ALL CHANGE!

Welcome to Commodore Permal, Britain's finest and fastest growing mag for the C64. We report on everything that's happening on the C64 scene, from games to techy stuff. So if you've got a Commodore and want to get the most out of it, this mag's for you.

It's been all change, all round, this month as a fresh crew have boarded the CP ship. I've taken the helm as editor, James Leahy of Four Shoulder Arms has taken over the Games Editor's station and Cathy Parrham has signed up as Production Assistant - the one who checks that we've spelt things right and that our photo captions are dead. While Paul 'Inside Info' Lyons is moving into the 'Techie' corner dependent's chair full time. What hasn't changed though is our commitment to bringing you the very best C64 magazine in the history of history itself.

After the avalanche of software last Christmas there seems little sign of a lull - up with the big name licensors, Body Heat and Redneck 3 hitting the C64 this month. And if that wasn't enough there's a new wave of original budget games about to reach the shops in the form of Demon Blues and Sphinxes. We give them all a Powerlevel review - and the results are surprising indeed.

Cheers

To play this thrilling 3D adventure in your no-hand-stop-a-trick-in-part-two and you're off. Keep an eye on the floating heart and water, or on the bottom of the screen if you want to stay healthy. Just wait about looking for 12 Sphinx bits, gold and more water, all of which are collected by walking into them.

FIRELORD

Another Post II special, Firelord is a sword-swing-and-cast-weapons-while-not-getting-killed-see-up. Walk around the enormous landscape trying to avoid the enemies and slip into the full-time houses to trade weapons, spells and supplies. Make sure the owners aren't looking when you nab their stuff though!

FAST

A futuristic road dual to the death. This is meant to read more than it's built in two player mode. Solo drivers use Post II, but for simultaneous human racing use one 'nick in each. Select the options with the joystick in Post 2, then get ready to start dawning - real fast!

DEMOS

DEMON BLUES

A spiky cute pattern thingy, Demon Blue is a demo of the latest Under-keeper special from Mervin's. Post a joystick in port 2 and it's game on. Move left or right with the 'nick, press fire to jump and pull diagonally down to scream around in an impressively silly spaz. You're after a key but watch out for these snakes!

NO LOAD ZONE!

If your tape should fail to work properly follow these simple instructions:

- 1) Switch off the machine, and start all over before you try loading again.
- 2) Check that your machine is not faulty by loading a piece of software you know works properly.
- 3) If all attempts fail, put the tape in a strong jiffy bag, with a Stampout Addressed Envelope, and send it to:

SPHINX JINX

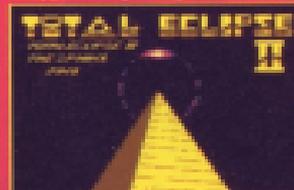

INCENTIVE

Joystick in port 2

Here it is! An exclusive! We've managed to get hold of a Powerpack game never before released, and have planned it squarely on the coverpage. What is it about?

Look, it's like this: you're sitting around next to those yellow pointy buildings with no windows (pyramids - Ee! in Egypt in 1998). The Sphinx has been bashed into 12 parts, and, as no-one else is around, you're going to have to take the blame for damaging her (yes, it's a female) unless you can glue it all together pretty sharpish (is under an hour, actually, else you'll get the blame and, owing to some lunar eclipse or other, the world will explode, injuring dozens of people). Yes, it's shoddy up to be one of these days.

The first thing to do is get yourself inside the Great Pyramid. This is where you'll find the 12 bits of the Sphinx (they're smaller than you'd think). You've also got thousands of yards of coprolite to wander around, and the clock ticks away your things back gone.

Yes, yes, there's a phenomenal pyramid! There's also a 1542 ECLIPSE box, if you don't get long and fast those 12 Sphinx bits by midnight!

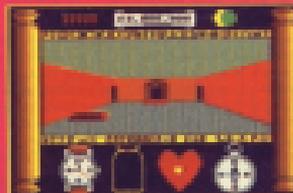

Moving around using the FreeScope™ system is dead easy using the joystick. Everything is in walk-through 3D, and if you map it all out, you'll avoid getting lost (and you might even produce a week of art to treasure and hand down to your grand kiddies).

As you wander around, you might well start to feel the ravages of time. Water troughs are the answer. Just look (by walking into them) when and you'll be fast. Touching things is the way around! That block is part of the Sphinx bit of her feet. In fact, there's just 12 more places to get. Suppressing, isn't it?

The Male Guardian, Gob, and there's some serious gold-chasing done over on the left. Just don't let Roger Proulx hear it.

These staples get holds at you, so get the cut price red and open the tin. These foods, being used to sustain the hapless Homer Simpson, come of "the hollowest of stone pebble-treated steelwheat" at the top of your video.

Walking into them? There and you'll be full. Touching things is the way to collect these suits (and sphere-shaped bits), and to operate anything you come across, so the key to success is to touch everything (carefully).

What else is in store? Well if air would care to stop this way he'll find a large number of poison darts, which he would be well-advised to avoid. He might also care to avoid dead-ends and other tricks of traps.

If you find any skulls (part of creative things), you could try unhooking them with them (it might not work all the time). But it's worth a go. Height is measured in cubits (some of your mirths rubbish here). 20 cubits means 24 cubits, and each cubit is about half an ell, or three perches. Now that's clear, there's just a couple of final hints - keep your heart-beat down (avoid getting overwhelmed and being shot at here), and look out for the good bars, they could make you remarkably rich. So that's it. Er, good luck, and remember to keep a

The combatants battle it out whilst trying their hardest to avoid the unpleasant walls which keep interfering.

FAST

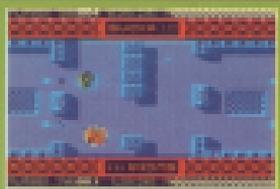

5 METCALFE, MIDDLETON, LEEDS

Joystick in port 2. I say, you chaps - there's a thing. I delirious Commissioner Format reader by the name of B Metcalfe sent us a game called Fast. We loaded it up, and sure enough it was very fast indeed. So good, in fact, that we've decided to include on this month's remarkably excellent Powerpack tape.

The idea of B's game is simple. You race over the surface of a planet trying to avoid collisions with any nasty hard objects that happen to get in the way. You've got eight-way movement, controlled by the joystick, and hey oh boy, you're going to need it!

Right. The big thing about Fast, the absolute clincher, is the two-player option. In this, you and a thum push along the marvellous landscape trying to force each other into the obstacles. You don't have any offensive weaponry, so the only way you can kill off your opponent is by slamming him with south-facing force against the walls. It's like those movies where two cars are colliding along a city street, bouncing off shapes and stuff.

If you hit something with a glancing blow, rather than head on, your ship doesn't explode, but spins round, temporarily out of control. This is the best time for your enemy to get into the killing position, where he can cut off your escape. On the risky route you'll be taking are loads and loads of collectables. These range from simple points additions to carry things like speed-up levers (which make both you and your mate travel faster in quality) to slow downers, darkness-makers and points reversers (you get all your pal's points and he gets yours). Crazy, eh?

"Oh, sorry?" Oh yes you go down in a mass of glory whilst the other specimen for accidentally slamming her into a wall.

If Fast sounds exciting, here's the good news. There are a hundred levels of this non-stop, mayhem-type action just waiting for you to play them. You can choose how many (up to 10) levels to go for and which ones you want to play by selecting them with the joystick and typing in the numbers of the levels you want to play. Then, choose whether you want to go for continuous play, select the number of players and you're off.

For added thrills, you can even get the computer to choose the levels at random. Yes, Fast may be not be produced by a big software house with expensive computers, fast cars and shiny suits, but it's certainly got more excitement than most humans are built to withstand (a slight exaggeration there, I think - just).

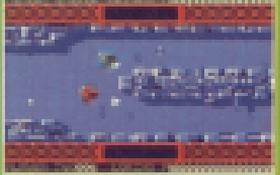

One word of warning, the race starts the instant that the second human racer hits fire - or when you hit fire when racing against the computer. So have that "stick ready at all times, or it will all end in tears - and twisted legs!

VROOOOO

The red ship's been bounced really into the path of some large and painful bricks. Well I don't think you wanted to do that!

Which way to go? Decisions, decisions. And you can't even sleep on it - you've got to move now!

DEMON BLUES

MICROVALUE

Joystick in part 2

It must be great being a demon. As long as you're not a particularly nasty one, you can get up to all sorts of mischief (and never have to pay you're doing).

On the other hand, you don't have a soul and no one is ever nice to you, so it's best to stick with being a human. If you want to see what life as a demon is like, we've got just the thing for you here. It's a playable demo of Demon Blues.

DB is a little character who looks (like we say it?) buff, scabby and generally cute. He lives in a fantasy world based around the ancient Greek myths. What he's got to do is collect a hidden key (one of six in the full game, which, incidentally, is reviewed on page 35).

You control DB using the joystick alone, and on your travels you'll come across various collectables, such as (necessarily) valuable gems (which boost your score) and energy pills (which give you some of your strength back).

Left and right move you left and right, fire makes you jump, down and left (or right) lets you whizz quickly in that direction. Being remarkably bright, you'll have noticed that wherever there is there any mention of a weapon. This is because you haven't got one. Not a sausage. The thing is, because you're a demon you aren't supposed to need a weapon. What you've got instead is a star which rotates around you. This

21ST CENTURY ENTERTAINMENT

Joysticks in part 2

Magic, mystery, mazes and something else beginning with 'M' all combine in this terrifying game of deep forests, naughty ghosts, and well-meaning old characters.

You must play a cheerful little fellow called, for some reason, Dashboard. Your quest is clear - to seek out the sacred Firestone and return it to the dragon (and no, this is nothing to do with a brand of tires).

The Firestone in question has been nicked by an evil Golem, who, not content with a spot of theft, has cursed the land with greasy ghosts and maroon monsters. All this, of course, makes your task a tad tricky. As well as the badies which materialise as you wander the forest, there are loads of good guys to meet. They tend to stay indoors for much of the time, so whenever you see a house, pop in - and say hi. You never know what you might find (unless you look at the in-house services book).

In the various out-buildings you'll meet witches and wizards who can give you spells, knights who have serious firepower and a wise old man (who's pretty useless actually). Don't worry - you'll soon get to know all these buds and what items they have which they are willing to swap with you.

It's advisable to collect weapons first, then fancy spells later. You'll also need food to keep your energy up, but as this is found all over the forest, you should be okay for now. What more needs to be said other than try and map out the whole forest, get the Firestone and retire to a small village in West Sussex and write your memoirs. Good luck, Dashboard! (DB, and send any nicely drawn maps to us at: Commodore Forum, 50 Waverne Street, Bath, Avon BA1 2BN).

And basically that's it. Buy the full game and you'll have over 130 different screens, all with the excellent animations and smooth graphics you see here. Load and enjoy!

These screens together and you get an idea why Gomez Blue is a hot special. Those stylish graphics are matched by furious speed.

The Addams Family

ocean

Let's face it — there are very few original plots in the world of computer games. If it's a platform game, chances are that you're a good guy who has to rescue his sweetheart from some bad guys.

What separates the classics from the crud are the graphics, animation and gameplay — and Beavers seems to have more than its fair share of all three.

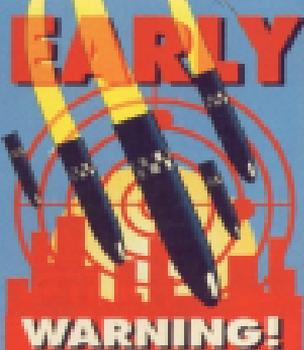

In this cute and cuddly platform romp, you play Jellio, a workly-wise beaver. All is well in Jellio's world, until — well what do you think happens next? Yup, an evil gang in this case made up of evil forest beaver-nip, Jellio's girlfriend and take her off to their dens far away in a distant valley. Rather than just killing the justice and letting them start it out, Jellio stomps all in pursuit, avenging himself on the way with all sorts of strange and throwable things.

In addition to can-do, one of two rather unusual things that you wouldn't normally expect of a beaver. Not only can he spin round slashing opponents with his tail, or knocking them out of their trees, but if he spins it fast enough he can use it as a helicopter blade, enabling him to launch aerial attacks on his foes.

There are four valleys in Beavers, each made up of four levels for Jellio to battle through in search of his love. The first level is set in the evergreen forests in summer, where Jellio can utilize the access to use as weapons. Along the way he has to cross rivers and waterfalls by leaping from one floating log to another, or utilize the help of friendly salmon and turtles. At the end of the level, Jellio has to do battle with and defeat one of the four bears that guard the route.

Valley two is a winter scene, where a snow bear is the enemy and snowballs are the weapons used to defeat him. Valley three is a huge lumber yard, infested not only with evil beavers but also filled with buzzsaws and falling logs. The final level bear here is a hilariously bear - who's 2000-stupid, you have to shoot him in the feet to beat him. The final level is the cave hideout of the bears, riddled with loose rocks and runaway mine cars - and if Jellio makes it to the end he meets... well,

This play on the other foot is well on over, all time in the arena, Jellio!

Jellio meets a cunning little mouse named JAM! New scenes

If you've been caught up in the excitement and razzamazz of the Winter Olympics, you'll be glad to know that you'll soon be able to experience a little bit of the high-speed action from the comfort of your warm home. Winter Super Sports '92 is a multi-event sports sim that promises to be the next best thing to having the old jumpers fly off the ramp and land in the living room.

The right events include Skiing (downhill, giant slalom and slaloms), Bobsled Racing, Bobsled, Luge, Speed Skating and Bobsledding. Rather than just being tedious waggling contests, the controls only much more an SMI, steering, timing and rhythm.

In the skiing events, of which the downhill is the fastest, split-second timing is required to avoid the trees and rocks. The Giant Slalom is a two-player head-to-head where timing is even more of an asset as you weave through the gates. The ski challenge is a cross between the two where both players appear on the same screen.

The bobsled and the luge are similar events, but the rules are different and

WINTER SUPER SPORTS '92

Snow sports may look glamorous on TV, but they carry the real risk of spending eight weeks in plaster too!

Now Flair have a simulation solution! Tomba watch out, your days are numbered!

Ah, well, help, Mummy! I'm going to crash, Mummy!

Will Winter Super Sports be an exciting on the road thing?

BEAVERS

Dam! That's what Beavers do best! Or that was the case until Grandslam started looking for a cutesy hero for a tale of lost love in the four valleys. Quite why they chose a beaver has yet to be explained, but curiously enough it really seems to work!

you'll want us to spoil the surprises, how would you?

One of the best things about Beavers (that you obviously can't see in these screenshots) is the gorgeous animation that goes into Jeffrey's movement. If you leave him alone for a while, he will look at you with a bored expression. Leave him longer still and he'll lie down, go to sleep and snore (will you wake him up, when he snoops through trees with his razor-sharp incisors, he sprays splinters everywhere. When he is on the edge of a ledge he will balance and start to sweat. When he gets hit on the head by a falling object a lump rises up and starts spin around! his head in the best cartoon tradition. And what Jeffrey does up all his lives rather than just dying his taps on the floor, kicking his feet and crying his eyes out.

