy metal that blunted easily. Evil reptilian Death Adder is obviously no mug since he intends to melt it down for cash, thus ruining the magical emblem of Yuria. Duncan Evans tries to stop him.

U n, what I love about these sort of sideways scrolling, axe-wielding chap 'em ups is the coherent plot, the believable characters and the witty repartee. So the kingdom of Yuria (pronounced "your ear" by the way) is in danger of something or other, with the royal family being put to the sword (good thing too if you ask me), and reptiles ranning the land. Probably.

Well, its down to you, Mr Axe-Battler (flashback 20 years: So what are we going to call our son then, asks Mrs Battler. Damn, says Mr Battler, fustling his axe. How about Axe 7), or you Mr Gillis Thunderhead (the midget), or you Ma Tyris Flame (probably orphaned Amazon warrior queen with Mata Whittaker proportions and a bottom ribbing thong), to kill all of Death Adder's troops, and then kill the main board himself. Complex stuff huh?

Up to two players can play along simultaneously, which gives you a great advantage since only one enemy seems to appear at once (programming problems and all that), and starting in the woods just outside turtle village (green), off you go, cutting a bloody swathe towards the castle containing Mr Death Adder.

So its been done many times before, at least the action is entertaining if you like hacking, chopping and maiming - when I do, the graphics are respectable enough, and it all progresses with a winky inevitability. Fine,

Of course! Talk about bad breath. These little cockroaches could knock out the Lady Major if she was just wandering down wind. I wouldn't like to smog one of them, maybe he should use Listerine!

VENDETTA
The meanest game of 1990
now arrives on cart.

BRIEF BITS

Biggest shock of the month revolves around the announcement by US Gold that they're NOT going to be releasing the famous Epyx Games series of games. This seems a great shame seeing as this much acclaimed series is perfect to be converted and would suit a cart well.

Other US Gee carts to come will be (as well as those mentioned last issue) Ghouls 'n' Ghosts and UN Squadron.

Domark's new releases are actually old ones. Along with Vindicators (as noted last month) we've got Badlands and Cyberball - a game that we reviewed absolutely yonks ago and never appeared on tape or disk.

System 3 are not just happy with converting the company's existing product, all future C64 games will support the machine that has already blasted one competitor out of the water. IK Deluxe is the sequel to International Karate +, and will be also programmed by Archer MacLean. We also have the second Myth game, and that's just for starters.

FUN PLAY

POWER

Now this is what the cartridge should be used for. Just imagine it, a flock of a twitch and three games are all waiting for you to play instantly. Once you've chosen one you go straight into it, and if you wish to change your mind at any point, just switch the machine off and on again and you've got another choice.

The only fault that Fun Play has is that it's a collection of three Codemasters games, which would normally retail for about £2.99 each. And seeing as none of them are multi-loaders, it's not as if the bonuses are that big. Let's have a look at the games then...

Pro Tennis

Err... Er... Not exactly the best tennis game in the history of the console, but not the worst either. It seems like Pacman, but it has billions of levels and they range in difficulty from very, very easy to you must be joking. It's pretty much a pity.

Pro Skateboard

Again a bit crap, and very budget gamey (whatever that is). You have to ride down a hill, collecting flags, at your own risk and that's about it.

Hope this pack isn't really worth the cash, mainly due to the poor quality of the games, but it's a flickin' good idea, and let's hope that we'll see many more packs creep up.

to be rather okay in the playability stakes, but a tad too hard, and a tad too crap.

Fastfood

This is the highlight of the three games and is as good now as when I reviewed it yonks ago. It's a nice game much

Now here's the other pack that we're offered from The Disc Company and this is much more like it.

Three of the best games that Microprose have ever published have been shooved onto a fast as you blink piece of red plastic. This is far more the type of thing that CD-owners would like to slot in their holes (and you thought that the VQ review was dirty).

Stunt Car Racer

This won our '90 Wobbly Awards 1999 for the best game, and best simulation, and it's hardly surprising. If I had to name my favourite Amiga game ever Stunt Car Racer would certainly be in the running, and unbelievably the CD version is just as good.

Not so much an arcade game, but more fun to play than any other racing game on the market.

Rick Dangerous

This set new standards in arcade adventures and the original was only marred by a terrible multi-load system. Now everything is instantaneous we can all enjoy the most playable platform game this side of the local arcade. It was also cute before its time.

Microprose Soccer

Not the best footy game on the console, but close. What it lacks in options (which is not much I can tell you) it Every game on this cart is superb, you'd really love to insert it in your slot and no mistake.

VENDETTA

Another Systems 3 success story makes it to the C64GS, and thanks to the release of the truly stunning Last Ninja 3 and Ninja Remix on cart, those fans will undoubtedly find a whole new challenge in this gun toting mostly package.

Using the same system as the Ninja series, Vendetta could hardly fail to impress. That said it has many features of its own to more than impress.

You are a grunt (a soldier not a whiffy fart) who has had no problems in getting out of Vietnam. But now that you have finally been accepted into the society a scientist friend and his daughter have been kidnapped by terrorists and this makes you mighty sore. So armed with but a broad knife you decide that you should go after the assassins and remove their most private parts.

But the 3D arcade adventure part is not the be all and end all of Vendetta, nope we even get treated to a rather splendid driving game that links the levels. And on cartridge (I know I've said it before) there is no wall between sections.

I reviewed when it was out on cassette and gave it 94%, and it has weathered the time (almost a year) very well indeed. The graphics, sound and play have only since been bettered (in my view) by a select few games and surely a console owner would rather have a game that would last for yonks than a quick licensed flash in the pan.

An excellent game that's full to the brim with different styles of gameplay and ideas.

MYTH

Right let's get this out of the way before I start, we reviewed this game back in the May edition of YC, or more correctly Ashley reviewed it. He didn't like it for a few reasons and only gave it a humble score of 84%. At the time I tended to disagree with him, and now that I've seen it on cartridge I've finally got my chance to do so publicly.

Myth is an arcade adventure set in various mythological backgrounds, as you, the small Michael J. Fox lookalike, have been plucked from today's world and have been sent into the past in order to give a big wily god a right royal kicking.

To get to the mighty evil Cameron though, you have to negotiate lots of other entities. These are based around major gods in mythology, and you must use your wit and reflexes in order to progress past each.

Everything is based on the old platform game idea, but it extends far beyond that. There are also lighting actions that you can (and must) perform for instance, and there are tonnes of small puzzles that must be completed in order to get anywhere whatsoever.

The animation is absolutely superb, and although the graphics are not they're very perfectly drawn. On the cartridge we also get a new intro screen, but that's about the only addition (apart from the lack of multi-loading of course). In my eyes, with the great success of such platform games as Rick Dangerous 1 and 2, System 3 have by far the most accomplished of them all, and unless you are actually hopeless at such games (the gameplay can be a bit hard until you've played it a few times) you'll probably more than welcome Myth to your growing cartridge pile.

1990 - THE YEAR

1990 saw the birth of YC from the loins of the oldest Commodore mag in this country. It was also the year that coin-ops were overtaken by the movie licence in popularity, and unique and original games were seen in a greater light than ever before. Rik Henderson looks at the year in full, and highlights the top events.

MAY

The second biggest thing to happen to the CC this month was an exhibition in Aspley, and Howard Woodall's Club where we spent a few hours playing rally happen and checking the Super Championship trophy awarded in front of the camera.

This was the month of Member's Secret, and therefore the start of the vote attack, and it was proved at this time, by Rainbow Islands and Blood Rampage. We were to hope the vote would heavily though because this was just the beginning.

The biggest thing to happen was the vote of CC from Japan to Plymouth and from Atlanta International to Milton Keynes. The vote took so long that we were to wait an hour.

JUNE

In CC this month, but that doesn't mean that nothing happened.

Instead of our World Cup team and every game we've played all effort for the season.

Worldy comes out July 1990, the CC told although, mainly because it was important to the club this official game. Mike CC from Super Machines. Last CC I didn't really understand it's a development, were going with.

Randomly were asked the only subject for a game that we were supposed to this period. CC found Woodall had finally returned (and was a bit of a shock), and Howard's 'Supernova' certainly appeared to be a world class away from world.

JANUARY

This was the month that 'Survival 90' was going to be released, and I decided to translate to see it. Although it was complete, a few things needed tidying up and it dragged on and on, (we were still not to see it on the shelves).

We were all still desperately trying to get more substance, and little did we know that three years long for updates were just around the corner.

Howard signed a deal with Decipher to market the new magazine products (the first under this agreement being 'Cable Masters').

And CC managed to 'sell' more copies under the new format than it had ever done before.

JULY

The biggest game was managed to double its copy into a box and onto the shelves, and unfortunately it had the top cover message on the cover as its sponsor. Having 'Dolphin Super Match' was the perfect name for a game in another year.

CC was released with a copy on hand and a brand new headquarters. But the biggest event was a visit to Southampton for Jeff Dony and myself over of CC Co and the final Month.

Was the puzzle game phenomenon ever reaching from gold with the release of the excellent 'Clas'.

And July was two companies, 'Translation and 'Survival' magazine (with 'Translation' to eventually disappear) and in contrast the magazine of 'Blood Rampage' as a development house was one of the most exciting events of the year.

AUGUST

Worldy's 'Rising Cores' changed all of our lives this month, and just will cover the last issue.