All that there's a challenge with the potential to rival Soots in the cube stakes. Watch out for a full review of Jeffrey's antics in next month's issue of Commodore Format.

the huge (basically two metal skates strapped to a piece of wood!) is far more difficult to steer if you'd prefer to have an engine, there's also the two player race-and-chase action of alpine racing. Here you charge your metal steed over three laps of a frozen lake with the chance to barge your opponents off the course - Ayfon Bernabeyte.

Completing the set are the special sliding and bobsledding (sort of handles races on ice), where flyline and timing beat fast joystick wiggling every time.

So that you can get an unfair advantage on your friends, there's a practice mode on all the events that lets you try each event until you're unbeatable. Tricky, eh?

One of the most fun, fast and all round interesting things about Winter Super Sports is that up to eight people can compete in the same game. Better still, in five of the events you can have simultaneous two-player action either split screen style (so that each player can roam around the whole course) or on a full-screen (where you can bump, bore and otherwise shove your opponent off the course - not every sporting, but it can be done).

And the graphics look even better when you're relaxing through the mountains of speed. No time to sit and watch the scenery pass by in this game.

Chuck Rock surprised many people, and most of all Core Design. Core released the 16-bit version during the software slow summer of 1991, and all of a sudden they had a hit on their hands. The game had a strange appeal which struck a chord with gamers - it smacked of avant silliness, but still retained a highly playable edge.

The 16-bit versions were coded because the game relied heavily upon animation for its humour, and until they could convert it properly, Core decided to give it a miss. Now you've found an Italian team who are up to the task. So it's official, the world's greatest caveman is finally coming to the Commodore.

Chuck is (allegedly) a man who's lost his lady. She's been kidnapped and so he sets off to save her, which means - yep, you've guessed it - surviving a platform jungle. The plot, as is rather obvious, is not the game's strong point. Its strength lies in the way in which the world of Stone Age men was graphically captured to provide both a challenge and fun.

Hey, Mr. Dino about what Mr. Dino did to you, before that dinosaur - and stop on it!

Rocky can be used as either offensive weapons, a shield or a step up. A stone may gamely enter.

Stone dinosaurs - are here to fly, and to stone!

Chuck's own a passing over to outspaul himself to new heights.

CHUCK ROCK

"Ugah Bugah" is Chuck Rock's catchphrase! This may sound like gibberish now, but back in the Stone Age it was the height of polite conversation. Although, how Chuck Rock qualified, even then, is still a mystery.

Amusingly, Chuck lives at the time of the dinosaurs, and they provide the foods and threats that litter the land of which one has a vague recollection. Being a co-operation (no action hero) Chuck hasn't developed anything as sophisticated as a weapon, so he has to make do with either his Deadly-style bodybombs or chucking rocks - but they are big ones! He can hurl them to stop his foes, hurl them to form platforms and he can even throw them to get the dinosaurs to do his bidding!

There will be times in Chuck Rock when he has to leap up to reach a place that's way out of reach. Here he'll need the help of a friendly crocodile, because if he stands on its tail and bungs the rock into its nose, it pivots, flung him high into the sky. If he wants a lift, paratrodyls can be encouraged with a gut-butt to help in this by grabbing Chuck by the scruff of the neck and flying him over the gap. Effective as these solutions are though in terms of gameplay - lets face it - they aren't that funny!

look style system for their magazine. At this early stage it is only available by mail order at a rate of £4.98 - because it would be too fragile to withstand the rigours of living on a newspaper shelf for a month. To get more information or purchase a copy, send a cheque or PO to Light Disk-04, Database Publications, 7 Pattenfield Close, Norwich, NE1 1JW - and they promise to get the disk back to you by in the next post.

What is wickedly amusing though are the dangers, the worst of which is, well, how do you say it, droppings. Dinosaurs are big beasts you see, many feet tall, and they eat an awful lot. By definition, this means that their rumps are way above head height and regularly set off, so, whereas in Batman the threat from above is in the shape of leaking acid pipes, in Chuck Rock it's slim droppings. Walk under the wrong head of the wrong line and you'll get a fatal fart!

Compared to the other Stone Age style Commodore games, Chuck Rock promises to have all the playing power and the total humour of its 16-bit cousins. If it lives up to that then Core could find themselves with a caveman Corkey. And this time it will be no surprise.

If you want to know who the reviews team are, or what those crazy little symbols at the top of each review page mean, all your questions are answered here, on the Powerplay page. This month, inspired by the cracking Demon Blues, the review squad confront the issues of good and evil. The team confess...

POWERPLAY

TRENTON WEBB

When asked about the worst thing he's ever done, our bot said, "It's got to be writing the score on the bridge of the Titanic into a game of talent man's ball one night in 1912. It was just getting good when... I can't talk about it any more. I still get a sinking feeling whenever I think about it."

JAMES LEACH

James has done plenty of bad things, the worst of which was skanking his girl friend up on a date. Not too nasty you may think, but the date was on Ascension Island in the Atlantic. It cost her £600 to get there, and when James didn't show, she was in bed when I returned? - Ed.

PAUL LYONS

"I stopped being bad after a really fright-ening thing happened to me. I came into work one morning only to discover that all my favourite Cold Japes and stabs had been wiped completely clean. It was terrible, all my favourite stuff down the tubes! I reckon some unseen demon was punishing me for my previous naughtinesses."

NEIL WEST

Clean living Neil says he's never been bad in his life. He says it's not in his nature. So we pressed him further: "I once typed in a cheat to Pang. I had so much to say that I deliberately lost all my lives just to get 40 of the gully feeling. Oh, and I also stayed up to 10pm one night last summer." We left Neil alone after that.

ROGER FRAMES

The super-stylish subculture admits to some pretty foul deeds. "A while ago I came in early one day and noticed a magnet over Paul Lyons' favourite game cassette. Instead of duffing me up, he looked worried and has been really nice to me (and everybody else) since. Weird, eh?"

STUART CAMPBELL

North of the border, Stuart is known as "That really, really bad boy". So how did he get that reputation? "I borrowed Edinburgh Castle one night. I did it but my parents found out and made me pay up. It's cost me £5 a month for the next 375,000 years! So I think I've learned my lesson."

SEAN MASTERSON

Sean was out when we called on him. Oh, he was in the office, but the glazed look in his eyes and the dead on his skin convinced us he wasn't actually 'in'. He mumbled some thing about dragons and "the evil that lies within the man", then spoke no more. So we emptied his pockets, found 1 lip and spent most of it on sweets.

LINDA BARKER

Being a girl, Linda couldn't have done anything bad ever, or so we thought. But when commits a heinous crime every day by playing Spectrum games on our sister mag X2. Still, they are Spectrum games, so there's to be pitied and helped more than judged. We gave her the remainder of Sean's 1 lip to cheer her up.

Bits'n'Bobs

Commodore Format's review system is as simple as can be. There's none of that tricky hard-to-follow nonsense here. Each review is packed with as much information as you'll need to decide if a game's for you, and it will help you get started playing. At the end, you'll find a straightforward ratings system that tells you exactly what's good about a game, and what's not so good...

CF RATINGS

When you arrive at the end of a review you'll see one of these egg-timer shaped things. At the top will be the game's poor points, and at the bottom its strong points. The shape of the ratings box depends on the mark it achieves, as there's plenty of room to detail a good game's strong points, and vice versa.

The highest rating a game can get is 100 per cent, but none ever has.

If you see a game review featuring this symbol, it means it's rated more than 90 per cent, so it's an 'official' corker and bound to be worth a good look.

GAME ICONS

To make life easier for you we've knocked together a few 'tell-it-as-it-is' game icons (things you see so you can tell at a glance what standard feature each game contains). They are:

FACE - Number of players. The more heads, the more people can play.

KEYBOARD / JOYSTICK - An obvious really, it signifies the control mechanisms.

MOUNTAINS - If you can see a mountain, it means there are difficulty levels.

OCTOPUS - Metaphor, the game's in bits if the octopus appears (appears means brown).

SOAK'S SHIRT - This means there's a cover option available (green).

MUGS - You can prove to everybody how good you are at a game by using a high-score table.

PANTS - Yes, we're afraid that really is what it means. There's a pants mark.

And what would Sir like for a main Track: Five laps. If you, pretty simple multiple, this one's just a triangle. Even bad drivers should have no profit here.

Hot lady: six laps. Still reasonably easy. You might need two pit stops here for fuel especially if you crash, so watch that stat.

East Rutherford: six laps. Ahhh, it's beautiful. Lots of twists, funny bits to snag the reckless and the quick. Drive carefully!

Oh the joys of the open road, the wind rushing through your hair, the sun beating down. Ahhh! The nightmares of a twisty turny race track with insane suckers cutting you up! If the latter is your idea of fun then Indy Heat could be just your cup of char!

And they're off! At East Rutherford there's a handy short cut across the grass on the left-hand left corner - but using it is a gamble.

INDY H

This is a race game that looks a bit weird. Well, to be more precise, you look at it a bit weird - like from a light aircraft circling 2,000 feet above the track! The cars are the scurrier of sprites, nudging and binging each other around 12 tortuous tracks in the heart of the USA. Yet despite these visual kinks-ups, it works rather well.

The distant view may give little feeling of being there down amongst the track and but lets (77) but when you hit the last lap, it's tense stuff! The headlights on the pyroball, the eyes sharpen to pinpoint precisely every pixel and it really, really matters that you beat the three computer drivers to the chequered flag and take the race honours.

Coming from a calm-up, Indy Heat is delivered in small race size chunks. You take one race at a time and victory is the only way to guarantee qualification for the next Indy Heat! In an even tougher task. Winning also earns you a whole pile of cash that can be spent on your car to make it a whizzer, more efficient, and an all-round better bet, mean, racing machine.

The game ticks off with you choosing a character to represent you down in the dust and spending $100,000 on your spunky new car. You'll only be able to afford one or two extras, but even at this stage of the game you can start to build up a mechanical advantage.

The scene shifts to the track and the cars are ready for the green flag. It's race time and time to prove your mettle. The cars pull away and you have to weave through the field, avoiding damaging collisions with the barriers and other cars. This isn't easy but it's vital if you want to win - and the second that one of the computer cars cuts you off it is corner, you desperately want to win.

Damage matters! The car (and slows you down, so careless drivers end up in striking

Those famous racing names TURF and Storm Strike first and second. "Excuse me sir, but I think we're wearing the same head!"

You haven't got any fluffy dice have you?

A vital part of Indy Heat are the go-faster extras. But what do they do?

TURBO: An absolute must for every speed king. Press the bar that extra burst to take you over the line - or into the wall.

SHAKES: These slow you down real quick - but brakes are for claps (and survivors)

TYRES: This special set helps to stop you spinning out - unless you really try hard!

GREEN: This speeds up pit stops to give a racing edge. It's a sort of productivity bonus, albeit a very expensive one! MPG: The kind of thing that seems to matter to your dad and Skoob drivers.

ENGINE: Gives you extra juice on the acceleration front. Only useful when you've mastered the art of straight lines!

SMOKE'S PICK: The computer picks the option for you and reuses all your cash for so discomfite benefit whatsoever!

RACE: When you're forced or broke when this is hit the track and start the race.

course?

There's a sense of pace. Now the Indy Heat's start to show their class. This is track four of five here - the next eight are far worse!

Tyler assumes off is a strong lead. Only a crash or fuel crisis can save the cars from where's Willy Walker when you need him!

At the start you best imagine that you're sat in an ORC of the lights outside the best clubs. Her job, run some more than 600 wrecks that puffs pathetically around the track. So when it is really inevitable the damage takes its toll or the fuel starts to run out, it's time to hit the pits. Even in the shortest races you have to divert to the pit lane at least once to take on extra gas. This is where the race will be won or lost in most cases, so it helps to invest in a speedy crew. Luckily, getting is easy: you just pull-off of the track and step near the pad that flashes in your car's colour. Near is good enough as your enthusiastic team leap into the pit and repair your nose.

Racing itself is a matter of fast, left touches at the tick to change the direction your car's headed in. It can get confusing at first, as the cars rotate while the controls don't, but there are two 'lock' marks to choose from and as soon as you find the one that suits your style, you'll begin to leap-up the field. Good driving is not a matter of just going fast though, but consistent cornering, avoiding crashed cars, clean pit-stops and fuel economy.

Winning looks simple to start off with, as the tracks are mere triangles and squares down on the track for the first race. The lights go green and it's time to get away, cutting everybody up, just because you can.

When you run out of fuel and credits you get a chance to see how good (or bad) you were,

with no niggly bits to negotiate. These elements soon rear their vengeful heads though with chaotic, sharp sequential bends and a general messiness of design that would have Nigel Mansell blubbing into his mousetrap. This is where the coin-up peddle cuts in: you only have two credits to buy your way out of losing, so if you want to stay in the title hunt you MUST win. In the arcade shovelling pound coins in they have bought you success, here skill is all that counts.

Indy Heat works because of its mix of precise action and the inclusion of some strategy - which get better as the race progresses. You're to put your money where your gear shift is then it's time to back that strategy up on the track. The tension comes from the threat of sudden death exclusion from future heats because of one slight slip - Indy Heats demand for sound after sound of perfect driving is annoying but ups the game's tension to excellent levels. And on top of all this there's the two player option.

Racing against a human is the fun. When it's you against a mate, none of those style, when you gear shift is then it's time to back that strategy up on the track. The tension comes from the threat of sudden death exclusion from future heats because of one slight slip - Indy Heats demand for sound after sound of perfect driving is annoying but ups the game's tension to excellent levels. And on top of all this there's the two player option.

At the start of the game some nice banter for games $199.995. Unfortunately you have to spend it on the car and not a helmet.

city looks driving really comes alive. There are short-cuts through the run-off safety zones and of course the playful nudges that encourage competitors' cars into the crash barriers. This is Indy Heat at its best, with vicious blocking moves and spoiling tactics of the "I'll win or you'll win" variety in full effect.

Where Indy falls down in terms of play, new tricks and staying power it makes up for, in terms of straightforward playability. It's easy to pick up and awards a powerfully addictive little tug - just one more race symphony at its best.

As a diversion Indy Heat works well. It combines all the best points of the arcade - intense bursts of play - with a longer term aim - finding the right power-ups for the car so you can win the championship title. It's straight-up fun with a few frills, just like a real arcade should be.

EQUINOX

Our Mousesports books make the game easier to play, but you've still got to solve the puzzles yourself. As we're so kind, here is the solution to level 1.

First, find the TELEPORTER CREDIT and pick it up, then use it to pay for the teleporter. Teleport to the other room and collect the HANO DRILL, then teleport back again. Enter the MAGNETIC LEFT and get out at the top, then use the HANO DRILL to open the safe. Collect the DYNAMITE, and use it to clear the rubble in the lower room.

Find another teleporter credit, pay for the teleporter again, then collect the GANGETER and go through the teleporter. Deposit of the samurai, teleport back, then find and collect the KEY, using it to open the locked door. Get the LEVEL 2 PASS, enter the TRAPDOOR-LEVEL teleporter, then exit at Level 2.

It's on the lookout for solutions to the other 7 levels, and there's a software voucher up for grabs too, so get cracking.

Little guy in the helmet, come on down! It's Smash TV - the game show with the twisted slant. And we've got infinite lives for 10

SMASH TV

One of the great games of '91, but just a tad hard to finish. So, here are some POKEs to reset switch owners, courtesy of Warren Pilkington. Just reset on the INTRO screen (with the scrolling credits), and immediately press the space.

THE HITS 2

Here are a few specially hand-prepared cheat codes for that most excellent Tetris™ companion.

CREATURES

Plug your joystick into port 1 and wait for the title music to stop, then wiggle your joystick like crazy when the high score table appears - when the Cycles turn grey,

Spring is in the air and most young people's thoughts naturally turn to beating NZ Story, hammering Rodland and crushing Smash TV. Love? Fiddlesticks! Who needs it when we've got the POKEs, cheats and hints for all?

Now enter: POK# 2573, 158; POK# 2574, 195 (Return) POK# 2575, 3; POK# 2577, 184 (Return) then type 573 2588 to reset the game with infinite lives. Oh, and don't worry about the initially corrupted graphics - it's just a side effect of resetting the OSA.

Action Replay owners fear not! Start the game as normal, freeze it, then enter POK# 41987, 958 for infinite lives.

NAVY SEALS

Andy "TOTAL" Dyer printed an incorrect sheet for this in OPI3, which really of you pointed out. Instead of typing BRAMBHEAD, you should instead type BRAMBHEAD. Sorry 'bout that.

NEW ZEALAND STORY

Inevitably tough from the word go, and you'd be lucky to get so far as level 3 without infinite lives. So, hold down the keys T, R, Y, G, H, E, A, T, I, N, and G (or alternatively, as many keys as possible). The button should turn grey - you now have infinite lives AND the ability to skip levels with a hefty price on the LEFT ARROW key! Huzzah, you will have to tackle the guardians... too late.

RODLAND

If you're having problems beating the level guardsians, head this sound and sensitive advice from Alan Parsons and you should be well on the way to beating them.

put the joystick back into port 2 to start the game with a difference.

RETROGRADE

Type 1 H878 BPOG at the very bottom-right of the screen before loading the game for infinite energy.

SUMMER CAMP

Enter your name as CALAMITY on the high score table for infinite lives.

1. THE CROCODILES

Simple. In 2 player mode, both players stand facing the crocodiles and fire rapidly until they disappear. If you're on your tail, fire at the nearest one to you (that make sure you keep an eye on your third-quarter).

2. THE WHALE

In one player mode, you should blast the whale's eye, while dodging or shooting any babies. The second player can choose to defend the first player from the babies while he/she shoots the eye.

3. THE ELEPHANT

Just stand to one side and fire, as the elephant will eventually swing towards you. Those of you with any damage can run up to him, blast him, then retreat. You decide.

4. FLYING BULL

The first stage is the hardest. Let him fly over you, then blast him when he lands. However, be sure to move when he flies up again, as he tends to come down rather quickly. Don't let him drive you to the side of the screen - you'll get trapped. The second stage is quite easy, if he flies into the air, let him follow you to the middle of the screen - now stop and move as he comes down. The third and final stage is easy-peasy. Stand on the left side of the screen, and blast the babies until he moves to your side. Now move up to him, blast him, then move back to kill the babies. Keep this up and he'll die... eventually.

MONEY FOR OLD ROPE

Or even fabulous new maps, tips, POKEs, and solutions. Yes, there's a rather gorgeous £20 software voucher for the taking EVERY month. And if we're feeling generous, we might throw in an exclusive and attractive GameBusters diary too.

Send us your correspondence to: Andy Roberts' GameBusters, Commodore Format, 38 Bournemouth Street, Bath, Avon, BA1 2BN.

An extra weapon, the axe, can be found here: it adds long range firepower to your Samurai's arsenal.

Lag number 1: these are needed to cross the waterfall at the end of the level.

Start here. Practice your moves before leaving the safe zone.

Safe zones: keep moving if you want to stay alive young Samurai.

Break through these barriers with speed or downward kick to gain access to hidden caverns.

Nasty "face-huggers", but these only hurt when they sting or, otherwise they are harmless.

FIRST SAMURAI

First Samurai is one of our best demos we have yet released on the CF Powerpack, but it is so big and tough and mean that you may need help getting to the end. 5th dan black belt Gambuster Andy Roberts has swapped his katana for a pencil and paper to map out this futuristic Japanese monster theme park to aid you in your quest.

Avoid the dragon on either side of the waterfall: its breath is fatal, so duck and cover!

Eats food: this builds up energy, eat well and stay healthy.

Avoid the spiders: use the mobile platforms and chop the areas on either side.

A recurring pitfall can be found here, which returns you to your restart position.

Use these platforms to climb over the waterfall, after the fire's been extinguished.

There's a volcano here, and can only be stopped by the old man: use a bell to call him.

Could it be a log? These need to be collected if you want to succeed.

PLAIN TIPS

- * Most of the chests contain food.
- * Find the bell - use it to call the master at those tricky spots.
- * Recharge any pots you come across - if you die, or get transported, you return to the last pot touched.
- * In our demo game, there aren't enough logs to cross the waterfall. But in the real first level...
- * Don't allow the Alien-style face-huggers to cling on to you for too long - they drain your energy really quickly.
- * Be careful near dragons - their halitosis is instantly deadly.

MURAI

Destroy all of the square blocks to reveal extra platform.

This is the waterfall which must be crossed to complete the level: find those logs then summon the old man with a bell.

The top part of this level can not be reached from here - but from higher levels it is possible to come back here.

This leads to the lower castle-combs, but our demo won't let you go this far - in the full game this leads to another level.

A dangerous free fall, take care when crossing: if you fail to jump out real fast or you're fried!

End of level guardians: a huge dragon - much leaping and fast sword strokes are needed to beat him.

These things are teleporters - not active in the demo. In the full game these are used for quick inter-level access.

Let Nintendo NES and Nintendo Game Boy owners rejoice, for the second issue of Total is now on sale...

Issue 2 of TOTAL! is a quality publication written and designed by professionals to the highest possible standard...

... But you'll have to move fast

Hang on, I thought we just took issue one and changed all the titles so we could take two weeks off!

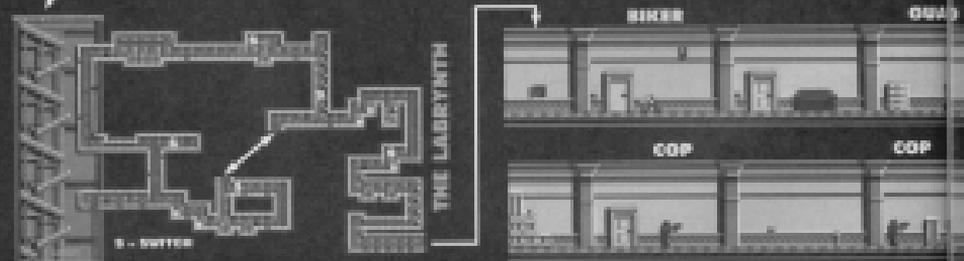

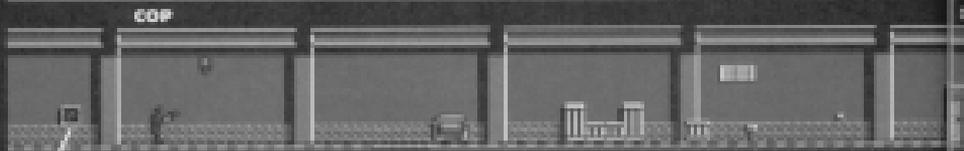

LEVEL 1.1 - THE ROOFTOPS

This level can take a while to master, mainly due to the time it takes to get used to our hero. He moves extremely quickly and doesn't double jump, if he does jumps after a short range. He will jump much further, right, from the start location. Immediately jump onto the table. Now make your way to the right, using the tables as platforms. This way you will avoid the nasty depressions and pasted the roof. Now come up to the building. Then, make your way carefully and about the roof, and by the way, run off of the right hand side and come the second side onto the left and take it to the higher platform (note, that you must be on the left with the crane).

Now position the crane onto the right hand side of the platform, then slowly push the crane out on top of it. Jump down, and, crossing the depression, make the jump of course slowly towards the lowest window. Then all you have to do is climb up into the crane and jump to the leftmost window - the exit, in fact.

LEVEL 1.2 - FLOOR 1.1

The skill to master is the timing of the jumps. Avoiding the lasers, push the crane up to the larger one and climb away, clearing the laser as you begin. Use the speed and to jump over the other large crane. If you step on a pressure pad, the crane will travel fast speed up the tower. If you wait for a minute or so, the crane will stop.

Once past the crane, you are confronted by some more security equipment you should avoid when the crane is on the wall and jump over the "labyrinth" screen. About the end point, climb up to the leftmost, shuffle across, drop down, then hit the laser of the other end. Again dodging the laser, climb over the crane and enter the left to.

LEVEL 1.3 - FLOOR 1.0

Climb immediately, and shoot the cop on the other side of the hole. Now jump onto the window, which will bounce you over the hole. As before, push the crane to the left, and the crane you to climb over the crane of crane. Shoot the next crane, jump over the pressure pad, then hit the laser shifter (note would otherwise slow you). Continue left and launch over the pressure pad using the accelerator as before (if right for a good idea to hit the cop first). Now dodge past the laser and make a dash for the exit hole.

LEVEL 1.4 - THE LABYRINTH

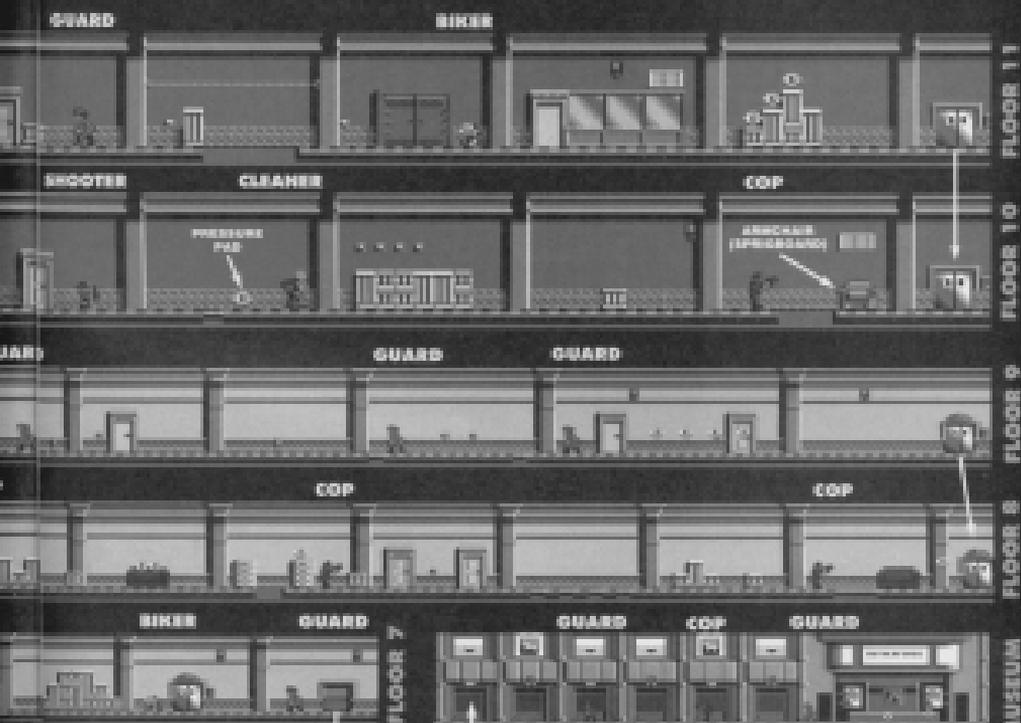

Climb up the ladder and enter the next room. Dodging the flamethrower, go up into the next bit and hit the switch at the top of the stairs. Go back down, and head right until you reach a ladder - climb up it, and jump off when safe. Now, standing in between the two flamethrowers, fire a ball to hit the switch on the left. Now go back up to the shaft (where you hit the first switch) and the fan will have stopped. Run past it, and climb quickly up the ladder you see. The next section. Use the accelerator to climb over the laser, then being right until you reach the pit. If you hit the switch on the left, it leaves the laser off for a short time. Drop down the shaft of the wall, into the next section, then hit the switch to stop when the fan. Behind the crane, the distance to the nearby again - this distance would leave lower down. Once over the lasers, simply leave your way to the wall.

HUDSON HAWK

This not-quite-a-corker puzzle game just happens to be one of the best movie games for a long time, but it's tricky too. This month we help you to grab the SFORZA from Rutherford's Auction House, with a little help from Andy Roberts...

LEVEL 1.5 - FLOOR 9

Kill the laser, then pressure right to blow with the laser. Run over the cables using the safe, and kill the guard. Continue right, kill the guard, then make your way past the pressure pads and kill the other guard. Avoiding the other lasers makes a dash for the left again.

LEVEL 1.6 - FLOOR 8

Here's where it starts to get really difficult. As before, shoot the cop then blow across on the safe. Blow over the cables and the pressure pads, then kill the cop you encounter by the green door. Use the crane to get over the gap, but be careful - this section is tricky. Move onto the green doorways, kill and use the crane to blow to climb the other cables. Shoot the man that you see through the green door.

LEVEL 1.7 - FLOOR 7

Climb over the cables. Meet the laser, then use the machine to cross the pressure pad. You'll encounter another cop as you cross it, so run back a little on landing, then turn and hit the laser. Climb up the cables to the tightrope, and cross it as before. Make your way over the long gap of cables, and shoot the laser. You can't cross the lift here - continue right, shoot the guard, and exit through the dark water-type trap.

LEVEL 1.8 - THE MUSEUM

Don't lose your cool now! Break past the laser and kill the guard. Wait 'til you see the two beams until the crane is close. Then run from right. Kill the cop you meet, then walk between the beams again. When safe, you past the laser and kill the guard. Use you to the right, jump up onto the platform, and punch the painting to release it. Well done, you've finished level 1!

Get 100% of your Hudson Hawk on the level time quest for the code book!

SUPER SPACE INVADERS

The Return of the Invaders can be quite tricky at times, especially if you've no idea what is in store. That's why we've put together these in-game and end-of-level plans, along with a bucket full of tips. Triffid.

IN-GAME TIPS

The Invaders that feature cattle mutilation sequences have a set alien pattern; the first wave moves slowly, and fires occasionally. The second wave moves and shoots a little faster, and the third attack wave features aliens that expand when hit - here it is best to shoot every other column to prevent them expanding fully.