This month we to check out the second Christmas issue, and although we still haven't seen the game the vote was still with us. I also got to see 'Survival 2' on the same day and that was the first development of the year (in my eyes).

'New Machines' was another of the month's last releases, and we were only one of the first to see about it.

Chris first took for absolutely quiet was the commission of 'Madness Machines' on the CC. It wasn't very good I don't mind telling you.

Howard was also finally released, having the best version to make it, and it cost a few updates here to be made.

We had a special answer to the 'Survival' should release 'Survival' and 'Mad' played a 1:1 draw.

And at year, Decipher announced the launch of it's new magazine in 'Survival'.

R OF THE TURTLE

FEBRUARY

Quarterback 17 disappointed all season owners the crowd's size of twenty and was not a weekly success of one of the best selling games of all time. It was really a reflection of how slow the film was.

It was also passed on the stage through by Taylor, which was not another success because that failed to deliver. It didn't deal at all about it.

On the other side we got a look at the best introduction to the film was in the form of R. M. Oswald Hotel, and although it was treated badly by other owners, we managed to get the most from it, and it was a weekly hit at the time.

Top game of the month, though, was the updated American Study game with Peter Malhotra's game attached.

MARCH

This was the month that Robinson inspired a major achievement. This is because their involvement in their performance from management quite. One thing that was not so good as the others, got in all sorts of bother and ended up in the blue, got in all sorts of bother and ended up in the blue. He was dropped from the project and went into charge. Some other (manager of Bradford District better of Don Day) had seen.

We also organized half of the meeting with a few old working effort on the Public Relations sector as a whole. We were meant to afford something, just some of them.

Things were in a bit of a state on the old game front though, we seemed to be going through our past periods depression. And the only hit was one day was a hit for the Blue by O.H., a strategic little number. Even the biggest release, Spine Horse 11, only managed a meager 74%.

APRIL

World Top game had started and all the top forty games were announced. But IGL was even introduced in America through this month, and we got our weekly with one copy of Republic, which was found incredibly useful. Although it was never noticed on days as such, and it only was being sold on weekdays only.

The big number of the month was definitely Screen Classics Two, which promised to work after the stage version, but was really a big game of game. Although it was never noticed any amount here but in Britain otherwise.

Spine 11 was also heard of with the release of the new number, Middle. It really was a case of what was to come.

SEPTEMBER

Back to The Future II made it to the main part in time for the other release of the season and it proved to be a better game winner.

Back of Stone was the most original product to reach us in time here. And Stone Street was

I was invited to performance to read that perfectly found my name called CBS prominently understood. It was of similar taste and they had made number 1 in the world with those excellent double single combinations.

And we returned to R. Spine 11, which was not to make it to the release for a couple of months. It was gone from the fourth part though.

NOVEMBER

Under I made quite an impression although it was never as good as its predecessor, but the depth of it changed my feelings.

The Top Like Good He was also introduced as a small number, but it worked a return to the old days for those who had found could be easily forgotten.

Spine 11 was a big hit, and it got the general with for the third in the Spine 11 history.

But really the month was slow when it came to release due to Christmas being just around the corner. Most of the big releases were cheap as would be the last month.

OCTOBER

This was the month of the Computer Entertainment Game, but on earth and on earth. One of Christmas highlighted things up though with an excellent party held just for the first time. We all got away at that time.

Stone 11 didn't get the business by myself as it had decided to leave the message for other owners.

Nightclub managed a better score, although the film seemed to pass us with little more than a welcome.

And nearly the last game of the month came in the form of a new game of Spine 11's 11th Anniversary, it had everything that the 11 did but included everything the previous.

Although it was also earned a lot of people to see down with its rather fantastic graphics, some say that was the best version of it.

DECEMBER

This was the one that the whole year was great around.

Spine 11 was the best version of the biggest selling game of Christmas time, with about twenty and we have as they it been dropped in the shops.

The Top Collection also made a hit with about second sales figure, especially for a compilation. And Spine 11 was finally found general from the second time around, with the sequel to the first part of Spine 11.

Donna's attempt at the Christmas number was not great. Class 11, and 11 were ranked to only an 11.

Admission 11, received their last progression release in the season with Spine 11. And the last event of the year was Spine 11's 11th Anniversary (which of Spine 11's) and myself enjoying a rather quiet time - when the whole thing got together and here a pretty good time up.

THE YC STAFF OVER THE YEAR

In 1990 we've had quite a few members of staff, some with beards and some without. Here's a rundown of who was who...

Rik Henderson - Deputy Editor (January - February), Editor (March - December)

Rik's the kind of guy that puts a lot into something as long as he doesn't have to tidy up afterwards. If you invited him around to your house you'd be likely to have quite a few laughs, but your alcohol cabinet would mysteriously become more roomy by the end of the night.

Rik is still the Ed of this organ.

Adrian Humphrey - Games Editor (January - May), Games Correspondent (June)

Adrian, the great yeti that he is, added a certain touch to YC that could only have come from one with so much facial fluff. Although his gruff manner caused a few nightmares, his cheeky northern humour brightened up many press conferences.

Adrian is now the Editor of our sister title Your Amiga.

Paul Lives - Technical Editor (January - April), Group Editor (September - December)

Paul is also the editor of Commodore Disk User, a rather fine, if more serious, magazine. This doesn't mean that he's the old stone face that everybody reckons, he's a mean gamer when it comes down to it.

Paul is still Group Editor.

Stuart Cooke - Group Editor (January - June), Editorial Consultant (August - October)

Stuart was the editor of Your Commodore for most of its life, until an upset! came in. He's had the shakes ever since.

Stuart is still at Argus Specialist Press, and is Group Editor of such sites as Photography and Skeleton Crew.

Jim Black - Editorial Assistant (January - April)

Jimbo was the unsung hero of the reviewing team. He left to join Video Today as Assistant Editor and has no inclination of coming back to the computer industry (it's too stable for him).

Jim is now the editor of the adult magazine Video X, but we'll not mention what he reviews now.

Mark Newton - Designer (January - June, November - December)

Mark, the original chainsaw animal, skipped the paint on the canvas for many months. His speciality is creating a whole new look, it's a shame that he still insists on the B&W though.

Mark has now moved from YC onto sister magz CDU and Your Amiga.

Ashley Carter-Cairns - Staff Writer (March - May), Games Editor (June - September), Assistant Editor (October)

Ash is still with us in heart, mainly because none of us will forget his wild taste in shirts. He left when he found out that jeans were banned from the office.

Ashley is now with Microsil.

Helen Saunders - Designer (August - November)

Helen is the current art editor to give YC that special look. Her talents were recently moved across to Your Amiga, but she's back with some more killer ideas.

Helen has now taken over from Mark on the design duties, again.

YC'S LOOK AT 1991

It's time to get out my crystal balls and give you a few pointers on what I reckon'll be 'happening' in the coming year. Everything here is absolutely, completely true!...

Audiogenic will announce Jeremy Beadle's Ludo Challenge (but probably release it several years later).

CodeMasters will release another three billion Dizzy games, and claim that the company's now bigger than Garco.

Systems 3 will release an extra-enhanced version of Ninja Rania, adding such features as a new loading screen and a pretty new box.

Grandstam will disappear once more and come back a month later, with Liverpool FC still on the schedule.

Rainbow Arts will release Donats 2, but will have to withdraw it because it's too similar to R-Type 2 (and far better anyway).

Virgin Games will look for even more diverse licences than Monty Python and Yc, and will end up signing Artiques Foodshow.

Enrag will look for a larger venue to hold the next Computer Entertainment Show after complaints about overcrowding. In the end it'll be hosted in the superior outside Charing Cross station.

*This is a lie really (Ooo we are naughty!) We've got so many ideas what's coming up, but you can bet that we'll be keeping you up-to-date all the way.

THE YC WOBBLY AWARDS 1990

It's that time of year again. It's up to you to decide who should get the ultimate Commie 64 accolades for the previous year.

1. Game of the Year

What's the best game of 1989? It can be any type of game, but it has to be a stonker.

YC's tip: Vendetta (System 3)
Winner 1989: Star! Car Race (Microprose)

2. Arcade Game of the Year

What was the best coin-op conversion of 1989?

YC's tip: Rainbow Islands (Ocean)
Winner 1989: Chess 90 (Ocean)

3. Simulation of the Year

This is a game that can simulate any subject.

YC's tip: Greg Norman's Ultimate Golf (Greenline)
Winner 1989: Star! Car Race (Microprose)

4. Adventure of the Year

This is for the best adventure or role-playing game of 1989.

YC's tip: Black Rogers - Countdown to Doomsday (US Gold)
Winner 1989: Dragonlord (Level 9)

5. Best Software House

Self-explanatory, but we'd abstain on this one, we'd not like to be biased.

Winner 1989: Ocean

6. Programmer(s) of the Year

Who's the top team/ person behind the games?

YC's tip: Probe
Winner 1989: Golf Grammar

7. Best Game Music

Which game has the best tunes?

YC's tip: Ninja Remix (System 3)
Winner 1989: Turbo Outrun (US Gold)

8. Best Game Graphics

What looks best, basically?

YC's tip: Greg Norman's Ultimate Golf (Greenline)
Winner 1989: Turbo Outrun (US Gold)

9. Favourite Games Advert

What advert made you want to buy a game the most?

YC's tip: Monty Python's Flying Circus (Virgin)
Winner 1989: Batman - The Movie (Ocean)

10. Worst Game of the Year

What was your stinker?