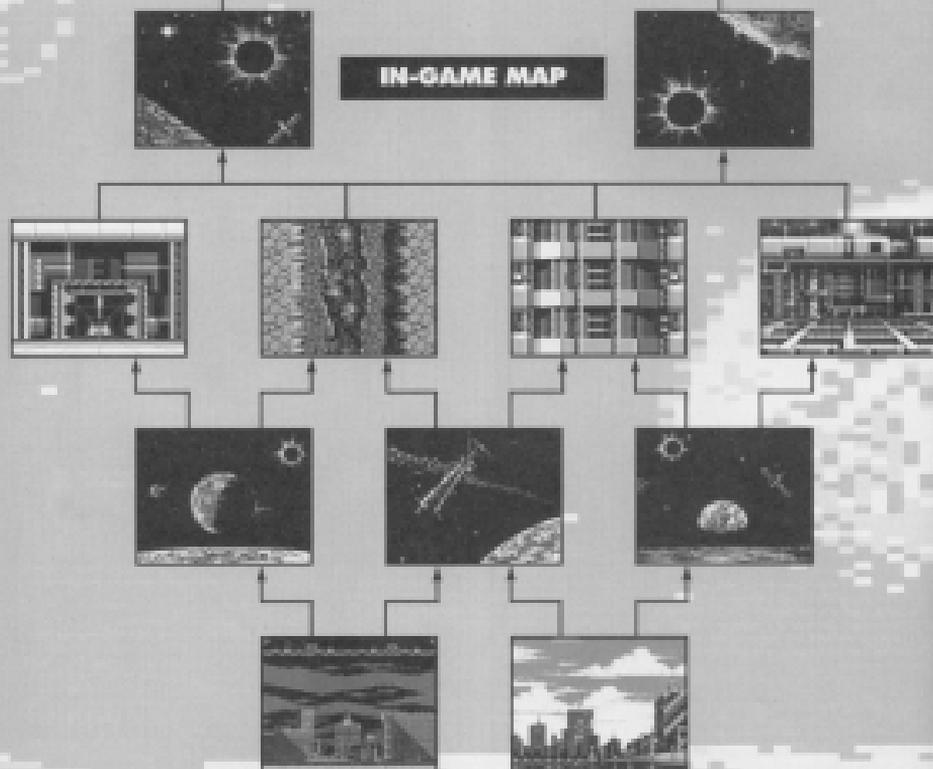

The remaining levels (1,3,5,7,11,12) have slightly different attack patterns; the first is the long-standard attack wave, moving and firing slowly. The second moves and fires faster than before, but starts LOWER DOWN on the screen, and as you might have guessed, the third attack wave starts even lower.

CATTLE MUTILATION

Earn thousands of bonus points, and a few extra lives too. The large attack waves pose no threat to your cattle whatsoever. However, the saucers which enter the screen on their own are the ones which try to kidnap your bovine friends - shoot these before anything else (they are easy to spot, as they often move much faster than the other saucers).

IN-GAME MAP

INVASION

LEVEL 3

Not easy, as the gun turrets continually track your position. The only way to dispose of this baby is to destroy both turrets, and then steal the engines.

LEVEL 4

This only has one major weapon to avoid, namely a huge vertical strip of laser death. Firstly, dispose of the two pumps on either side of the mothership, then shoot the laser head-on. The mothership should die before being the laser, so when it does, get out of the way.

LEVEL 5

Horribly difficult. To kill this armed-to-the-teeth mothership, you'll have to destroy every single gun. There isn't much to say, other than keep firing and keep moving.

LEVEL 10

Probably the most difficult of the lot, but doesn't it look pretty? The key to wiping out this oversized fly lies in its blue centre - but first you'll have to shoot the lower section until it becomes detached. You then have limited chances to blast the blue off.

LEVEL 11

This winged devil is possibly the easiest of the bunch, probably because there is only one 'Achilles Heel' to shoot. Concentrate your firepower on the arrow-shaped claw at the bottom, moving to the side when it flies down towards you.

LEVEL 12

Actually I lied, this is the easiest mother-ship. The first task is to destroy the spheres which orbit the centre, avoiding the constant flak. Once this is done, aim for the blue spark, and ultimately destroy the brain inside.

IF ALL ELSE FAILS...

POWER PACK

EQUINOX

Yes, we've already printed a listing for the game last issue, but this support pack by Martin Pugh also gives you the option of a game with no enemy action - a very welcome addition.

BUTCHER HILL

Try typing in some of these codes to activate the cheat mode...

Level 1: BATTLEGROUND

Level 2: WRECKAWAYLAND

Level 3: JOBLATREE

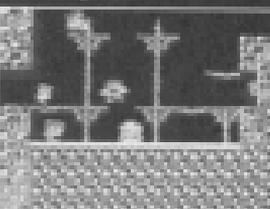

And you can also type MAP on each level too, would you believe, a map.

RICK DANGEROUS

On the high score table, try entering this:
FLIPPOMATIC - To start on the level you want on.

RICK DANGEROUS 2

And for the well-kept secret, try typing 40 BUCK WIND (with spaces) for an infinite supply of our favourite supply here.

Rick effortlessly deals with some powerful cave-dwellers even for a get-into level!

CJ IN THE USA

Yes, yes, I know it hasn't been out all that long, but many of you have already been writing in for a cheat or POKE. On the title screen, type INE GOT A LOVELY BUNCH OF COCONUTS (with spaces). The leader will change colour, and infinite money airplanes are now yours.

IKARI WARRIORS

Those of you struggling with this testing arcade romp, seek as Paul Robinson and John McKee, can try these neat POKEs. Note that you MUST reset the computer when the plane is crashing at the start of the game.

And if you send in on a postcard, I'll come round personally and kiss your cheeks if it needs it - lol.

Many aeons ago, before the Earth cooled properly, a software company called Thalamus produced Summer Camp. Well-loved by the first mammals, it's only now that a sequel has appeared. Is it an evolutionary step forward or does it belong in the land that time forgot?

Winter Camp is a slightly different kettle of worms in your average game. For a start the weather is colder, there's snow around and you're wrapped up warmly, with jumpers, scarves (Oh, get to the point - GO!) Right. The game is divided into season levels. In all of them you play a little rascal called Maximus (Max) on his pelt. The first is to see whether you're good enough to stand in the New 'N' boy winter sports club (as a member), based at the camp. All you have to do is beat three competitors in a straight slating race. That it starts off pretty straight.

The attitude of two of the competitors sets the atmosphere for the whole game - they cheat, but in a most amusing way. As you race them (in different lanes), they lob obstacles at you, or burn holes in the ice for you to fall through. This turns level-one into something far more exciting than it just a joystick wagger - which, to be fair, it otherwise is.

Level two sees you still with skates on, but this time you've got to beat the chick (well, an avian-like-stuffing eagle in fact). You've got to avoid all manner of obstructions, skating in the opposite direction, whilst trying to collect as many letter skates as you can. Strangely, everybody in the camp is some form of animal as well. Ducks, dogs and cockatoos are everywhere but, as you to a mouse yourself, it doesn't seem to matter.

Here's eight screens from level six (played together). As you can see, the time (left) is expired and the avalanche is on its way...

WINT

It's a quick level of 'Stone says' in the Ice Caverns with the yell on the ledge above you. He's friendly enough, and if you get it wrong he won't eat you, the just gets miffed.

Max is caught inside that snowball. You've got to help him avoid skiers, obstacles and the avalanche which is bearing down on him even as we speak...

Flinging snowballs at the hares involves a quick hand, a sharp eye, three Squashed Whole and the savings of ten man. It drops a bit when they hit you back, you see. 'Take that!'

It's always nice to rescue a stranded skier. But it's still a bit of fun just to leave them head-first in the snow, wriggling their feet.

If the canoe sinks, the fearless Max will swim upstream, avoiding the fish and rescuing those skiers playing in the thin ice.

WINTER CAMP

The truth about Winter Camp

While it looks like a lot of fun to romp in the snow the Max and his citizens, the reality is totally very different. Firstly, winter moments of being outside.

Your fingers go numb, then they stop working completely. But your body tremors and gets really clammy and hot. Snow gets down your neck and melts, so you get even wetter inside your clothes - Poooooooooooooouuch!

People always gang up on you and you'll eventually get your face pushed into a snowball. For revenge, you throw your snowballs with mud, grit and small stones. These inevitably hit some girl who looks inside blushing and you feel terrible. But it's all worth it, because when you come inside at dusk, and there's a roaring fire, towels and hot chocolate waiting, you'll be experiencing the closest thing to heaven on Earth.

Okay, what do I reckon? Well, Winter Camp is immensely stylish. The games aren't particularly spectacular, but they're presented with tall graphics and there are some lovely animated effects. Cartoon-like is the word I'm struggling to.

The winter wonderland music is cheerful, the characters are dead sweet and the whole thing warms your spirits. If you're in need of a bit of whimsy, this could well be for you. Whether you'll want to play all through the summer is a different question altogether.

THE DOWNERS...

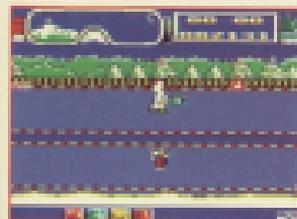

- For a game of the testing variety, and rather too much wiggling.

100

- Beautifully drawn sprites with lots of characters
- They're all animated really nicely as well
- Seven rather different levels will keep you playing for ages as you try to see what the next one will be
- Winter Camp has got heaps of style. It's a little like watching a cartoon strip featuring the antics of Max and his crew
- Lots of nice items and spot effects keep your own hands whilst your eyes are busy having fun

...AND THE UPERS

level two, and you've got to cross your little, who collapsed starting skills against such tough opponents and the huge container. Well! Tough - it's aimed with a Max team.

Get through level two and you start a snowed fight. A crowd of bears have taken refuge in some tree-tops, and you've got to dislodge them whilst avoiding their return fire. You control a set of cross hairs, and it's point and shoot time. If you don't knock out enough, a huge snowball crushes you.

Next, after you've recovered, you have to do a river patrol. This involves paddling in a canoe along and colliding with anyone who's drowning (this game gets better and better). There are loads of collectibles to give you more time but there are more obstacles to get past.

Level five is another weird one. You fall into an ice cavern under the ground (a single screen). As you go there's stumps, a pit!

appears, and you embark upon a 'Giant Rex' style game. Get it right and you'll proceed to level six.

Here you've got to carry out a ski patrol. This involves waddling along (with much joystick wiggling) until you come to someone with their feet sticking up out of the snow. As you reach them, they pull themselves free.

During all this, you're still got the eagle-pelted-instant time limit, and there are loads of snowballs, smart skiers and other obstacles. So, obviously you need a balloon. This balloon allows you to rise over any potential obstacles. Hooley for that, then.

Finally, level seven sees Max caught in a giant snowball. It rolls down the mountain and you've got to get down to the bottom in one piece.

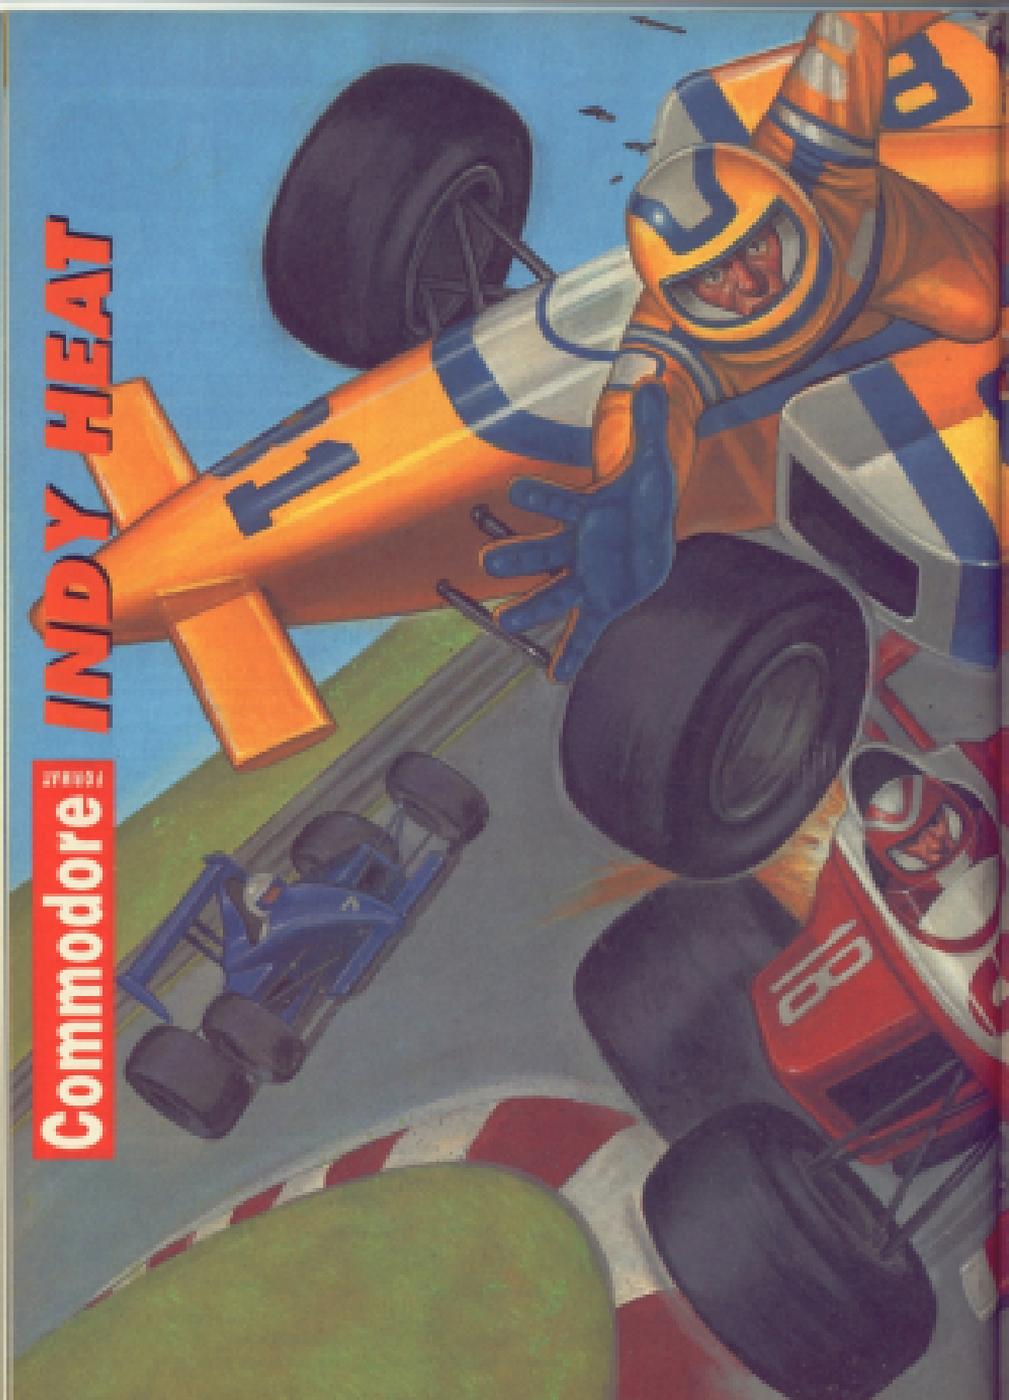

The time limit's enforced by the pelted cart-rigging eagle (top left). If it lands on the path before you finish the stage... WALL-OFFERS!

INDY HEAT

DEMON BLUES

Time for an evil menacing laugh! Har har har (was that it? Pathetic! ed). Well I was pleased with it. I'm just getting into the idea of being a demon, you see. If I'm going to crack this Demon Blues game, I figure that I've got to think and act like a malevolent spirit of the deep, dark underworld.