YC's tip: Kenny (Datagrip)
Winner 1989: Soccer Match (Impressions)
Winner 1989: Pro Mountain Bike Simulator (Alternative)

Don't forget, your nominations must be games released in 1989 only. Send your entry (as a photocopy) to YC Awards 1990, YC, 20 Potters Lane, Hill Farm, Milton Keynes, MK11 3NF.

To give you that little bit more of an incentive we'll give £100 of prime software (console, disk or tape - it's up to you) to the first entry pulled out of the hat on 1st March. Also the winner and ten runners-up will get a years subscription to Britain's best C64 title. Not only that but your entry could be the one that decides the final result. Just fill in the form below nominating your top three games in descending order for each category.

To help you out we've also listed 1989's winners and our tips for 1990.

My name:

My address:

After watching Top Gun (again), Duncan Evans did nothing but wander round the office with his arms outstretched muttering "I feel the need, the need for speed!" We tied him to a chair, hit him over the head with a copy of S.T.U.N. Runner and said "review this then you withered old hack".

Bah, all lies of course, but it's true there's nothing I like better than driving down the wrong side of the motorway at 130 mph with my head out of the window shouting "whoop, whoop, all aboard the last train to the afterlife." After a recent spell of hospitalisation with the glorious NHS (4mins, severe internal injuries, fractured skull and shattered legs Mr Evans. Here, take this grubby old Aspire and think yourself lucky it wasn't serious), I hobbled into YC HQ to put the latest arcade conversion from Domark through its paces.

First up let me say that as far as Tengen games are converted by Domark go, they've mostly been right old crap. After playing the dismal Amiga version of STUN I was dreading seeing the result of five minutes chugging from the knackered disk drive we use. But lo, the game came forth, and woeily, it was a mighty game, full of joyous programming and sparkling gameplay. Yes, despite the fact that I had the poison pen ready and dripping I was disappointingly impressed. Huh, its not bad then, said the vulture atop my monitor, ready to pick over the game's lifeless bones. No, Samuel, I said, I've struck this one as alive and kicking.

Enough babble, to the game then. STUN stands for Spread Tunnel Underground Network (as it), and offers you (yes you) the chance to race through 24 levels (some different) before attempting the ultimate challenge (which I thought was trying to get some sense out of Rik, but obviously the programmers haven't met him). After listening to what passes for music (inconveniently) you can either start on level 1, 5 or 11. Good idea really if you're the sort of joystick buffoon that can't sort out left from right and get any further than the first level. The idea is to race along tunnels and rampways, collecting green stars to exchange for a shockwave (smart bomb style destruction), running over speed ups for over nine mega speeds (though not faster than the speed of light, because if you did, you could finish the game before you had actually started - or so the theory goes), shooting any old blobby sprite that gets in your way, and finishing the course in the time allowed.

In the tunnels the idea is to go along the floor on the straight, and on the outside curves on bonds for max performance. Go fast enough and you can even loop over the ceiling down the other side. At this point you're gonna be impressed with the decent speed of the 3-D graphics. You ain't gonna be impressed with the sprites though. The green stars for example are actually green squares. Oh well, so fast enough and its playable enough so who cares. The rest of the sprites are ordinary looking solid lines that come your way and then get blown away. There is actually some difference between the types so if you're feeling particularly observant then watch out for the train. This chugs along the bottom of the tunnels and takes a good kicking before being destroyed.

Other threats to look out for are drones, armoured drones and flyers (which drop missiles and bombs - eek). Just nail the mothers before they even think about doing something nasty.

Well, blimey, STUN Runner isn't as exciting as a night out with Kim Basinger but then it is a lot cheaper, so if you feel the need for speed, just say no to drugs and make yourself a nice cuppa while waiting for this STUNNER to load. (Sorry I tried not to use that joke all the way through, but weakened at the

Better than expected, and playable and challenging without being nose biting or grabbing any other part of your anatomy.

Duncan Evans is an off road racer, but he's anything but super. In fact he spends so much time off the road because he's so bad a driver he can't stay on. A natural choice for this game.

SUPER OFF ROAD RACER

Many, many moons ago... (we'll just cut this bit out shall we, and pick up where he starts to get to the point) ...and Super Spirit was a jolly good game, and the follow up released before Xmas, wasn't. So what, here's Ivan Ivesman Stewart's Super Off Road Racer, which is Super Spirit but on four mud bath, dirt bowl, hill festooned tracks. You race round, up to three of you, you use up nitros, which are like a gigantic guff, when clouds of smoke appear at your rear end and you go hunting through space, landing somewhere down the course, and where the objective is to win, earn cash, and make your buggie go even faster.

As long as you beat off the other computer cars you can keep racing, and there's even a continue option for those pooftas that get eliminated early.

Nice chunky and bright colours, classic controls, slightly iffy programming, and a whole barrel full of fun is guaranteed when you're playing against a couple of mates (if you have any that is). The races, over the hazards and obstacles are just wild, and with the chuff potential of the nitros you can test yourself flying in any direction, even getting stuck on the scenery.

For all the chaos, gradually skill, but most importantly the best joystick, wins out, expelling the boys from the girls, and the decent joysticks from the cheaters.

Just when you thought it was safe to get into your four-wheeled monster, a nasty old 60 customer comes speeding up from the back and expels you like an orange!

Wild, stormy, gusty, and other meteorological comparisons, it's a winner in the YC office.

NARC

Dur, winners don't use drugs. So says the packaging of NARC. The same packaging that shows your typical winner wearing a rubber ski mask and shades, and carrying enough hardware to eliminate a small country. Duncan Evans, well known caffeine addict, struggles to get into the role.

Gave I don't just love these mindless monitoring attempts? Winners don't use drugs indeed. Back to the athletic world is too stoned to know what their names are, never mind what event they are in. Take good old Dexter Manley, hopeless coke addict and some time American Football player. A lifetime ban ended recently after a huge one year. And what about Ben Johnson? And even what about drugs like caffeine, nicotine, alcohol, and medical necessities such as paracetamol, aspirin, and for those heart patients, strophin? Let's face it, a café blanche, "winners don't use drugs" message is completely pointless and even dangerous. What about, hard addictive consciousness altering drugs shoot the st out of your system? Or those guys, get into the real world huh?

Anyway, in this latest just say no to coffee cup of pleasured action you are out to waste the Mr Big Corporation. This entails blowing away all Mr Bigs' henchmen, over 12 levels before you finally get to give Mr Big himself his just deserts (justard) and bullets.

The action starts off in a junkyard (it says here - it looks nothing like a junkyard to me though) with swarms of villains surging towards you, all in need of cerebral ventilation (their heads blowing off to you). You can always arrest them for bonus points, though this is hideously dangerous. The idea is you stand next to them for a few seconds and they get nicked. Huh, all the bleeders are firing away like its the start of the USA-Iraq war so getting anyway near to someone is like well dangerous. Best just to blast holes in them, or use the odd missile and blow them into burgers and legs that go flying everywhere. Actually you need to save your missiles for further on in the game, especially if you manage to catch up with Mr Big.

Along the way, the levels take you through a subway station, Knit Street, a drugs lab, Sunset Strip, the actual HQ of Mr Big, encountering such characters as Skyhigh, Joe Floodhead (the druggie obviously, Spike Rush, and Kinzy Phazy.

Usually the idea on each sideways scrolling level, is to blast everybody in sight (and this arrest them later), collect re-supplies of bullets and missiles, nab cash for bonus points, and get someone who drops the credit card, pass you need to get to the next level. While the backgrounds are quite good in places (and look like Lego in others), the sprites are a bit of a disaster. You, rubber mask and all, look okay, but the villains look like incredible scabbe monstrosities. Obviously the result of too much caffeine.

Or even what about drugs like caffeine, nicotine, alcohol, and medical necessities such as paracetamol, aspirin, and for those heart patients, strophin? Let's face it, a café blanche, "winners don't use drugs" message is completely pointless and even dangerous. What about, hard addictive

See SWAT that fly sounds something like someone from oop north would say, if they allowed themselves to be gratuitously stereotyped for the benefit of an introduction of a game that has bugger all to do with flies. Duncan Evans comes from oop north though, but we've never heard him say see SWAT that fly. He'd probably just eat it.

Harrumph! Well, I may hail from the wastelands of the north, but I never even see a fly (too cold you see) until I moved southwards to live with all those soft southerners.

Anyway, flies have nothing to do with ESWAT from US Gold, which is the Birmingham moty's rather silly counter to the all conquering and truly majestic Robocop 2. In fact to compare ESWAT to the sparkling magnificence of Robocop 2 is like comparing the intellectual capacity of Rick Henderson to my very good self. Not only is there no contest, the judges (if there were any other than me) would declare the contest to be a mis-match and send poor old ESWAT off to school for 15 years before it could hope to be mentioned in the same breath as Robocop 2.

Actually it isn't a bad game at all (you just can't compare it to you know what). The plot, as such, is that criminals are running riot in Cyber City, and only the really tough guys in the ESWAT team have the gonads, and verily, the ass kicking firepower to book them a one way ticket to the morgue. Y'ea, there's none of your namby pamby criminal rehabilitation programs here, it's a case of blow the mothers away before they get away. However, there's a small problem, before you're allowed into the ESWAT team you have to complete three missions (thus arming with terminal prejudice) to earn the promotions that will allow you to wear a suit of barking foil.