First, the programmers are taking on CastMasters on their home territory with this game. It's a hundred-screen arcade-style explore and avoid maze in an afterlife type effort. And it's only $3.99!

Demon Blues is a cheerful, bouncy little sprite who wanders around the vaguely Greek underworld looking for six keys which will free him forever. If he gets free, presumably he'll renounce his evil ways and be a good boy. This is certainly to be encouraged, so get ready with your demonic joystick.

The first thing you'll notice about Blues is that he spends the entire game unarmed. Yes, light fans, there aren't any lasers, grenade launchers. Uzi guns, shurikens or nuclear weapons to be found. All you've got to protect him is a little two-pointed star which orbits him, permanently. This star seems to destroy most badies if comes into contact with, but to get close enough to them for it to work is dead dangerous and not to be recommended. And even if you do, some badies just aren't affected by it, and you watch your energy dwindling as you vainly try and do some damage.

So in order to get anywhere, you've got to be resigned to the fact that your little character is going to take a serious amount of punishment. You can still make your way through the screens, but you've got to look out for energy pots. As you'd expect, these give your little chap that all important energy boost (delicious and nutritious).

You'll also need to master the effect of sliding rapidly across the screen. If you hit the joystick in either of the downward diagonal positions, the little demon bells across the screen in that direction of an

Your little character is going to take a serious amount of punishment

Platform city

The key to Demon Blues is being able to leap around the platform without rocking it all up. Using the high-speed diagonal thing is very useful but if you accidentally trigger it when you don't need to, you'll be dumped at high speed in the sticky stuff.

These spiky balls which orbit the area are just about the most deadly features you'll see in the game during a game. If you hit onto these, you're only too good to be killed. You can see how tough some of the platforms are to reach.

These spiky balls which orbit your eyes to make it you land on them. In fact it's even worse than that - you'll lose your only life.

What's this voluptuous maiden guarding the far door really? Aphrodite? Venus? No it's Mrs. Blandings from number 22 in a pink frock.

incredibly high rate of levels. This is useful in two ways. Firstly, it gets you past any badies which might be lurking around in the middle of the screen. If you do hit them, you sail right through without any damage being done at all. Secondly, if there's a spike-filled pit you

Blue like stability before definitely isn't Mrs. Blandings in a pink. It's a hideous demon from Hades and you can't get past him. Boo.

Sharp bonuses over a heavy. This can't don't move, but they can't be killed either. Don't be near close, really.

BLUES

History of the Demon Blues

Demons aren't the happiest of people. Despite what you might think, it's not much fun being condemned to a life of hellfire. So, in their misery, they invented the blues.

The blues is a kind of music played by depressed demons (and people). It's slow, sad and you have to repeat everything twice. Once the demons had invented it, they naturally gave it to those dispiritedly cheerful Americans in the hope of making them a little more miserable. Here's a rather prime example:

Wake up this mornin' and my dang was dead.

Wake up this mornin' and my dang was dead. And I featured the spine gettin' out of bed.

Yep, this is the Blues. Formed from the anger and sadness of a generation and loved all over the known universe. God, isn't it?

Here, the sign of the Wasteland here. Just a lot of deadly apnea and wailing wailers. It's a dead 640x screen, like us.

Isn't jump over. It's sometimes possible to skate right across the top of it using the high-speed mode. Clever, eh?

As you wander round, you might also chance across killable, gibbering gnomes.

Grab these because they're worth untold riches to you (well, a few measly points anyway).

Although the flip-screen idea isn't exactly brand-spanking new, the game looks pretty different from most others of its type, and every screen is packed with animated bits and pieces all whirring about in the most frighteningly realistic way. Realistic, that is, if you've actually wandered around an ancient Greek mythological setting and seen stuff like this.

Indeed, Demon Blues certainly looks very pretty. Each screen has got something you won't see on any of the others - so you've got to keep plugging at it to find out what's just around the next corner.

In fact, the only thing I can criticise the game for is that it's doggone tough. Not having a weapon is a navel looking for the first few times you play it, but you'll soon get fed up with your inability to load the musical notes as they trundle down over you. You also die a lot, as well.

Oh yes, and you only get one life. I can't imagine for the life of me (little god, there!) or understand why coders occasionally produce arcade games with only one play. It's the most infuriating thing ever, and makes the really want to scream, Aargghhh! Gaa! I mean you can get dozens of screens into the thing, then one stupid mistake and you land on a load of apnea and die. And that's it. You don't get another chance at it until you work your way back to the same screen.

That hole would be wide enough to jump it if it wasn't for the low ceiling. So you'll be needing the high-speed option to get past it.

But if you can overlook this few little problems (you'd have to be really good at Demon Blues, mind), there's an awful lot to see and do. Tricks, traps and puzzles litter virtually all of the screens, making things frustrating and (and I say it) rather addictive. Yes, I will dare to say it: Demon Blues is very addictive. So there. This does seem to be the oddest thing I think that it's not a game you'll see all of in the first sitting. You'll be lucky to see a quarter of it (and remember, that's still a rather large 25 screens worth). On the whole, it's great entertainment - perfect for the idle devil in your life (especially if it's you).

The Mighty Brain

THE GREAT ESCAPE!

Dear TMB

New look here Brain. We are jolly well chuffed all with the way that you keep messin' us about. I am of course referin' to the game Escape From Colditz which you previewed in CPT. Here we are eight months later and still no sign of the jolly thing! We thought it sounded a jolly wheeze to put Jerry off the scene, when you proclaimed on the front cover of CPT that EPIC had been Powerwasted inside... and guffin, guffin... it jolly well wasn't. In the months since the jolly old Eddy Youngin' bloater showed that EPIC has been put back by another five months! We'd like to tell the escape committee (EC) that it's a jolly poor show to keep us hanging about like this. Dear old Pongo Smythe-Nobby has worked his fingers to the bone makin' 400 hundred Han uniforms out of blankets and brown paper. The chaps don't want to question orders... but can't the EC give us a coded message in the personal return of the times as to when 'E' day will be and the reason for the delay? The rats are going moult and so are the uniforms... and it's Pongo!

Hells Beans (Kamp Kommandant), Lipstick.

Will Escape From Colditz ever make it over the wire? Anthony, Skinner and Milton etc.

In the post no one can hear you scream! The Mighty Brain stalks the mail sack like a coiled cobra. Are you brave enough to run this cerebral gauntlet with your questions, queries and hatstand letters? Write to TMB Commodore Format, 30 Monmouth Street, Bath BA1 2BW.

Digital Magic are currently having a few problems and that's the reason for the delay there is a war on after all! Tell the EC, that CPT and TMB believe EPIC will go AWOL on C&A eventually. OK?

TMB

ANOTHER WORLD

Dear TMB

Now that CPT is getting on a bit (a whole 18 issues still! Well, they grow up so fast!) don't you think that the time is right for the new CPT team to update the mag in some way? For instance, I would like to offer my constructive opinion on the CPT Player Rating Issue. They're dull, the idea of just listing all the uppers and downers in a game has gone a bit stale, don't you think? You should really start giving all the reviews a radical new look.

I think Roger Franes should be given more space, as there's stacks of budget games which go unreviewed. Also, what about having the old feature in the mag which is not related to the C&A? Yes, I know that you are primarily a computer mag and of that, but a few special features on boards, films, TV, comics or even music would make a bit of change.

Daniel Slater, Pothersan

Uppers and downers boxes are designed for speed reading, a shorthand system for fast reference. In this regard writing words better than a good list that you can cut your finger along (although I don't actually have any fingers). As for Franes getting more space, outrageous! That half pint footer regularly gets more space than me and I'm multidimensional (super intelligent being!)

Tell me more about the strange world, where things other than C&As get top billing. I really must visit this land, depicted text and bring them the joyous news of wiggling, poking and, of course, CPT!

TMB

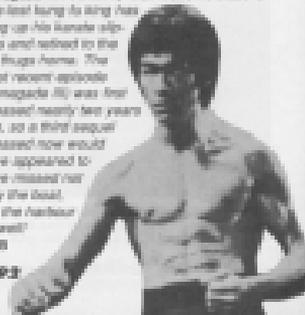

TARGET RENEGADE

Dear TMB,

Will there ever be a Renegade IV, because I love fighting games?
David Wilson, Falsbit.

Renegade IV Ah yes, well it seems that the last last thing to bring has hung on his kneele clip-pers and retired to the old fugs home. The most recent episode (Renegade III) was first released nearly two years ago, so a third sequel released now would have appeared to have missed out only the last, but the feedback as well?

TMB

MAKING MOVIES

Dear TMS,

Here are some questions, so-nighly, that even you can't answer them.

- 1) Why is your mag so good?
- 2) How do you come up with the CP (travel)?
- 3) When do you make a background and characters move, do they do in games.
- 4) What is the address of adventure authors, Level 9-Computing?

Joe Baker, Bristol

- 1) Well (obv) it has something to do with (obv) well, team, desktop...
- 2) Depending on it may seem, CP will stop publication eventually. When the sun becomes a red giant (6-600 000 000 years from now) the mag will stop on the grounds that all the CGAs, readers, ads, programmers, in fact everyone on Earth will have left or died. So get those back issues while they're still hot!
- 3) Firstly, both backgrounds and character

'sprites' never actually move in games, they just look like it. They are really just a series of still pictures (frames) that are displayed so fast your eyes can't see the join. Like any cartoon, all the character's movements and backgrounds they stand on, have already been drawn. In a certain though, you're forced to watch the animation 'chop of action'. In a game what you see, changes in response to your joystick commands, with each frame being quickly stuck together by your computer.

5.4 answer!

Evidence of this can be found on the back of the box where it says "are you ready for brain to brain combat?"

2) You have gone earlier I would have to differ on this score since no-one is such a wonderful publication would tolerate a mad octopus for very long. Therefore, I must go for Galaxian product plus Fraygo.

Bryan Hamilton, Kilmarnock

Wow! Well, you are there was no mistake. I was talking about the real Doctor (this is in William Hartnell, Patrick Troughton, Jon Pertwee, Tom Baker, Peter Davison and Sylvester McCoy) not some pale imitative bought in to keep a famous name alive while a real successor was found. So I wasn't wrong. I'm just very bloody about which Doctors I want to see.

TMS

DEAR DIARY

Dear TMS

About one month ago I replied to the ad in CP you know the one for the CP Diary and the Pore Porepaste cassette. I sent the money and am most depressed to have heard nothing. With you being the "Almighty Supreme Being" I know you can sort out this problem for me.

Capo Gale, Gleyd

Three more humans I share the office with have had a few technical problems while producing the diary. Don't fret though, as you read the reply your diary is now winging its way through the printing presses, the tapes through duplication and both should be with you shortly. And although only mere humans, they are decent blo and won't sack a single cheque until the diary is ready to go off job done, now!

TMS

GAUNT LOOK

Dear TMS

I think you are brilliant, excellent, fantastic etc. Right, now that's the creeping out of the way, I have a few questions I'd like to ask?

- 1) What ever happened to 'The Gauntlet'?
- 2) What joystick would you say was the best money can buy?
- 3) Can you tell me the addresses for some fairly cheap PD software?
- 4) What is your opinion is the best book for the Commodore?
- 5) What game would you say had the best ever graphics on the C64?

Adam Clark, Leeds

1) The Gauntlet, starring Clint Eastwood and Sonnie Wortz was released by Mariner-Magnum film way back in 1977. Since then, it has enjoyed reasonable success on both home video format and network television.

2) The Bug by Gremlin (2002 659526), it works well and looks great. Crafted to resemble a small insect it's eyes are the buttons and the 'back games' out of its back - And of making you homeless doesn't it?

3) Next month there will be an in-depth guide to all the joystick, mouse stuff out on PD and where to get it

For games check our CP17, the first part of this 'best PD software guide'

4) Horror Pocus by Kurt Vonnegut

Read it to your machine time and time again, they show the use of its non-linear plot, its subjective use of the narrative persona...

5) Personally, I'd say Pac-Man is in terms of pure style and ground breaking originality but, that's just my opinion. I ain't fourteen, never, ever, wrong!

TMS

HIPPY CHECK

Dear TMS

I'm 25 and have just bought a C64 second-hand to relieve my youth and I find that my three favourite games of all are not on sale near me. So could you tell me:

- 1) Where I can get Hangover of the Madman, Camel, Sheep in Space, and Topspin - all of course by ultra-Happy Jeff Minter?
- 2) Have you got Jeff Minter's address as I am writing a fanzine and would like to interview the guy?

D Oliver, name and address withheld.

Mail the following Minter games have been coded on the C64. Max, Endurance, Back of the Madman Games, Madly, Haven, Rover.

IN THE HEATONITE!

Dear TMS,

Oh dear! My illusions have been shattered forever. In CP 15 you said "Unfortunately, the Doctor never made it into the C64 space-time continuum (unlike me, so he can't be that smart)". Well, I'm sorry to tell you that, for the first time in a millennium, you are totally and utterly WRONG!

I have in my possession, a piece of software entitled Doctor Who and the Mines of Terror by Monopower in association with the BBC, released in 1985. In it the Doctor, in Colin Baker re-embodiment, must save the universe from the Master's evil. Aided by the rather cute Tynari, a sort Galaxian robot, you get, he must stop the mining of a substance called Heatonite.

Now there could be various reasons for your error:

- 1) The Doctor has travelled back to 1985 and played the game in my possession with the express intention of making you look stupid.

Is there a Doctor in the house? Oh it's him. Answer Doctor in the house! The Mines of Terror brought TMS back to the C64.

THAT'LL BE 'ANDY

Dear TMS

Only about five minutes ago I was watching the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles (again). I was reading through the credits at the end when I saw - down with the people who make the tea for the Turtle ladies - that one of the electricians was Andy Dyar! Could this be the same Dyar in your magazine that handled the electronics for SMARTY? Or is it just a spooky coincidence?

Adam Wade Huxleyton,
Bathinda

Andy Dyar, an electrician I don't think you know, you had this man with your multimillion dollar Backdoor movie?

TMS

A LA CARTE

Dear TMS

I am writing to you to prove that you are so much more than a huge pile of bits.

1) Could you give me some background information on Stewart Campbell, Linda Barker, Neil Wahl, James Leach and Mark Ransford?

2) To prove that you are no more than a lump of jelly answer this: three men go into a restaurant and each orders bacon and eggs. This costs £10 pounds a head, a total of £30. The waiter takes their money to the manager, who says that the main feature has been changed by £5. The manager gives the waiter the difference (£25) and tells him to give it back to the men. Now the waiter says "hold on, they don't miss two pounds!" and pockets it. He then returns to the men's table and tells them that their meat cost £8 a head (£10 - £2 = £8). They were delighted, but there is a problem. £8 x 3 equals £24, plus the £25 pounds the waiter took (£24 + £25 = £49). So where's the extra pound gone?

Patrick Evans, Co Mayo

3) Is it sooner done than used? Check out page 55 for all the info on this disintegrating-burner. And of course, Hans Leach has now joined the CP team, so you'll find out more about him than you'll ever want to know!

4) This is a false problem you see, it's what you get if you eat at restaurants that charge £5 for bacon and eggs and employ corrupt waiters!

TMS

Oh, by the way, there's a waiter in my camp - and don't mention the war!

IN THE RED CORNER...

Dear TMS

I recently bought WWF WrestleMania and I've got some questions.
1) Is there any way that you can beat the computer opponents?
2) If so, what do you do to beat it?
Harvey Day, Birmingham

You're going to hate...

ARCADIA

Dear TMS

Why don't you start an 'Arcades Section' then we'd be able to see what coin ops could be converted last before they actually shut?

MD Sped, Southampton

Arcades are fun, but CD4s can do far more than replicate your five coin op! Mine's a CD4 mag, and the limits of space mean that reviews, features and tips on getting the most from your machine always take priority. Don't panic though, arcades will get all the exposure they deserve in both the Early Warning slot and future features!

TMS

EXCELLENT COMMANDER?

Dear TMS

Your mag is just one big Gortel! The power plays are great, the posters are great, and everything is great (alms drops between the keys)

1) On with the questions:
a) Will there ever be a conversion of Wing Commander II as it is too complicated to do in an all 8 bit computer?
b) Where did the maps keep going on the Early Warning Reamer?

3) I've completed Turmoil and had a lot of fun, if I buy Turmoil II will it be a disappointment for me as I'm used to the smooth graphics at 31?

4) Is Exterminator any good?

Arjen Langendoorn, Gouda, Holland.

1) Wing Commander II is anything other than a top of the range PC? Unlikely to say the least. The game took up 20 Megabytes of hard drive space, requires 150 colour graphics, custom sound-effects and can't be played

...IN THE BLUE CORNER

Dear TMS

I'm writing to tell you that I have just come across WWF WrestleMania.
1) Am I the first person to complete WWF?
2) Should I buy Deer or will you?
3) Am I still or what?
Sisterdale Jodie, Birmingham

...Now I want a good clean fight. TMS

Wing Commander II, a 3D based classic, has that epic feel about it. It's a great game...

... if you've a think PC system, custom sound card, graphics card and took out £400 from disk, it's such a waste program that not only can't drive standard, but so are Atari STs and Amigas!

2) A good question and one we've been asking our Linebacker primer over the last few months.

3) Turmoil is in much the same as it's only different. It doesn't have the variety I doesn't look quite as good but it's still a nice little named, slaughter-ies. So, if that's what you like it a game...

4) As a disintegrated brain, disintegrated hands have more appeal to me. So no.

not in my opinion.
TMS

IN THE DARK, MAN

Dear TMS

I am a new CD4 owner and please could you answer the following questions and print them in your 'Ultra cool & trendy' magazine (they'll get you everywhere) - coz?

Future

PUBLISHING

Staff Writer - Your Sinclair

SALARY NEGOTIABLE

- Founded in 1985
- Now over 250 staff
- 18 national newsstand magazines
- Market leader in computer titles
- Exciting launch plans
- Britain's fastest-growing publisher

Guess what? The chance of a lifetime has arrived! We're on the look-out for a gifted writer to join the FS team. Could it be you? If you think so, ideally you should have:

- a working knowledge of the Spectrum scene
- the ability to write lively, readable copy
- the personality to fit into a dynamic team
- a healthy toned sense of humour
- the desire to live in beautiful Georgian Bath
- a PhD in astrophysics would be a bonus, but we'll write for GÖSSA, A' Levels or a degree!

If you think you've got what it takes to work for one of Future's biggest selling magazines, then we'd like to hear from you. Send a letter of application, a CV and either a 500 word review of any floppy game or samples of any published work - to Andy Hutchinson, Editor, Your Sinclair, at the address below.

- 1) Could you tell me of any good fighting games in karate, kung fu, kick boxing, boxing or sword fighting?
2) I have just bought Audiogames' Master Class Rugby, please tell me what percentage you gave it?
3) Why is Darkman a kind of cheap rip off of Batman the movie?

The Dark Knight returns to the cinema, and probably the C64 this year, great! Let's just hope that Darkman can live as long as you.

4) Is there going to be another expansion pack for Alien Dawn?

5) I used to own a Spectrum and the magazines used to have tapes which had millions of cheats on them, will you do that?
Lee Eys, Lincoln

6) Fighting games, now you're talking.

They're endless, pointless and tedious joystick fests that a very fast thing. Good ones on the C64 are in style dramatically or take your pick from: Double Dragon II (CP 1) (7/10), a happy go lucky, heads up, two player, fast fight, with loads of weapons to choose from or First Samurai, which is more of a platform game with seriously violent interludes, and if pushed up a Corlar last year. Alternatively, how about WFFF, a no holds barred romp in the ring with the Al Hogan guy, another CP Corlar!

7) Master Class Rugby scored a massive 50% mark back in issue 16. As I've just said the best fighting games are...

8) As Great Granddaddy Brian used to say 'you can't make a silk purse from a sow's ear'. Batman was a brilliant movie and Darkman wasn't, so it left the critics with little choice but to follow the standard platform, side-shoot, platform, side-shoot formula.

9) Apart from Return of the Midnight which has already been released, there are no firm plans for further expansion packs so far.

10) Never, never, never, never, never, oh okay then! As part of the Commodore Diary offer (see page 95) there is a PowerPoke Classics which has 105 brand new, ready to load, ready to go, games.

INSIDE INFO

NUMERO DUO

Dear Inside Info:

In CP16, Simon Johnson asked for a routine to allow the number keypad of the C128 to be used in CGA mode. I have written a routine which will do this. It is written entirely in machine code and is completely transparent to BASIC and machine code (although it probably won't work with commercial programs). To turn it on use `49160=49160`, `49161=49160` turns it off, as does `RAMDISKTOP`, `RESTORE` or a reset. Please note that `SHIFT`, the `CBM` key, and `CTL` have no effect on these keys. Here's how to use it and how it works.

The routine tests for one of the extra keys. If it finds one, the ASCII code is placed into the keyboard buffer and eventually onto the screen. The ASCII codes are completely a table starting at location `49160` and can be changed to other values if you want. For example, when entering data, a comma would be of more use than a full stop. Entering `POKE 49160=16ASCR,7` will change it, but only on the keypad.

ESC Value `CHRS(27)`

TAB Value `CHRS(9)`

ALT can be used as function key F5

Got an innocent technical question? Got a perfectly legitimate programming problem? Then send them into Inside Info and we'll feed them to the Lyons, Paul Lyons that is, CF's top Techy. And this month he turns the tables to asks you some vital Commodore questions.

Value `CHR$(14)`

Value `CHR$(13)`

If course, these keys can also be changed.

The keys will also auto-repeat in the same way that normal keys do. This depends on the value of location `600`.

POKE 49160

only cursor keys and space will repeat

POKE 49161

In these last two POKEs are the work with the C128's extra keys; they will not affect the normal keys.

Finally, below here is a list of the order in which the keys appear in the table so you can

MEGA MEMORY

Dear Inside Info:

There is one way of increasing the RAM of a CBM that you didn't mention. You can't increase the RAM of a CBM inside the casing, but an external device can be fitted to the user port. This device is called the 1750 Clone Series RAM Pack, and is available from F.S.S.I. The RAM pack can be bought with 512K, 1 Mb or 2Mb. (These cost £150.00, £180.00 and £200.00 respectively.)

Now almost any games that take advantage of the increased RAM, as you rightly stated, but the RAM expansions are very useful when used with STP programs and applications such as GEMOS which can be configured to take advantage of the extra memory (you can use a 32K RAM pack as a 'shadow' 1541 drive).

F.S.S.I.'s address is Masons Ryde, Delford Road, Portofino, Wokingham, W19 1AC or contact them by telephoning 0344 550150

INFO

LOUD LOADING LISTINGS

Dear Inside Info:

One of the best things about using BASIC is that it can often be very slow. With a large disk file to load, or Machine Code to be being loaded into memory from raw data statements, you could be wondering if a tag has acquired and the computer has packed up. We've written two routines which deal with this kind of problem, that I think many other Inside Info fans will find useful.

The first changes the BASIC interrupt vector and increments the border colour instead. This means the border will not flash all the time, only when the disk drive is in operation, or a program is being.

The second changes the BASIC interrupt vectors and increments the border. The border will now flash all the time, allowing the user to see something is actually happening. Simply Post, Bobok.

Listing 1 - Break Interrupt

10 GOSUB 144150 TO 40750
20 GOTO 10 GOSUB 1,0,0007
30 GOTO 120,200,300,400,70,100,200
40 GOSUB 1440 TO 710
50 GOTO 10 GOSUB 1,0,0007
60 GOTO 100,8,370,100,120,100,150,200,
4,150,201,100,0,00,007
70 GOTO 200,100,0,00,201,100,120,00,
121,00,121,00,200,00,121,100
80 GOTO 70,170,207,77,00,70,70

```

The bold number in line 80 is the number of characters of the file name to be loaded - for disk only.

The bold numbers at the end of line 70 are the ASCII codes which represent the file name. (This example is four characters long, and is called MARK.)

To activate the routine, type:
 0000 000,0: 0000 000,001,000 000

Listing 2 - IRQ Interrupt

```

10 FOR D=12111 TO 41110
20 GOTO 20 GOSUB 1,0,0007
30 GOTO 120,210,30,70,00,210
40 FOR D=70,7,000 700,100,100

THERE'S MORE WHERE THIS GAME FROM

Every month Inside Info brings you only the most exciting video titles. But if there's a question that you need answered or if there's something you want to know how to do on your C64, then drop Post a line and we'll do our very best to sort you out. Just mail the envelope Inside Info, and send it in.

AMIGA ANSWERS????

We've had lots of questions about C64s and Amigas recently, so here are a selection of the most requested. Although why anyone would want a computer that costs four times more and is much harder to program is beyond me...

Dear Inside Info:

I have a few more questions, I hope you can answer them all.

- Can you upgrade a C64 to an Amiga?
- Could you play Amiga games on your C64, using the upgrade?
- Wouldn't you want a disk drive to take the disks that Amiga can?

The reason why I'm asking is that I'm thinking of buying an Amiga, but I can't seem to get all of my C64.

Wayne Hill, Exeter, Devon

The C64 and the Amiga are two completely different computers - like a car and a bus are two different kinds of transport - and you can't turn one into another (well, technically you could but you'd need to be an absolute whizz and spend absolutely masses of cash - more than buying the new computer). Because of this, it's not possible to play one kind of game on another, or plug Amiga drives into a C64. But don't get rid of your C64, whatever happens!

Dear Inside Info:

I own a 3.5" disk drive (parallel) and was wondering how it would be possible to attach it to my C64.

Also, what's the difference between parallel and serial?

Andrew Robinson, Darlington, Co Durham

It's not possible to attach a normal 3.5" disk drive to a C64 without internal modifications and a clever interface type thing, interestingly enough IBM are making just such a device - a 3.5" disk drive with a built-in interface. If comes complete with eight games, a disk operating system and costs just £98. And we'll be reviewing it as next month's Inside Info!

Dear Inside Info:

I'm writing to ask whether it is possible to run a C64 console or cart game through an Amiga 500.

David Langley, Lymington, Suffolk

It's funny you should mention it, but there's actually a C64 emulator program now available for the Amiga, that makes it act just like a normal C64. It's shareware, but if you like it and pay the registration fee (about $50 in Canadian money), they'll even send you a sticker to connect your disk drive to an Amiga. I haven't seen it yet, so I don't know how well it works, but my fellow South-Island 'Bram' 'Bovis' on CP's editor mag Public Domain, says it's slow, but still quite a bit of commercial C64 software. If you're interested, you can get more details from Vally PD, PO Box 16, Petrean, Co Durham, 080 1502. Or telephone 091 637 1190.

THE INSIDE INFO '92 SURVEY

Now inside info is all 'ground up', having reached the ripe old age of 18, we'd really like to know what you think of it - is it hot or not? Is there something you'd like to see explained in print? Is there some special utility you'd like to see on the tape? Even if you're not really a techy person, we'd like to know what you think about CP's games-free zone. And everything you say will be read and thought lots about by Chief Tech-Head Paul Lyons and Supreme Editor Being Throated 'Teasy' Webbs.

To give you even more reason to tell us what you think, we will be putting three complete surveys out of the CP mailing and these lucky readers a year's free subscription! Or an extra year, if you've already a subscriber!

Just fill in the form (or a photocopy of it) and send it in to Inside Info Survey, Commodore Forum, 30 Monmouth Street, Bath, Avon, BA1 1BN.

The jeep and helicopter rush towards some enemies. And not even a fly "blastoff" to their favorite charities will save me...

SILKWORM

Tronix, £9.99

Who'd want to buy a game about a stupid worm. I thought as I headed up this offering, I'd imagine my surprise when it turned out to be a horizontal scrolling shoot-em-up which dumps you in a jeep or helicopter (or both, if you get a stunt to play too). The idea is that you then shoot at tanks, missiles, other ropes and anything else that moves (and looks expensive).

It's Valentine's Day. This of course means nothing to Roger, who's indoors playing Championship Wrestling. But to his horror he gets a card. Even worse, it's from a girl! Urgh! Understandably outraged, he practises armlocks and strangleholds. He might need them.

It's a fine idea, I must say. And it plays rather superbly. No expense has been spared to make this a smooth, quick and vastly enjoyable game, especially if you play it with a pal (you can also ask him to contribute to the electricity you're using).

The sprites are a little small, but Silkworm is so smooth and addictive that you can overlook this graphics-related misfeature. If you desire a great shoot-em-up and you're sensible enough to restrict your spending to under four quid, then Silkworm is the game for you. Time to crack into the Christmas money, friends and neighbours!

As if peace please, comradely expurgated to the career districts are long enough for my opponent to pulp me into a slingsy soufflé. I've got his later by sending him down on my back.

SILKWORM
 Climb into the helicopter or the jeep and only wait when damaging those enemies. Silkworm is more fun than finding yourself vomit on the beach (I exaggerate, of course, but it is rather good).

CHAMPIONSHIP WRESTLING

Rick, £3.99

Very useful skill: wrestling. It can get you out of all sorts of trouble (as I, er, found out this month, sadly.) So I always welcome a cheapie game which allows me to test my half-season holds and body slamming techniques.

There are eight arenas, all with slight names, and you can set any number of them as humans or the computer. You can either hold a tournament, where everybody tries to squash everybody else's faces in a series of bouts, or you can play one-off matches (saving time and valuable electricity).

The game is a wee bit slow, but there are so many moves you can pull that this gives you time to prepare for the next bone-splitting, head-mashing attempt.

If you're into this form of rather unexciting violence, Championship Wrestling is worth a look. It's not up to WWF standard, but neither does it cost over a fiver. Remember the Frames' ancient family motto: big, single not large!

CHAMPIONSHIP WRESTLING
 A bit jerky, but then again people have said exactly that to me. Championship Wrestling is a good way to entertain seven friends. It works out to 48.87% each, so you can even charge them for the cost of the cassette too!

FRAME RATE 76%

It's carefully aimed for the cheapest hardware combination you can buy. I mean, the price of military hardware these days...

XENON

From, $3.99

Two dangerous vehicles for the price of one? Can't go wrong, can you? In Xenon, you're got to scroll your way up a screen filled with nasty aliens, gun towers and big metal things. Sounds tough. Well, nothing's too tough for your fine, mighty reviewer (except on necessary expenditure), so I cracked into the game with gusto.