This isn't too hard, especially if there's two of you blasting away at once, though you need to keep an eye on the bullet supply situation, and then nick in front of your mate to nab the bullet token before he gets it. It's sideways scrolling action, with particularly dull graphics. I mean the scenery is minimal on a foggy day stuff. Still, at least the criminals appear, and get blown away, with satisfying frequency, and there are ledges, buildings, and even the insides of collapsing buildings to traverse.

Wiping the fodder on

One may be hard but take it from me, I've landed! Once I swallowed a chocolate, while it was still going, and I even stapled my underpants to my bottom. "Albert get out of that carport now and come in the dinner!" "Yes mum! I'm coming."

the first three levels is like dead easy, with only the anchor visiting lead (duke on the final (post-ESWAT) level posing any sort of danger. Once you've felt the collar of all those villains, you make it into the big league, where you are notified of particular victims to go hunting for.

Oh wonder what's at the end of this little stretch of road? It's a big bad bopper, and he's even stopped as low as falling behind an innocent maiden. What a cut! What a bopper! What a stupid bopper! If I can't shoot 'round her I'll have to shoot through her. He obviously doesn't know how 'ard we are in the force. We've so 'ard that we would catch... Shh, shh... shh.

It gets tougher now though, 'cos some of the bad guys are wearing taking foil as well, but you can fire three bullets at once. This does mean you tend to run out of ammo very quickly, so top ups are always required, otherwise you are reduced to clumsy martial arts manoeuvres to (literally) kick ass.

All this is just a prelude to the major league violence that comes further on though. When you get kitted out with heavy duty weaponry, it's splatter frenzy time, with more bodies than a night out with George Romero. The annoying thing is that while you are kitted out in your ESWAT bacon toll you're still susceptible to being shot. Huh! What about protective armour guys, this suit has zero defence capability (rather like Sheffield Utd).

Never mind, it's all good fun, especially on two player mode, and even if it doesn't measure up to a particular Ocean game, so what, ESWAT is still a buff and a half in its own right. *

OOZIN' EUGENE'S SCUM OF THE EARTH

Oozin' Eugene supplies us with only one complete solution this month, but c'mon! It was hard enough getting him out of bed. At least we've got mega-tonnes of other original tips to keep us going.

More cash prizes wind their way to those despicable enough to not only cheat, but to send them to us expecting to be paid for it. Now that's what I call enterprise.

TIME MACHINE

Here's my effort this month, the complete solution to this ever so stinky arcade adventure. And it's about time too (that's pathetic - Ed).

Level One: The Prehistoric Era

First you must drop a capsule in screen 1.2. Then shoot the eggs. A couple of times) using the pods. Now go back to the screen you started in (1.3) and block the geyzers with the rocks. Now you can go to Level Two.

(Note: This bit allows you to complete the playate done free on our October cassette).

Level Two: The Ice Age

Place a pod in screen 2.5 (by the cave) and go to the wood in 2.3. When it is in the top window, beam to 2.5 and you'll find it has come with you.

Go to 2.1 and transport yourself back to the Prehistoric Age. Now transport the fire from screen 1.1 to 2.5. Do this until the wood has ignited (if it goes out do it again).

Now take off the boulders from the Pterodactyl will take you to the cave screen (1.5) where you drop another pod after which you must warp back to 1.2.

Steer a mammal and take it to the cave (to the geysers in 2.3, and plant a pod by the river in 2.4. Zap back to 1.3 and transport apples to the river on 2.4 (to it for both banks). Now you can access Level Three.

Level Five: Repairing The Time Machine

Go to screen 5.5 and kill a few terrorists. Wait for a bomb and transport it back to 1.1 where it will explode. The crystal that you need to collect will be freed but will fall into the sea.

Search 1.2 and you'll find it. Go back to the time machine (in 5.5) and place a pod inside it. Return to the crystal and take it back to the machine.

Go back to Level One and use the Pterodactyl to take you to the centre of screen 1.1. Now teleport to 5.1 and you'll land on the roof of the Oil building. Use your beam to turn the switch on and off. Go back to the time machine and place the crystal in the machine.

Follow the same instructions to turn the switch on again and go back to the time machine. Now get in the machine and perform a peek up, you've completed the game.

barrel from 4.5 and drop it in 4.1 near the moving rock. Place a pod here and then follow the same instructions as before in order to ignite the powder. Now you can enter the last level.

Level Three: The Stone Age

Firstly you'll need to build a bridge across the river in 3.4 (mainly for the next level). You'll need to go all the way back to the first time zone and get the Pterodactyl to take you to 1.4. When you are in the area where the tree is likely to be, transport to the corresponding position in zone three and you'll fall out of the air onto a branch, therefore snapping it. DO this for both sides of the river.

Now take the round wheel across the river from screen 3.2 to screen 3.5 and leave it next to the square one. Level Four now awaits.

Level Four: The Middle Ages

Go to screen 4.5 by standing in the middle of screen 3.5 and transporting directly, otherwise you'll be spanked by the whizzing cannonball. Take the barrel of gunpowder and take it to 4.4 and drop it on the right side of the bridge.

Place a pod next to the barrel and wait for the large geizer (Goliath) to get near it. Now teleport back to 1.1 and collect the flame. Now teleport back to 4.4 and it will ignite the barrel, killing Goliath when it explodes.

Then take another

IVAN 'IRON MAN' STEWART'S OFF ROAD RACER

Here's a few tips for this spiffy top-down racing game from Paul Milburn. A crisp liver is on its way!!

1. At the first corner (on all tracks), swing wide and cut in sharply next to the barrier, the nitro off. That should give you a big lead.
2. Try not to use any Nitros on the first course. This allows you to concentrate in spending your money on wheels, top speed, etc.
3. When you have lost 2 credits, change cars and you can continue onto the next track with fresh credits.

NOT

Guess who? Yea, Paul Milburn is back with a cheat for our excellent cover game from the December tape.

2. Complete levels 1 and 2, and on level 3 do the square that you're on then go to the right. Now go down onto a flashing square. You should now have infinite lives.

1. Press RESTORE several times.

MIDNIGHT RESISTANCE

Paul Milburn again, with another five's worth of tips for this Ocean hot smash.

1. Use the title screen type SIAMESE to have infinite lives.
2. Always try to buy a three-way weapon. Although it's not very powerful, it gets unfavorably placed enemies.

3. Buy bullets at the shop when you have only 200 left. Use them sparingly.
4. Buy homing missiles, they are brilliant. They are essential for the end-of-level baddies, especially the jet.

POKES

This collection of bijoux pokettes have been supplied by both Elvedin Corhodzic and A. Jacobs, who both get a tonner for their efforts. If there is no SYS number listed then you can be guaranteed that it is a cartridge poke, if there is you'll need a reset switch.

DRAGON BREED

Duncan Evans doesn't breed dragons in his back garden, but he knows a man who does. Well, no, that's a complete lie actually, but he does know a man in Switzerland. Does that count? No, I thought not.

There was a well-spiffy game out a couple of months ago called St Dragon, from the Sales Curve. Dragon Breed is like that, but not as good. If you didn't see St Dragon, then read on, otherwise you can look at the screenshots now.

You play the role of Kayus, a lanky young lad who has become King of the Agares Empire. Alas the rest of the chaps at court aren't too happy with this and have broken the seal restraining Zumbaxucus, the King of Darkness (who, while being utterly evil, does send his mother flowers every month). This Z person wants to bring plague, pestilence, everlasting darkness, etc. etc to the world, so its down to young Kayus, and aside his loyal dragon to sort the blighter out. Although its not all fiery breath antics for our airborne chaps, when the going gets narrow, the small go walking.

Its the usual business of sideways scrolling shooty action, with swarms of your typical feebly little aliens, and then larger ones obviously made up of four sprites. Obviously because when they appear and move onto the same line as your character, they flicker like buggy. So does your dragon, except he does it all the time. I think he's probably trying to become invisible, or something. With a flexible and manoeuvrable tail (thankfully your dragon can be used to fend off shots, and when you collect some power up tokens, it becomes even more useful).

Fled tokens endow the dragon with flame breath, silver give you homing dragons (try suicidal exploding baby dragons - or... supposedly), blue gives you a share in the Electricity board, well, lightning bolts anyway, while gold tokens gives you scales. Which also happens if you don't get enough vitamin C.

By using a combination of these power ups, and the fact that your dragon is double jointed, you can curl the tail completely around, shutting yourself in, but of course no man is an island (well he'd be a very small island if he was), so you need to show your face every now and again. To kill things.

There's a word for all of this, and that word is routine. The two colour background scrolls ever so slowly, while the sprites flicker and die under your onslaught. It's all pretty easy until you hit the end of level aliens. Which are big and nasty. The first one is a bit too nasty methinks, but try it out for yourself, since this is a reasonable game, if you like scrooly shooters.

MISADVENTURE

A long time ago, in a galaxy far, far away, a pod was sent from a dying planet in the hope that the race could be saved. In this pod was a male child who was found and raised by a maggot farmer and his wife. Super Rigby now hails as master of the adventures.

LETTERS

Dear Paul,
First let me get the crawling out the way and say that your adventures column is the best thing that's happened to me since I last stuck my head in the oven (errrrrr - Paul). In fact I would go as far as to say that it's brilliant, amazing, wonderful, remarkable, May? - Paul) remarkable (oh good - Paul) in fact the best adventures column I've ever seen!

What I'd like to know, though, as a "mature" adventurer, who's started adventuring quite late on, is what adventures do you recommend? How about a Top Five adventure list? I can't get my teeth around these new fangled RPG things so a concise adventure guide would be much appreciated.

Mary Hadley,
Newquay, Cornwall

Paul: Nice place, Newquay, never did do any surfing though, ah well. A Top Five? Hmm. A toughy. But if you pushed me - I'd probably fall over - and then declare that, on the grounds of availability, I would recommend, in no particular order: Time Thief (see Vintage Vault elsewhere), The Case of the Mixed-Up Snymer, A Dark Sky

Over Paradise, Time and Magic. If you are not familiar with any of these titles, then never fear, I'll be covering them all in forthcoming issues. Yes, there are other titles out there but, unless you're lucky, the majority of computer shops tend to ignore adventures (Time and Magic being the only commercial one of the five you'd see with any regularity in computer shops, the others are mail-order only). Just in case, though, I'll also be covering the quickly disappearing commercial stuff - just in case your local shop stocks it.

Dear Paul,
Yo! Sick, cool dude that you are, gimme love! (Oh, hello there young man - Paul) Me and my brother have read every issue of YG that you've been in (yes, I'm still trying to remove the staples from my jacket - Paul) so we think we should both get a prize for being so loyal (what? - Paul). Anyway, as YG has a regular adventure column now how about a few hints's tips's things? Although I'm a mean man with the plastic keys I still get stuck - my brother's hopeless, so you're my last chance! Help!

David Pearce,
Stockport, Cheshire

Paul: Er, quite. By all means, I would love to help you and your brother out in your hour of need but what on earth are you stuck on? You can tell me David. So go on, write in again. Let me know the title and precisely what the problem is and I'll do my best.

URES

All of the adventure magazines covered so far have, in one way or another, offered hints, tips, reviews and general entertainment for adventure players. The one obvious missing piece in the wealth of information already provided for the benefit of the adventurer is - how to produce the things in the first place. This is where Chris Hester's Adventure Coder steps in. Produced in A6 format and published by the ever-busy Mandy Rodrigues (the Adventure Probe editor) Coder is a constant source of help and advice for the adventure author, those wishing to become adventure authors or for players who are intrigued by the inner workings of adventures.

So let's see what this Chris Hester chap is all about, eh? Finding his peaceful home one Sunday morning - myself, the YC sound engineer, YC photographer and YC teacher found Chris still in bed. Being an accommodating lot we all dandered in with him - complete with a refreshing cup of tea and a croissant each. Propping up a pillow and removing a camera tripod from under Chris's nose I asked him how Coder contribute to Contact regularly and vice, therefore, had to see Contact go when it did. I think it was Mandy (Rodrigues) who suggested that I do something else can work out what's going to be best for the magazine - content, size of photographs, etc."

A typical issue spans around 40-45 pages and includes information: adventure utilities on all computers - from Celer to PCs, Spectrums to Amigas. As well as utilities Coder includes help using languages such as Basic and Assembler and more general articles such as atmosphere in adventures and the origin of ideas for plots, puzzles and the like.

To date Adventure Coder has produced 13 issues. A fair percentage of them being C64 specific. Utilities such as the GAC and GAC+ have been covered as well as the more esoteric aspects of assembler. Other C64 specific articles have included a very interesting piece on the infamous 1541 disk drive, including one or two little gems regarding little known disk commands.

Judging by the above you may get the impression that Coder is a dry piece of techno-crap. Wrong! Chris Hester manages to inject a humourist, not to say musical, style in amongst the articles that are suitable for the beginner and experienced alike.

All in all, Adventure Coder is a little cracker and, at the ready price of £1.25, should be standard reading. Send your cash to: Christopher Hester, 3 West Lane, Baildon, Near Shipley, West Yorkshire, BD17 5HD.

"As Mandy was doing Probe I was able to get advice off her on exactly how it should look - how many pages, size, and so on. Obviously after you've done a couple of issues you

VINTAGE VENTURE VAULT

The Vintage Venture Vault will be an occasional feature that will either drown you all in gallons of nostalgia or will inform you as to all of those adventures that "got away". Most of the titles covered in this area will still be available, in one way or another. I'll be covering the adventures from the ultra-famous, the little known and the positively rare. The main aim, however, will be to give you a contact address so you can get your mitts on them.

As new adventures are arriving all the time it is silly to assume that everyone will know about every adventure that has ever been released so I hope that this golden oldies section will be more of a service than a genre-look at the past. In the near future I will begin a similar feature for RPGs - watch out for that one.

TIME THIEF

As the good ol' text and text/graphic adventures has been largely shunned by the big software houses (they will return, when they see the error of their ways) the only reliable source of adventures are the independent mail-order outfits who produce their wares from home. Such a company is Big Sky.

To my knowledge, Big Sky only produced one adventure and that was for the C64 - but what an adventure! The title in question is called Time Thief, a disk-only text-adventure written by Don Macleod. Released around the Spring of 1989 Time Thief arrives on one disk and is divided into two parts: Shadows & Light and Inland.

The plot surrounds a company who deal in, what they call, "Timespace Travel". Actually the theory is a fascinating tale in itself. Say you and a bunch of friends, aged around 18, want to trip off on holiday. What you'd do would be to take time off your years of old age (when you would assume you'd be old and feeble and not able to enjoy yourself as much), in effect, you could "use" your 77th year, for example, when you are 18 or whatever! Neat, eh? So you would die at a younger age (say, 40) but, by the wonders of Timespace would still have "lived" your full life span (say 80 years).

Although many people used the Time Portal successfully things began to turn sour, though, when some people returned from their time travel crippled, maimed and so on. Jocosia, a top academic travels to a place and time where the trouble appears to originate from. It appears that someone is "stealing" time and, therefore causing insects problems. She disappears, though, so you must follow her to see what happened and, possibly, catch the time thief yourself!

Time Thief is a four disk force in C64 adventuring. Probably the most amazing aspect of this game is the combination of reams of text and no disk access! Now why couldn't Infocom do that, eh? Don has used both machine code and the Quill adventure utility and has utilized some nifty text compression techniques to make all of that possible.

The game, which mixes fantasy and SF very successfully, oozes atmosphere and will reward careful examination of objects with flowing and elegant prose. Although Time Thief uses the Quill and, therefore, only allows the basic few word input you shouldn't be put off because the game design never really exposes this limitation as two word inputs are all you will need anyway.

With a wide range of puzzles - some comparatively easy, others utter sods - beautiful text descriptions and responses and all of the atmosphere you could wish for in an adventure you either buy this game or declare yourself as barking mad.

SLIGHT LIST

I have recently read my friend's ACU (Amstrad Computer User), that load of crap, but there was one thing I liked in it that YC does not have and would make YC a bit better. It had programs that you could type in yourself.

I have always enjoyed typing in my own programs, so please can you print one or two programs in each issue.

Also, I have recently bought Hammerlit, I saw it in the shops for £3.99 so I thought 'why not?'

I agree with your review a few months ago and even think you could've given it a better mark. I have got past the first screen, but I can't complete the second, please could you tell me how to get to the third screen. ☹

Right you lucky lot, I'll give you twenty minutes. After that I'm off down the boozar with Gozo and Flame Head to see who can swallow the most amount of Bloody Marys without puking. You've only got 19 minutes left...

Me, London

PA: I don't know!! I tell you what, I'll phone up Giles Brandreth, that well known botlin of everything trivial.

PA - Hello, is that Giles Brandreth?

GB - Yes, who is this?

PA - Can you tell me what Fat Freddy was doing in the December issue of YC?

GB - Look, if you don't go away I'll call the police.

PA - Yes, but you haven't answered...

GB - Oh, nig off! (Click)...

Finally can you tell me how to get past the locked door on the second screen of Nightmare (on the December free tape). I think YC is the best comic mag ever!

Matthew Gibson,
Billericay, Essex

PS. Please, please, please make this Letta of the Munn!

PA: Let's get everybody in the office to vote on whether to make this Letta of the Munn or not.

Rik - Yes!
Helen - Nope!
Evevy - Nope!
Ma - Nope!

So there you go, tough luck! As for the games hints, I'll pass your letter onto Ozoo, and see if he comes up with something in the future.

We got rid of listings way back because of the tape, and it's unlikely that Rik'll bring them back. By the way, did you know that Rik used to work for ACU? (YES! - The bored readers)

COVER STORY

Errs... Er... Where's the cover to tape no. 8 then ay?!

YC is brilliant but it needs more colour.

Paul Mullart,
Milton Keynes

PS. Who are you Rik?

PA: I think I'll get Rik in here to answer this one. Rik: I am a fat, wibble, wibble, wibble! Not tonight Josephine!

PA: There you have it, not even the local asylum knows who Rik is, and Rik certainly doesn't. As for the cover to tape no. 8, why don't you get out your pencils and draw yourself one? In fact, why don't all of you do that and send them in, and we'll give a prize to the best tape cover that we receive (like a new set of pencils or something).

QUESTION TIME

I bought the 8th issue of YC for the first time and it was great. I really enjoyed playing the games on the free tape and I like the pictures of Ozoo's Eugene and yourself. I also like the Purple Puzzle Page. Here's a few questions...