You must swing between driving the tank (which must avoid ground obstacles) and the jet fighter (which must avoid anything flying through the air). The skill is juggling these two modes while still blasting away at all possible targets.

The big bonus with Xenon are the collectibles. There are dozens of wonderful weapons, special shields and purposeful plots to grab, and every time you get another one, you're the hot hero. Yes, I like this sort of game.

The thing about Xenon isn't particularly fast, but it's very smooth and is set at just the right addictiveness and difficulty levels. You'll keep coming back to it when you should be doing your homework or going to bed or whatever (which could cause a few family-related probs).

XENON

If you're in the market for a good vertical-scrolling shoot-'em-up, it's time to ignore your conscience, screw up your savings and extract $3.99 from the shelves to buy Xenon.

BUBBLE DIZZY

CodeMasters, $3.99

The CodeMasters has been going to work on an egg for years now (and the money is been rising in for those little Gattings, the swims, but, knowing what they're on to is a good thing. CodeMasters are trying to keep Dizzy on the ball with this latest game.

Dizzy starts on a pirate ship, gets chucked off the plank, and falls to the bottom of the sea. The only way up and back into sunlight is to jump on the bubbles which rise from the sea-bed. The bubbles keep bursting even though they're underwater and it's impressive, or so that bloated sponge Thiff

That silly next has again my immense admiration. I used to get an odd sense of euphoria in order to prove to the world that I'm a hard dude who wouldn't be cowed down by a Valentine's card. He can forget about a note, too.

left me), so you must jump from them onto ledges and onto more rising bubbles.

The idea isn't bad, but when you actually get into the game, it's, er, rather boring. After a while, you'll get the hang of it and will complete level one. Level two is a different set of ledges and stuff, but the game is the same. Level three is more of the same too.

Bubble Dizzy is a bit like a sub-game, really — it's just not exciting enough to be a $3.99 game in its own right. If, like me, you're allergic to being in water anyway, you won't be too impressed.

That egg (that floats to the surface suffering from the bends) after he runs out of oxygen. The only cure is to stick him in a microwave and thank in to hell for ever for a day or two.

BUBBLE DIZZY

Bit of a shame, this one it's afraid. You'd be better off keeping Dizzy on dry land and letting your bubble for to eating Gattings before bedtime.

GEMINI WING

From, $3.99

I'm not a great believer in astrological star signs. I've always thought that one fourth of the world's population can't all meet a tall dark stranger all on the same day. So Gemini Wing didn't sound promising, I thought.

Imagine my surprise then, when Gemini Wing turned out to be a high speed, vertical scrolling, blaster not completely unlike Xenon. The difference is that in Gemini Wing you've got to take out loads of annoying little aliens who fly around the screen at random, giving you endless grief of a explosive nature.

Gemini Wing plays far faster than Xenon, but doesn't have quite the same polished look or in-game feel. There are tonnes of the usual motley collection of pick-ups, and as you chug along proving in eight directions as the fancy takes you, nicely steam scenery drifts past. I found this incredibly distracting, and couldn't even see many of the so-called aliens I was supposed to be blasting away at.

Collect these another things. They're three-way missiles, shields, and capable of making a real mess of the BlackMages's corridors over the road at number 33.

So, no hearties, Gemini Wing doesn't score as highly as Xenon. It's still not bad, though. And if you're a millionaire shoot-'em-up fan, you could even buy both (shoot, homo).

GEMINI WING

Fast, action-packed blaster, but it's difficult and the backgrounds are distracting. Still, better than being blown from a tree in the South Atlantic.

Best economical, I put 3 extra dollars into its wheels this racer and managed a constant 9 miles per gallon at a constant 40 mph.

CONTINENTAL CIRCUS

Trucks, £3.99

Racing cars - that's the name of this game (actually it's Continental Circus - 88), and it's to the world's top tracks that we go in order to drive them.

CC is a rather spiffy 3D cut-of-view job, which adds you having to both beat a certain number of the other racers and also a rather tight time limit. Your car has two (count 'em) gears and makes a sound like a fast mixer with two, er, gears.

The action is nicely shown, if taking a little dated view, and everything sure do feel as a wheel with a sticky bit.

The game starts off being quite a toughie, and only gets worse. BR33 is the first track and you'll be lucky to beat that one the first day (I couldn't, but I'm too young to drive).

If you're as mean as the, you won't have bought a full-price diving game. It might be time for you to get hold of one now, though, and if you do, Continental Circus won't disappoint you (unless you're expecting 4098 colours and 12-channel stereo sound). It's a bit tough, though. You won't beat this one in the first sitting, I can assure you of that.

Might I never expected her to sell round 8000 by the time of a couple. Reverse Indian (last) inspired me as my G&L. I tried to abandon change her, but she's about really had professional train top. She actually blocked my public's attention, grabbed my ankles and bounced my head repeatedly off the wall. Oh, and Buy top. I'd start and make your mind against them now!

NINJA WARRIORS

Trucks, £3.99

Right. Time for more industrial-scale violence. You play a single who, approved at the world (and let's face it, aren't we all?) has taken to fleeing from left to right and killing the hordes of army personnel, cops, police marksmen and soldiers that get in his way.

Being not overly tall and muscular, his games what give me an in-between physical superiority. And Ninja Warriors is one of the best I've seen at a sensible price (ie. so cheap as to pass).

The sprites are big and colourful, and everything is as quick and smooth as a gut punch at bedtime. It's also possible to get gently far into it on the first attempt. Like I keep saying, if you've been fluged enough not to have bought any level 'em-ups at the full price, it's time to read the Swiss bank account for the money for this fun. The only thing is that if you're an expert at games like this, it could be a tad easy. And therein's nothing worse than wasting four huge pounds on something you finish in a day or two.

CONTINENTAL CIRCUS

There's thrills and spills aplenty on the T1 every night. Or you could play Continental Circus and make your own fun too. It's not a bad racing game.

As I used to be the shops to stock up on new shoes and otherwise, it jumps and naturally multimodal robot thing (jumped me, I ignored it, and went on and beat the Mrs. Shindigway of number 2).

Thanks a lot! Even Ninja have a bit of a grade with beauty around military vehicles. The solution is to keep on the front and stick in the face of the commander when he starts it out to take a peek at you.

NINJA WARRIORS

Action-packed, fun, exciting, fast and slick. That's what people say about me, but I think these words apply equally to Ninja Warriors too. Try connecting the International Monetary Fund to stomp up the deck.

JEEPERS, CREEPERS

I WANT TO WIN SOME CREATURES

Thalesus are so chuffed with their current Coloss Creatures 2 that they've gone a little crazy! To celebrate the launch of their cracking creation they are giving away everything but the family silver!

Creatures 2 is destined to become a computer classic, and you can be one of only six people in the entire Galaxy to own a signed 82 (an impressively huge 100mm x 284mm) framed print of Cliff Pugh's original 'See artwork' - just think of the Antiqua Resurrection potential in 2032! And if that isn't enough, 50 runners up will get copies of the awesomely good, game packed compilation The Arts and Arts 2, which includes the particularly spifty Creatures 1 and just about everything else ever published by Thalesus. To try for your copy of the Creatures 2 compilation, just answer those three questions.

1) The full name of the hero in Creatures 2 is Clyde!

- Reddon
- Reddodative Isarage
- ReddyBe

2) The Commodore Format 'programmers diary' on the development of Creatures 2 was called:

- The Clyde Guide
- A treatise chronoculating the technical development of a home computer game by John and Steve Woodside, with specific regard for code and design.
- The Gettysburg Address

3) The programming team who wrote Creatures 2 is called?

- Don't Ask Me to Do That
- Apex
- Fatality Korral

Send your answers along with your address on a postcard (or the back of a sealed envelope) to: Jeppers Creapers, I want to win some Creatures Competition, Commodore Format, 28 Monmouth St, Bath, Avon. The closing date is 31st March 1992.

Oh, and employees of Future Publishing, Thalesus and anybody with the middle name Mithrasius are not allowed to enter the competition. Sorry, Mitty - the editor's decision is final.

PSSST! DO YOU WANT TO WIN A SECRET?

On top of the rather spifty main comps, there's a special secret prize for all the creative Creatures fans out there. Thalesus want you to design the ultimate Creatures luxury screen. To enter, just send in a picture of the luxury screen, complete with a short explanation of its particular points and pitfalls. This, in addition, will show Clyde needs to take in order to save his seemingly doomed crew.

Don't worry if you're not a bloody crazy wizard as the judge, Thalesus boss-man David Brock, is looking for the most fantastic design and not the 'fastest artwork'! He's keeping 'artists' about the nature of the prize, but you can be sure that he's got something really special in store for the winner. Send these entries in to us at Clyde To The Rescue Comps, Commodore Format, 28 Monmouth Street, Bath, Avon, and we'll pass them on to Thalesus - after we've had a peek! Good luck and be evil!

Above is an example taken from Creatures 2 that we've put together to give you an idea of what Thalesus are looking for.

A creature is trapped below ground in a squeezing machine. This fantastic device is powered by a cycling monster. There are three monsters and a bomb above ground is help Clyde. To save his mate he must:

- 1) Jump on top of the hill and over the lake, shuffling the bomb so he goes.
- 2) Push the bomb down off of the platform edge and into the hole.
- 3) Light the fallen bomb and push it down into the roof of the cave. When it blows up the roof'll fall down the hole and shuffle carefully forward.
- 4) Shoot the lever behind the monster (this stops the press and frees the monster's legs from its stand).
- 5) Jump the cycling device as he rushes forward to rescue his mate. Bingo!

ARCANE ADVENTURE

RPG stands for Role Playing Game, but what does that stand for? Arch games mage Sean Masterson delves into the game-play dungeon to find out what makes RPGs special, and why every gamer should check one out.

Does the phrase RPG on the side of a game box inspire an "Aaaaagh!" This game is going to be boring. No parallel scrolling. No cheap ring modulated sound effects. No test of my untested snoot! am-up skills. Hmm, I wonder if Atelier Amuring 4 is out yet... sort of reefer? Then you could be missing out on some of the best games ever written for the G44. Testing your imagination to the limit, a good roleplaying game contains the same ingredients as a good film: heroes, villains, fantastic locations, subplots, inns, traps and treasure. RPGs have an edge over movies though, the plot is yours to construct and the game's next move depends entirely on how you play.

IN THE BEGINNING

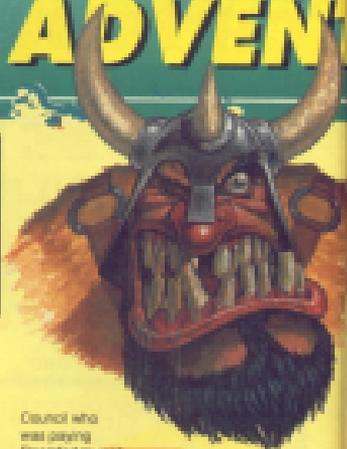

RPGs always begin with what game designers call a scenario. For instance, a game could kick off by saying that the evil hobgoblin chieftain Doornat Septimanager is terrorizing the outlying villages of the Western Marches, and a hero's being offered by the village council for his capture. You'll be able to visit the scattered villages in order to find out what had happened and there might be clues as to where Doornat's rackets are hitting out. Naturally, you'll have to choose which village to visit first. A RPG gives you the freedom to make such choices. Equally, you'll have the choice of ignoring the villages and hunting the warlord immediately (although this would be tougher without clues). The point is, the shape of the forthcoming adventure depends totally on your choice of actions, not on some arbitrary placement of obstacles or foes.

Champion of Kryon. The best of the best!

There may be another mini-adventure, a kind of subplot to unravel, along the way. And you might find that yet another adventure awaits, once you have defeated Doornat. What if there was someone on the Marches Council who was paying Doornat to raid certain villages so that this villain could assume power himself? The incriminating evidence could appear after the showdown with the hobgoblins, but how would you smother the traitor? This could be an even more-difficult task than dealing with Fary's rangers in the first place. A roleplaying game's equivalent of comparing the first level in a shoot-'em-up: the showdown with the hobgoblins would have to be like facing the end-of-level boss. As the plot thickens, the fact that your mugging skill isn't being tested matters less and less.

In RPGs, fights stress thought above action.

FIRST RONNIE

Role playing games don't just differ in plot. Most RPGs allow you to decide what kind of character you're going to play. In First Samurai, you have to be a historical warrior. In Rolling Ronnie, you have to be a geek on skates and there's nothing you can do about it until you return to your senses and switch off the machine. (But in a role-playing game you can decide to be a warrior, a thief, a sorcerer, or any kind of fantastic character.)

Your character isn't usually described in terms of appearance but by attributes such as strength, dexterity and intelligence.

ATURES!

These have a direct bearing on your character's abilities within the game. Strength relates to fighting skill, dexterity to dexterity tasks, intelligence to spell casting, and so on. Whatever you choose to be, whatever game you play, you'll find that as time goes on, your character progresses. He (or she) gradually becomes a better warrior, wizard or samurai. And as your character grows more powerful, encounters become more and more challenging.

Hardwood maze action and thought brilliantly, making it an ideal RPG for beginners.

PARTYTIME!

In most RPGs you play a group of characters called a party. The party can consist of between two and eight characters, ideally a combination of the types available. In the pencil and paper roleplaying games on which computer RPGs are based, each character is controlled by a different player and each would depend on everybody else's unique abilities, thereby encouraging teamwork. In computer roleplaying games, the number of characters forces the player to consider the best combination of skills for the group as a whole, adding yet another dimension to the game. Which is far more authentic than just one supreme character who's capable of everything: spells, throwing, healing and everything else! The detail that goes into the character and the freedom you're given as a player are the reasons for the lack of lousy graphics or effects. Roleplaying games rely on fairly simple sights and sounds, because they're so packed with everything else. It's a trade-off. What you get is a game that lasts far longer than any other kind. And what you get at the end isn't a score, but a tale of high adventure which you alone have crafted. And what's better, it's graphically superb seven day wonder, or a more sparse, month-long magical mystery tour if you don't create?

Black Rogers, 994495 Gold, £35.95 disk only

Black Rogers received a new lease of life in 1988, when C&A brought him out of the cyborgic freezer to face the PNM Corporation. Generate a party of robot characters and save our species in an adventure that spans the cold depths of interplanetary space. The best space opera on the C&A, it spans six disk sides and can be played with TSR's pen and paper RPG of the same name. Complex but immensely challenging with months of playability.

US Gold publish the largest series of computer RPGs, using their licence to release official versions of the game that started the hobby called roleplaying, Dungeons & Dragons. This, the best effort, is based on the hugely popular Dragonance rags. The game's massive, the plot complex and the opportunity to replay unmatched. Each game comes with detailed instructions, adventure backgrounds and an easy to use joystick-based menu system that speeds play along.

RATING ★★★★★

Gauntlet III, US Gold, £19.99 cassette, £15.99 disk

Though only a roleplaying game in the roughest sense, it offers a choice of eight characters, eight colourful and imaginative fantasy worlds which combine arcade joystick-wielding with fully fledged RPG overtones. This is the kind of game that converts shoot-'em-up fans to roleplaying and roleplaying fans to shoot-'em-up. You can't really complain about that.