1) In Shadow Warriors, why did you give the graphics 8 out of 10?

The graphics of the game are shocking.

2) What game do you think has the best graphics and sound?

3) Why the hell did you put a pointer of the robot in Dr Who in the issue?

4) How much is £16.99 in Australian money?

5) What does PA stand for?

That's it for the questions, I'm looking forward to the next issue of YC. See ya!

Andrew Kotalris,
Melbourne, Australia

PA: Cor, fippin'ell! Let's see if I can answer your plethora of queries...

1) Rik must've thought the graphics were rather good, let's hear what he's got to say: "I thought that the graphics were rather good!" There you have it! 2) I think that Last Ninja 3 is just about the best game ever for graphics, sound AND gameplay (and I agree - Ed).

3) Have you ever been threatened by a large metallic beasty with a groggy popping gun? I think not!

4) As far as I can tell, with the world's economic state, that you should use this equation: Aussie Dollars = Number of people in Aussie land x British Pounds x The amount of members of the Ramsay family in Neighboours. Therefore £16.99 = about 400 million Australian Dollars (probably).

5) Anything you want it to. Most people take it to stand for my initials generally though.

LETTA OF THE MUNF

SHOW BUSINESS

Having just returned from 'The Commodore Show' (or should this be the 'Amiga' show?), I was extremely worried about the future of our dearly beloved CGA.

It would seem that according to the staff of several of the software stalls at this 'Amiga' exhibition, our faithful Commodores are now past their best and are only fit to be consigned to the great computer land in the sky.

Most comments, when requesting software for the 64, were "It's had its day", "Not powerful enough", and "The 16-bit is far superior".

I must admit the only satisfaction I got was from the Ocean stand where a certain character, wearing an Amiga (there's that word again) T-shirt, assured me that Ocean is still going to support us.

Don Langridge, Sevenoaks

PA: Yep, we were there to (see last month's Data), and things were far worse than this. Good news though is that companies have not been swayed by the lie that think that the demise is no longer commercially viable.

It still sold in bucketloads this Christmas, and with the C6408 now in operation, it seems as though there are billions of games on the horizon.

The next time somebody mentions the superior 16-bit machines, do what I do and they'll find it very difficult to pee standing up ever again. And remind them that fares made a comeback, and they're disgusting.

TEENAGE MUTANT HERO TURTLES™

It was no surprise to find Teenage Mutant etc top of the Grimbo charts, but what sort of game was it? Duncan Evans, our own hero in a straight jacket, dropped into the local sewer to find out.

Gah, bloody Teenage Mutant Turtles this, Turtles that, you couldn't draw breath without smelling pizza, you couldn't switch on the TV without being assaulted by a four year old episode of the air/foam (and this is an overnight sensation!), and you couldn't go shopping without some guest appearance by a halfwit in a half shell waving a rubber katana. Congratulations go to Microsoft for having the nous to sign up the biggest cross marketing exercise for years, and not riding the hype all the way to the ruins and spot. But what about the game? Ah yes, well do you really want to play the game? I mean if Microsoft had stuffed the box with stickers, a plastic turtle and a comic then most people would have been happy.

Not us though, thanks to the demand for the damned game we had to go out and buy a copy. And what goodies do you get in the box, what little extras to supplement the game are thrown in free, well how generous has Microsoft been over the testing period? You get a joystick. And the plastic disk bag is green. Jesus, don't go overboard guys.

So to the game then, and the PLOT (TM - incidently did you know there are 25 TMs on the box?). April O'Neil has been kidnapped from her news van by Shredder, so you have to rescue her from the sewers, or wherever she's being held. On top of that you also have to work your way towards the Technodrome, home of Shredder, and kick his ass before retrieving the Life Transformer Gaur jacket will turn into master Splinter back into his original human form). This being set in New York, no-one would probably notice the difference.

So that's the idea then, take control of each of the turtles in turn, as you fight your way through the various levels, searching for April. Though you can only control one character at a time, you need the speciality skills of each turtle at the appropriate time to combat the various monsters thrown at you. Well you're suggested to but I went through my turtles like a Japanese at lunch, so never had the chance to employ those sort of tactics.

Each turtle has a strength rating, which disappears at an alarming rate, but can be replenished by copious slices of pizza, if you can find them. What's annoying are the enemies who just walk forwards and into you, giving you no chance to cut fight them. You chop away, but they cost you half your strength before they finally disappear in a puff of smoke.

Most of them are indistinguishable things anyway, so it's no great loss. There are two types of view, one is outside-on-the-streets, which is sort of Gauntlet like, and looks awful, the other is inside buildings and sewers, where you get a sideways on view. The turtles are well done, and the backgrounds are okay, but the opposition are poorly drawn. At least you can keep around quite nicely, even if you don't have many moves to make.

Bad news really comes on the music front. It's so bad and grating you just have to turn it off sharpish, before everyone else in the room starts throwing stuff at you.

Compare the Turtles to Last Ninja 3 and you see the turtles looking green for another reason. To be honest it's a mediocre city, but with everyone jumping on the train into town without seeing where they were going, disappointment awaits at the destination.

Go on dude, hit him with your rather manly, but highly illegal pipe weapon (By the way, the green blobby thing is you)

Huge hype, great marketing, but a dull and uninspiring game, and bugged all freebies in the box.

If you aren't the man you think you are, spare a thought for Quaid, a man played by Arnie, who thinks he's someone else who is in league with the Mars resistance, but is in fact someone else entirely who has set himself up as a friend of the resistance to lead his allies, the authorities to the resistance, while gradually recovering his true memory, which isn't Quaid, or the man, Quaid thinks he might be. Duncan Evans is confused.

Mars, and one major achievement in the charts which lead to it breaking free from Earth control.

While not being particularly complex, Total Recall is certainly convoluted with regards to its main character. Thankfully this is not the case with the game, which instantly hooks you through its plot points, leaving you with just the reading, amount, logging, saving, collecting and killing to do.

There are four levels of total, starting off on Earth where Quaid has to make his way to a phone box on the other side of the city. On the way he has to defeat oxygen for water being made power, which then he kills people with and other useful goodies. It goes but the first level looks like the scene of a warehouse in Milton Keynes rather than a futuristic city. Obviously the programmers didn't have the same budget as Call of Duty.

Platforms and enemies is the order of the day here, with a suitable chunky looking Arnie shuffling around the various designed platforms. Well, it's not the platforms that are dangerous, it's the damned-silly pits that abound. In this Total Recall there's a characteristic of Elephant

Hum, you can tell that this isn't your run of the mill Arnie flick, can't you. I mean, he got so much paid you only recourse is to blow holes through anyone who gets in your way. Philip K. Dick (deceased) was the guy responsible for such classics as Do Androids Antics, which is also reviewed this month, and that is what you can only tell where some of the pits are, after you have fallen into them. Now this is annoying enough, but considering you only get one life with no continue options at the beginning of the game (although they do appear when you get further into the game), it's pretty bloody infuriating.

If you get past this level then it's drive your car time, which is based on the weakest part of the film, the Johnny Cash chase. Avoid the crawling police cars, avoiding being an impediment accident with the scenery and you can get to play level three. Now Quaid and Marina meet up with Benny, a mute taxi driver, who, while leading them through to the rebel hideout, also tells them down the drain (which is the film's poop, given the plot away). Anyway, let you go with level four, and more platform action, as you race through the rebel hideout, and on to the alien complex at the heart of the mountain. This is a race against time, as a bomb has been placed inside the alien complex, which, if it explodes, is going to not enhance a day.

It does select a bit uneven (well you're backing two hours of film into four levels), which makes it a good idea to watch the film, or video, before playing the game. At least then you'll know

Could it be that Arnie's met his match? Like buggery!! Unless that's a low name Woody Mammoth with a severe attitude problem and a tendency to say "Don't drink and bake!", I don't think so. Go on Arnie blow him away, he doesn't even deserve being on the same screen as you the maestro!

TREVOR BROOKING'S WORLD CUP GLORY

Some people say that timing is everything in football. What time the pubs open, what time you get to the ground, what time you beat the hell out of the other supporters, etc. Trevor Brooking used to have good timing when he was a player, but that was some years ago and since TBWCG has come out six months after the main event, his powers are obviously on the wane. Duncan Evans catches up with the old codger.

Challenge Software is well known for it's strategy games, but not for all action entertaining graphics. Trevor Brooking is well known for his match commentaries, but equally not for all action graphics. Bring the two together and while strategy may win out, you don't really expect visual excitement.

This, if you hadn't guessed (because you were thick or something) is a game of the last world cup, so quite why greyhair Trec has endorsed it is anyone's guess since the world cup he played in was in 1960. And that didn't involve much glory either, 'cos both him and Kevin Keegan couldn't score the goals we needed against Spain.

However, you have inherited a team which has suffered a series of depressing results and is now well and truly downhearted. Your task is to restore the confidence of these witless one-legged blind mutes to Germanic arrogance and raise the skill level to, er, Germanic excellence. In

Of course some players that'll never improve - the whole of the Arsenal team for a start, and the Lemington Howlers, and Bosworth (under-chiefs (they're REALLY cheap) in fact every team in the online world would have a job to get to the unbelievably spotty standards of Liverpool FC - they're yike best and no mistake!!!)

short you have to qualify for the world cup, and then win it. Along the way you can test out new strategies and bolster the confidence of the boys by playing deadbeats like Albania.

That was the plan, we lost 2-1 and half the squad committed suicide the next day. Each player has an ability and a fitness rating, and you can train both of these elements up between games. It's surprising to see the form of some of your stars swing so wildly though. Walker might be rated 4 this month and 10 next month. The other thing training can improve is team work, though the value of this is questionable. Even with team work rated as good, with decent players sprinkled throughout the squad, and playing an ordinary 4-3-3 formation, England still went down to Albania.

The actual process of entering players into the squad and from there into

TEN THINGS YOU NEVER KNEW ABOUT TREVOR BROOKING*

1. He didn't play for Farnley Celtic in the Woodmills League.
2. His dad was called Mr Brooking.
3. His team wasn't.
4. Trevor means 'Dark haired wanderer who like moose' in Eskimo.
5. He scored the winning goal when West Ham beat Old Etonian Strikers in a FA Cup tie in 1879.
6. Trevor likes Bourbon biscuits with a hint of mustard.
7. Mr Brooking is one of the BBC's highest paid commentators, earning in excess of four million pounds per match.
8. My aunty used to know someone who lived in the same street.
9. Trevor prefers lime green socks.
10. Despite everything they is still one of the boys and can be found dog bailing at his local pub most nights of the week.

Ofen Trevor really knows what he's on about doesn't he? I mean he's not as if he just quotes the scores or anything. I'd even base my entire tactics around his infinite wisdom.

the team formation is unbelievably tedious. I mean, you'd think Challenge would have the sense to carry over the players from one game to the next instead of forcing you to re-enter every player for every game. This really is stupid.

Balancing your formation is important, as is getting the ball down the wings, though the number of shots on goal that your forward line produce is sometimes not accurate with regards to their numbers and quality.

At half time in a game, be it world cup or friendly, our mate Trev sticks his ear into the proceedings with such telling comments as "The lads will be disappointed with this first half. England's right side looked strong but Albania had the better chances and possession." To very much Trev, there's a bundle of stats on the text only match display which tells you as much.

So I wasn't expecting graphics, but I was expecting polished gameplay and professional displays (and not just from the team). Would you believe the Spectrum version is far more polished than this amateurish looking C64 game. While there is a reasonable football game under there crying to get out, sloppiness and unprofessionalism have rather strangled it.

There are even five skill levels, with the first and easiest being challenging, and the rest getting harder. Very balanced I'm sure.

Average sums up the actual game, but shoddy sums up the way it works, and the look of the whole shooting match.

GAZZA II

Howay the lads! Gazza's finally made it again, but is this second attempt at footy fun just fog on the pitch or Georgie joys? Rik Henderson slaps his Gazza and Friends LP on the deck and wonders if he'll end up crying after loading Empire's latest effort.

From 13 year old spotty adolescents - who use half alternative, but have never had a hair on their face in their lives, to 40 year-old women who are made gooey of the thought of a young man who cries almost like a nineties' Tiny Tears, everybody's heard of the mind-gobbling entity that is Paul Gascoigne (apart from one old crumbly judge with his public school tie shoved firmly in a place where only the headmaster has seen before).

And it seems that footballing brilliance is not enough to qualify you for superstardom nowadays. You need to keep a few bucketloads of salty pennies to be recognised as a hot merchandise property. Just think what the world would be like now if Pele had blown a nose-full of spit into a hanky and snivelled when he missed that famous pitch-length shot in the 1970 world cup.

But maybe shedding a few tears is not all it comes up to be, because it hasn't be forgotten that Gazza, he who was to be left behind instead of playing for England in the 1990 world cup, wowed us all with a superb form of soccer skill that made him invaluable to our team set-up.

I'd like to think that it's down to this reason that a latest game has been released with his nickname emblazoned on the cover, that and the fact that the previous attempt was so crap. There was a need to make up for the former disappointment.

So how has it been done? Well, you remember Kick Off don't you? (Picture that in your mind, flip the screen the other way horizontally scrolling, instead of vertically) and place the ball to the player in control's leg and you've got Gazza II. Oh yeh, slow it down a notch or two as well.

It's not all been done before though, in fact GII tries desperately to be different to any other footy game. It certainly manages to cram a lot of strategy and what could be passed for management. The only problem is that it seems to be for this fact alone that the game falls below the excellent level at which its sponsor so often performs.

You see, every player has an individual level for CGI magic, that will bewee Liverpool penalty taker, lines up to shoot one team with only 00 seconds left on the clock. I'm not telling you whether he scores or not, but let's just say that the replay's on Wednesday!

Hammer, running, kicking, passing, control ball, and tackling and at times it seems that the comms is having problems coping with the vast amount of factors in just simply running the ball from one end of the pitch to the other. Therefore, even the fastest player on the pitch runs as if he's done something rather nasty in his shorts. And there's also the option to be injured, when this happens (and you've got no more subs on the bench) you may as well go make yourself a nice cup of tea 'cause it'll take hours to get from one end of the pitch to the other.

This said, Gazza II still offers a lot. It's far better than Kick Off and Kick Off

2. for instance, and graphically it beats the Lego man style of most of the other efforts. And it's tonnes better than the original game. In fact there's only one game that's better (in my opinion), because it has many more options, and that's Manchester United.

If there was more of an incentive to play, such as a league or cup, as well as having different weather effects and pitch type (which it does very well), it would be worthwhile suffering the speed at which the game plays. I suppose we could be grateful though that there's not even a musical note that coincides with 'Gog on the Tyre' or 'George Boys'.

DELTA

KIXX £3.99

There was a time when the CG4 market was fatter and more boned than it is now, a time when everyone was looking at their CG4 and thinking, maybe I should buy an ST, or maybe sparkingly good sideways scroller. Delta is not that game, Delta is the one Stereo Positives came up with after Sanson, and unfortunately showed that Stereo really didn't have any imagination.

Delta is also a sideways scrolling blast fest, but one with a tortuously difficult method of acquiring power ups for your desperately sluggish and torpid fighter. It does have some sort of plot, but you wouldn't want to know it, and features a cunning method of exchanging cash from destroying aliens, into big boy weaponry, if you run over an icon that you can't exchange cash for, it destroys you (talk about short tempered).

Graphics and sound are reasonably good and slick, but Delta offers little for todays gamer at this price. The most telling point is that shortly after completing Delta, Stereo joined the Nonesogen Army.

ELEPHANT

Duncan Evans reckons he has the memory of an elephant, we thought the resemblance was more in the nose department. Either way he drew the short straw and got to review Elephant Antics.

Poor little elephant, there he was playing away in his native jungle, when suddenly, bad robbers came and stole little elephant away. Dey wanted to take him to a zoo, but little elephant he was clever, and he jumped out of the aeroplane and glided down to the ground with his umbrella. And now you have to guide the little elephant all the way home, starting off in France.

Pass the sick bucket, it's another of those cutesy games, but this time with real six year old mentality and not just cute graphics (which aren't that cute anyway). So you've got control of the elephant, armed with jumbo snail power from his ancestor and jumbo exploding pie power from his... er, I don't think we should go into this. Anyway, armed with a prodigious amount of elephantine lives, you have to leap and jump, and float (with the umbrella) your way around hundreds of trap laden platforms as you attempt to get home. Unfortunately, Elephant Antics is one of those games where skill counts for nothing as you explore. You explore a bit, and find all the traps. Then you play again and jump over where you know the traps to be but can't see them. I hate this sort of game, it artificially makes you play longer, by forcing you to play the same bits over and over again as you slowly navigate your way through the hazards which you can't see coming or avoid, as you don't know they are there until you've either run into or fallen onto them. Grrrr.

Then you've got all manner of indigenous life forms out to make your life hell as well, and with pure inventive genius the chaps twenty bottles of dog breath strength older, and that year was 1987. As is the way with these things, along came Sanson and though completely derivative, it was a have come up with... guess what for France? Just guess. Frog of course. La? I nearly strangled the cat.

Controls are okay, thank god, and when falling your descent is controllable, so if you miss a jump then at least you can try and guide yourself down to safety, and of course it means no deaths from falling 20 feet (which would be quite unpleasant for an elephant actually). So full marks for making the mechanics of the game playable. The music is predictably party (balloons and lemonade type of party) live, with jolly sounds all the way through, and the graphics, while hardly impressive, are pleasant and sorta cute (ugh I hate myself for admitting that) in places. I just don't like the damned design! Other than that you can't really complain. So those with plenty of patience and a love of this sort of game step forwards, and you can have my copy.

Another cutesy game, this time from the pre-pubescent Codemasters, geared towards progression by error and repetition, that doesn't score highly in the graphics department, but is certainly playable enough.

a public domain version of Wings of Fury and music that sounds like a Japanese band trying to play Western music on badly tuned instruments. Visual errors were not good with the Codemasters attempt. But how wrong we were, those lacklustre graphics strained and animated to their utmost to give us a game of unrestrained Japanese and 'Who won the war anyway' jokes.

The object is to shoot down a fighter, collect its supply of explosives before they hit the ground, then dive bomb the gates of the tower holding your fellow yellow peril hostages.

Successed and a new level featuring more tanks and jet fighters, jetpack riders firing lasers, and all sorts of other rather silly and out of place aeronautical contraptions compete.

Though hard, and requiring Moogooes like reactions rather than actual timing and precision, Kamikaze is jolly good fun, though it might offend limp-wristed lefties and Jap sympathisers. But then who won the war anyway.