RATING ★★★★★

Think beat-'em-ups are getting a bit boring nowadays. There have been so many in the last few months that it's time for some other game format to take over.

So starts Final Fight's a beat-'em-up. Oh dear, it's not a very good beat-'em-up either. You play Hopper, whose daughter has been kidnapped by ruffians. You're got to get her back. Cue violence.

All you need to do is keep high kicking repeatedly and the enemy can't get near you. Using this method I finished the game on the first sitting without even trying very hard.

So basically when we've got here is a bit of a team game. Oh, sure, some of the baddies are tougher than others, but because you can't be hit as long as you keep kicking, it's just a matter of waiting for them to die.

FINAL FIGHT

Game here.

Why should I see you bleed those whippers and I'm telling your father when he gets home. See if I don't.

You set off scooting slowly along a street when two bad guys appear. You punch, kick and headbutt them until they die. Some more walk on and you smash them in as well. This continues until you've reached about ten streets. Then you scoot a little bit further along the level and start doing all the jumping and kicking and such again.

Other weapons are available, both to you and your assistants. You can feel them lying around on the floor, or behind buildings and stuff. But if you ignore them and just keep kicking you'll still win.

The graphics aren't much to brag about. The game is not very quick and the bosses don't actually hit their targets.

The head-kicking scenes even in such narrow places as churches. That battle with the guy in the box. All that said your fun.

making the action look depressing. Where, there are six levels of this boring mess, and backgrounds apart, they're at exactly the same. You have to fight the same character time after time. Then, if you can be bothered to keep hitting the fire button to talk, you eventually reach the big bad boss. Avoid his bullets. Use a few high kicks and he's dead.

Final Fight doesn't have anything to recommend it really. The graphics are nice, there's no gameplay and it drags on and on, wasting hours of your young life. Fly, because it was quite good as an arcade coin-op.

INTERNATIONAL NINJA RABBITS

It's not another beat-'em-up! This one is the sequel to Ninja Rabbits, which sold in vast amounts on the C64. So is it as good?

Instead of wandering around an English country setting, you travel all over the world. You'll meet Guardian Angels, Demanded Pandas, Italian Things and Chinese Dragons. They've all been affected by pollution and have turned nasty. No, don't laugh - it could happen, what with global warming, the ozone hole and the whitehouse effect. (It's greenhouse - it's).

Anyway, just like NRT, these crazed animal dudes wander on from the right and you punch and kick them until they fall over. If your carrot-strength bar at the bottom of the screen runs out before this, then you fail over and lose a life. And that's about it as far as the combat goes.

Just like Ninja Rabbits 1, you can go underground and climb ladders back up. The reason for this isn't given, but it means you've got more screens to fight and screens to explore.

Scarcely ever found that subtle to being broken up by an extra point.

To add some spice to the proceedings, you get objects dropping from the sky. These take the form of little black circles, which don't do you any good if they land on you, surprise bonuses, which have various beneficial effects if you can catch them and, a sort of dragon thing which you have to dash. It's like you, you lose a life.

And that's what happens, it's similar in feel and graphics to NRT, with wacky (and a bit overpowering) new backgrounds and more screens. But the combat isn't particularly fast or exciting and you keep fighting the same characters. It's a pity that I didn't find it very interesting or addictive at all, and wouldn't return to it in a hurry.

Even Castleblitz must finally be getting tired of that eternal egg. Deep. In the last few months they've come up with several new characters to impress and delight us: Seymour the slug, G'd the elephant, and now Big Nose the, um, cowman. And what do they're all in common? They're all cute and they're all replacements for old Mr. Handboiled.

Anyways, Big Nose has been caught up in a time warp (great idea guys). He's been whisked off from some Palisades (read: a large and majestic modern-day American city, New York, in fact, And pretty amazing about it he is too.

What's slightly worse, longer. Let's look at the ten-fingered chap has brought along with him an infinite supply of rocks to throw at any honest citizens of the 'Big Apple' who try to get in his way. One shot will kill any of the men, as well as putting out a fire.

There are loads of collectables around the place as well. Big Nose has discovered a penchant for hamburgers (something he longer. What we have here is a large platform game set on and around a building site. Why it's a building site is not very clear, except that it makes an excellent setting for a platform game.

Big Nose has got three main enemies to contend with: policemen, construction workers and fires. The first two wander up to our sticky chum at inebriated times, and if they manage to touch him he's dead. The first travel back and forth on many of the platforms. You're dead if they touch you too.

You're usually safe on the ladders, so they generally provide a safe place for a respite.

What! That construction worker wants to have a word with me. I'll just respond that I haven't yet developed a complete enough brain to understand language. Or I would just repeat him.

Here are the animals you've made it your mission to rescue. The game is unclear about whether they're from the past or not, or whether they're once kidnapped from a zoo.

BIG NOSE'S AMERICAN ADVENTURE

16th century Jack Sylvester (Stallone).

Now, what if all falls down to it this - do you like platform games? If so, then you'll find Big Nose challenging, big and satisfying once you get into the swing of it. The game is rather cute, with biggest sprites and bubbly characters. But don't let that fool you. There are some terrible-life that will take all your platforming skills to handle and beat.

The only things wrong with it are that the ladders require you to have placed-perfect positioning before you are able to go up them and the character is sometimes too sensitive, jumping twice when it should only have jumped once.

But, with practice, you can overcome these little hiccups. And so, once again, the Cowles seem to have come up with the right formula - a stupid plot involving a ridiculous character, plenty of gameplay across a huge area and a few taxing problems along the way. It's frustrating and it drive you mad (especially the tough bits you can't do for the first 177 times). You can get hooked on Big Nose's American Adventure.

RoboCop falls to his knees and begs the Mega-Great not to attack his head again.

RoboCop's on-board computer (top right) tells him which punk to the Mega-Great. Several more simply mean "killed them all".

Hmm. So we move on to the third part of the Max-Murphy saga. All you basically need to know is that a new, shining Detroit called Delta City has been built by the OCP Organisation, who, being nice and mean, have installed lots of battles in it. If you're really into plot structures and stuff, read the Odes. RoboCop 3 has a Plot That? box elsewhere on the page. Or, better

ROBO

Every time RoboCop cleans up Detroit, somebody comes along and makes it all messy again. It seems to be a never-ending task for the poor metal guy, blasting punks and destroying corrupt organisations. Still, I'll bet the pay is good and he doesn't have to work at weekends!

still, go and see the movie. Anyway, the point is Delta City's completely packed with bad-dies. Guess who's got to go and root them all out? Yep. You've got it in one.

The game, true to all licences, doesn't have a huge amount in common with the film's plot, but follows it roughly as you play through the five levels.

If you're a fan of Odesa's previous RoboCop-based efforts, there will be much here to make you feel at home. But it isn't just a case of the same game repeated. Oh dear me, no. For example, the first level is a sort of Q*WERTY-style sideways-scrolling blaster, which involves you moving your computer-assisted gunnights around the streets and targeting splatterpunks, then blasting them.

You're going to see a lot of splatterpunks in this game. These are the guys who inhabit the city, carry guns and hate cops (especially ones made of metallic substances). You can move your sights up and down, and the screen left and right. The idea is that you've got to take out all the dangerous guys first, before they stop running around in a panic and start firing their shotguns at you. Every time you've hit it sets into your efficiency percentage.

It's a fast, accurate weapon, with your sights whizzing back and forth as you follow the guidance given at the top right of the screen, which tells you where the nearest bad-dies are. If you're clever you'll find the perfect height to position the sights, thus taking out bad-dies in the foreground and those dithering around in the background in one sweep. This makes things both easier and rather more boring. You can just whizz from side to side, bring rapidly off the time, and everyone will soon die.

Also available to pick up that you've got to shoot are Repair bonuses. Collect these and you can get yourself fixed up at the end of the level. If you can get four or five you should be 100% ready for the next attack wave. Collecting them means you've got to move the sights up and down more, which means you can't leave them in the central perfect position for punk-killing.

Level two is traditional RoboCop fare. You enter a rocket motor factory-type industrial place and walk from left to right (again

RoboCop 3 - the levels

With five large levels of robot-related mayhem, all we can say is "Thank goodness it's on a cartridge. Multi-loading RoboCop 3 would have been a nightmare on cassette.

Level One. It's an Q*WERTY-style blaster. But you can get infinite ammo and a shrewd targeting system.

Level Three. That jet packs a nice and useful shield. Finally, some excitement. Even get hold of the things from.

Level Five. Back on the office. RoboCop's all come along. RoboCop's all come along. RoboCop's all come along.

Level Two. In the factory, RoboCop's all come along. RoboCop's all come along. RoboCop's all come along.

Level Four. The jet packs a nice and useful shield. Finally, some excitement. Even get hold of the things from.

The Repair Bonus. RoboCop's all come along. RoboCop's all come along. RoboCop's all come along.

Splatterpunks walk around, trying to avoid your fire. But the Mega-Great's got plans to make sure! The targeting system has you locked on.

COP 3

Oh dear. These gentlemen seem to have picked the wrong person to have a fight with. RoboCop is in a mean mood, too.

Robo has a face-to-face chat with his ally. He explains that, though he's smaller and not as well armed, he's got fed up on his side.

from side-view) and blast everybody you see on various platforms. As well as splatterpunk, you'll come across robots. What these are (and what they do) isn't made clear, but if you treat them as normal baddies and kill them all you can't get wrong.

You can fire in eight directions, so as long as you're quick you should wipe out most of the baddies before they do you any serious damage.

Making things a bit (ah, at night, a bit) harder are the acid baths and moving conveyor belts you have to get past. This adds a bit of fun and game-play to level two - you've got to contend with all manner of traps while still trying to blow the various nasties away. Luckily there are extra weapons (and more repair bonuses) available.

In level three, you've nicked a jet pack from the factory. Other baddies have jet packs of their own, so you get into some fast and furious air-to-air combat, swooping, diving and shooting like some felled ace (er, I don't really think so - Ed).

Kill everyone and you get to meet an armoured tank. This is where your missiles come in useful. Missiles? Yes, you should have picked them up about five screens back. Avoid the tank's fire and blow holes in it using your torpedoes, spunky and rather high-tech guided weaponry. Hooryay!

RoboCop must then walk back the way he's just from, heading for the OCP levels. More splatterpunk get in his way (and his sights). And a massive helicopter swoops down to take a few pot-shots at young Mr Murphy. If you can get your metal mate to the entrance of the tower, there's an ED 209 waiting there to turn him into iron-filings.

Delta City's completely packed with baddies. Guess who's got to go and root them all out?

Does RoboCop 3 have a plot then?

For those who can't wait for the film (which should be out in the next couple of months), here's a brief look at the plot.

Right. The action takes place in Detroit, which is a large, dirty city in the USA. The major organisation here is a company called OCP. And it is rotten to the core.

In RoboCop 1 and 2 OCP built a shiny new part of Detroit called Delta City. This was supposed to be crime-free and happy (a bit like Milton Keynes). But it hasn't worked out that way (a bit like Milton Keynes as well). ED 209 robots are posted all over the place, splatterpunk roam free, pulling serials off cars and throwing stones, and it's generally not nice. Even RoboCop is having a spot of trouble there.

So in step the wily and cunning Japanese (who have been invited by OCP) and, therefore, are incredibly corrupt as well. They bring a load of Oromo Ninja Robots in place and start taking over. PoliceCop doesn't like this, so he joins the resistance movement against it and the violence starts.

Papcom, Minnesota and King Games are involved in the foyer, by the way.

If by some miracle you survive all this mayhem, it's time for level five. Our tin drum must fight his way to the top of the tower, by battling Oromo Ninja Robots. Never heard of 'em? You should have. They're robotic ninja bots, um, the small sinister form of Oromo (just down the road from Singapore).

It's impossible to colour the Oromo Ninjas. They close in and attack you with their stilets, causing massive damage. All you can do is keep firing and hope they die soon.

Get past them and there's another ED 209. Kill him and hey presto! You've won and can go home for tea, muffins and a recharge.

RoboCop 3 is a boggle. It's got that magnificent level will give you many tedious hours of gameplay before you can beat them. Levels two, four and five are, it must be said, rather similar to those of its predecessors - with plenty of badies, lots of shooting and slow walks from left to right across the screen.

The whole thing is certainly high quality, though. There's an awful lot going on - and it's all got good graphics and plenty of gameplay. Perhaps not earth-shattering, but certainly great to settle down with for a few hours.

One thing - RoboCop 3 won't be easy to finish. It'll be surprised if the whole game can be completed in a few days. There are weeks worth of shooting hours. This has got to be good news for hardened players in the long-term, but it's quite annoying when you feel beat up and play, especially if you wanted to lowered into the game gently.

CF 19 - THE HIPPY'S REVENGE!

Don't miss next month's issue of Commodore Format, in which we'll be taking you on a magical fantasy tour into Jeff Miller-land. Yes, the legendary games writing hippy has given us two of his greatest games for the Powerpack cassette and scores 'tired about matters' C&A in a spiffy, special interview.

Joining these on the Powerpack will be two top game demos, and joining the tape on the cover will be a rather nutty free badge. I bet if you think we've gone mad in this month, just wait until CD-ROM when we're going away on an excellent trip to Japan (don't hang on).

The games, the demos and the badge would be worth getting the mag for even if all the pages were blank. But of course they won't be (they'll better not be). And they will be crammed with everything that Commodore fans need to know. Things like: Tim Howells' in-depth analysis of all of the best utilities, widgets and window-type programs available on the C&A PC software - yes, even more free software!

On the review front we'll be grabbing all the best games available, putting on our Powerpak trousers and playing them until they break, then telling you how they are. You know which ones are top of the heap - and which ones are at the bottom there will be that Roger Frames game, that Mighty Boke thing, that Andy 'Carnabusters' Paterson's jump and Paul 'Sedler' Lyons' Snake but in fact it looks it will be another full-packed, full-filled issue of the galaxy's love C&A mag.

WIN A ROGER FRAMES 'URGH! GIRLS!' T-SHIRT!

You can have one of these special edition T-shirts, lovingly hand-crafted out of finest polyester-cotton mix. All you have to do is write your own caption to this scene. It must be 36 words or less, and it's GOT to make us laugh. It's a tough challenge, 'cos here at CF we're a one-woman band.

But the prize is worth it - a gorgeous garment (size L) as worn by Princess Diana.

Roger Frames (he's too stingy to buy his own clothes) and Neil Armstrong (under his spacesuits)

Simply write the caption (in block capitals) on a postcard or stick-down envelope, put your name and address on it and send it to the following address - I Can Write Captions Better Than The CP Body Anyway, Commodore Format, 29 Monmouth St, Bath, Avon, BA1 2DL. It'll get there before March 31 1992, and it's funny enough, you could see it in the mag, and you'll receive the best item of clothing it's possible for a human being to own.

MAKE SURE YOU GET WHAT'S COMING TO YOU - CF DELIVERED EVERY MONTH!

Please Mister (or Misses) newsgang, kindly reserve my copy of Commodore Format each month, starting with the January issue, on sale from Thursday 10th March 1992. Ta' very much!