If there's one thing you can rely on the Other being for, it's a simplistic game with little or no scrolling, environmentally damaging (supporting MacDonald's is despicable dear boys), and usually quite good fun for the under 10s. Kwik Snax is much the same game as Fast Food (even down to the title), which was a previous Palmer style game.

Kwik Snax is basically more of the same, with a couple of cute characters, the object of rescuing Fluffles and leading them to safety. All that needs to be done, is to head for the hatching Fluffle eggs, run over the beetle and lead it to safety before the horridly wobbly monsters eat them.

Simple stuff, not a great deal of fun to play, the graphics don't impress at all, though some of the characters are engaging enough, I'm afraid Kwik Snax isn't very tasty at all.

According to David Darling, you have to play this game to believe it. But not because the packaging is full of lies, not because the actual game is somewhat different from the rest of the rest game, and certainly a departure for Codemasters. It shows a spark of originality.

The object is to tilt a playing screen so that a ball can be moved around a maze, and deposited down a hole.

over the allocated maze games that you still see in fun fairs. An additional worry is that each time you tilt the table to rotate the ball around, you use up power, which rapidly runs out. There is a backup power available, but unless you are near to finishing then you've had it anyway.

All or four easy mazes come the way with traps, and then the ball gets bigger. Good stuff, in a wordless sort of way, but it does offer an increasingly difficult challenge, and is a struggle for a few hours on a wet Sunday evening.

similar plans to yourself, to defeat. But defeat them at what?

Planet domination of course! You have several planets in a solar system and you have to populate and defend each. When you have set up your base camps on some of them, and your opponent likewise, you can then attack the alien's worlds and become ruler of the whole system.

This is not that easy because you have to populate and build an army up on each planet by converting it from a truly barren lump of rock into something that can support life, and this all takes a lot of thought and time.

Supremacy has been in development now for almost two years and it does tell. There is enormous depth, and it certainly seems a lot more polished than Slim City was on the C64. Strategy games fans should be salivating in the prospect of getting their grubby mitts on it. We'll be given you a full review next month.

populate OTHER worlds and, I'd wager a large amount of dosh, probably wreck those as well.

Melbourne House's (God, are they still around?) new strategy game allows you to have first hand experience of planet domination, in this latest attempt at capturing the Slim-City fans. What is weird though, is that Supremacy was developed and programmed initially on the 16-bits and seemed to use much of the powers that those particular machines offer. On the C64, and this is the weird part, there seems to be no cut backs in anything (wow!). Gameplay, check! Sonics, check! Even graphics are there in force.

But the biggest question is, was it any good in the first place?

Most 16-bit meags thought so, and even compared it to such greats as Millennium 3.3 and Populous (two games that, sadly, never made it to the console), its strength lies in the fact that although the strategical part is fairly complex and engrossing, there are five progressively harder computer-controlled aliens, that also have

GAUNTLET 3D

ON THE DRAWING BOARD

Those were the days, ah? When four sweaty hippies were crammed around the largest coin-up in the arcade shouting things like "I'll get the potion!", "You shot me you buffoon!", and "Aargh, you're stepping on my toe!" And boy did that machine gobble up the credits when you'd managed to get yourself and your team down to the fifth level and the whole party were surrounded by deaths. The youngest of you will probably think "what the hell is he talking about, the big lummox?", but the rest will cry in unison "GAUNTLET! Ah yes we remember it well."

It was a classic, and even though the home computer version was a rite bugged, that was a classic too. So was its sequel, and The Deeper Dungeons, with tonnes more traps and loads of new features, but unfortunately all the clones seemed to spoil the fun, and now we come to expect multi-player games as a way of life, if it ain't got it we ain't buying it.

Therefore there seemed to be nothing more that could be done to raise the popularity of what was one of the world's best concepts in game design.

Surely there is no way back for the top-down maze game, with creeps and crawling, and treasure chests and traps, and exits and teleporters, or is there?

through a Last Ninja type of perspective where you see the action from a sort of squiffy 'front the carrier' view point, and although the gameplay remains very similar, there are more monsters and, more importantly, four new characters to choose to play with. Again you can invite a friend to participate, but you're more likely to spend most of your time oggling at the wicked graphics than smagging the plethora of ghosts.

The major difference, though, is that there are only eight levels of play, unlike the hundreds adopted by the original, but each one will be quite enormous, and will involve more puzzling and arcade-adventure style gaming than ever before.

Although it's taken a long time to reach us you can bet that it's been worth the wait. Gauntlet 3D is the original concept being brought right up to date, and if it was anyone "happening" it'd be wearing flares and listening to the Happy Mondays.

Actually there certainly is, because US Gold is about to resurrect Gauntlet completely, with the introduction of Gauntlet II in wonderful 'seeing is believing' 3D. This is

CYBER FUNK

SCENE 1 - THE INTRO:

Unless you've been hunting obscure breeds of moose in the Brazilian Savannah for the last three years (or have managed to studiously ignore chart-board dance music), you ought to recognise the name of Coldcut. "People Hold On" was a hit for Lisa Stansfield with the Coldcut duo's help and over the years they've remixed singles, broadcast during Kiss FM's pirate days, won awards and even worked with staunchest indie group of all, The Fall.

Jeffrey Davy interviews pop megastars Coldcut and video supremos Hardwire about the art of pop promotional videos.

And now they've got a video. Their press release bills it as Coldcut's "Cyber Chaos" "Longform" video. And it's got codes of computer graphics. There are six dance videos on the tape. It's musical content comes from the DJ album "Some Like It Cold", which ranges from the electronic-sounding "Hide the Pressure" to "Find a Way", an ideological track featuring Queen Latifah. What's more, all the graphics (which are mixed with live action) were designed and executed on Apple Macs, Amigas and Archimedes rather than a mind-bogglingly expensive Quantel Paintbox.

So just who are the responsible parties?

SCENE 2 - THE MUSICIANS:

"I used to be a Defender ace" says Matt Black, half of Coldcut. He used to be a computer programmer (or an, ahem, sport Oric - a computer which had a market profile as high as an art in a sandstone even when it was first launched) and a biochemist - he even built a synthesiser at school - while partner Jonathan More was a silversmith and an art teacher - They met in '88 and, as the intro to "Hart to Hart" goes, "When they got together it was murder".

Asked about computers, Matt offers Xenon II and Space Ace as few games but adds: "I really got into Golden Axe. Me and a mate spent pounds on it. More my speed is Starfighter 2, though. I'm also into 3D Tank games."

Coldcut don't just play games on their hardware.

As well as using computers for music, Matt says: "I had an Atari and used creative software with it - now I've got an Amiga. A lot of them blow up but ours hasn't and I've got a great Cyberpaint package." In fact, Matt designed many of the video's graphics: "I've always dreamt, my old man's an artist". He uses Deluxepaint and has a Polaroid palette machine to get hard copies. His favourite of the video's tracks is "Ride the Pressure", because most of my Amiga stuff's in that." He adds, "I'm totally into Cyberpunk and Philip K Dick is a continuous source of inspiration."

With this project as in most others, Coldcut don't make a major physical appearance. "Joe and me are more read scientists in the background." Concluding he says, "I knew one day machines would get cheap enough for good graphics. It's party time for everyone now ..."

SCENE 3 - THE CREATORS:

Robert Pepperell and Mita Varian run Hardcore video productions. The two left college two years ago and wanted to carry on using computers. So they did. They've since enhanced (ie, added) their graphics and such skills not only for Coldcut but for Inner City, Spiritwings, The Darling Buds, Lisa Stansfield and The Fall (then again).

"It started off with DTP and design but we'd always really been into video, we were also very into computer graphics and their potential," explains Robert.

Hardware's greatest achievement was "in Deep", Coldcut's Christmas single. "It was the first broadcast quality video produced completely on microcomputers," offers Robert, "it made the point to a lot of people that you could do fun animation on relatively cheap hardware."

"There's no correlation between the quality of the video and the amount of money spent. There's a general snobbery about quality, we're trying to break that down and to stretch the hardware to the limit, trying to produce new and different effects. We try out new technological combinations. We're having a good time with the technology and make a living out of it"

How do they go about designing and making a video, then? "We never actually plan what we do, we improvise! The inspiration is partly set off by lyrics in the songs but we also try to make the video surprising. We're always trying to come up with something wacky and new."

"The better a song is, the better the whole thing is eventually. You have to try much less hard with a good thing to keep it interesting."

"I think Miles would really like to do a video for Public Enemy. Any band that's musically interesting - not bland US rock that we have no sympathy with."

Have they ever come up with something totally weird city? "The video we did with Coldcut and Mark E. Smith (of the Fall) is so weird that people can't watch it and there was an image in the Queen Latifah track of a creature with thousands of arms. We're not allowed to be as weird as we want to be."

"They've been looking at demo disks recently."

"That's where we see it happening. What these young programmers have got out of the Amiga is incredible. Their programming skill has to emerge somewhere, it can't just disappear but there are no outlets for computer graphics. That's probably why the PD network has sprung up. Something's going to happen."

"There's no recognition of this kind of art. That's because those sort of institutions (such as the Arts Council - who hand out cash to struggling artists or, more often, don't) are run by forty and fifty year old men. Perhaps when they die things will change ..."

The Coldcut 'Longform' video will be out soon from Big Life Records.
